William J. Alexander letters have transcripts.

Family letters have transcripts.

Jacob Gould Schurman was born May 22, 1854 on Prince Edward Island. He was Professor of Philosophy at Acadia College and Dalhousie College; Cornell University's Sage Professor of Philosophy, 1886-92, and President, 1892-1920; President of the first U.S. Philippine Commission, 1899; U.S. Minister to Greece and Montenegro during the Balkan Wars; and was a diplomat involved with foreign policy making in China, the Far East, and Germany.

Summary: The Schurman papers consist of correspondence, addresses, photographs, testimonials, diplomas, certificates, newspaper clippings, printed material, and records of the New York Constitutional Convention (1915). The material listed covers Schurman's career as a teacher, college president, and diplomat; the majority of the papers involve his role in national and foreign affairs. His views on American imperialism are reflected in letters to President McKinley, David Starr Jordan, David J. Hill, and John Hay. Schurman's later correspondence with Theodore Roosevelt, Charles F. Adams, Carl Schurz, Charles W. Eliot, and Sergio Osmeña show his interest in the Philippine Islands and their eventual independence. His active interest in politics, the problems of peace and the League of Nations, and his diplomatic activities are discussed in correspondence with William Howard Taft, Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root, Henry Lane Wilson, Henry Cabot Lodge, James Wadsworth, Joseph Foraker, and Frank Kellogg, including comments on Gustav Stresemann, German politics, and the German economy. Includes addresses and other material on Germany, the Far East, and U.S. foreign policy after Schurman's retirement in 1930. Also personal and family correspondence including letters to Professor William John Alexander about his thoughts on religion and his stay at Heidelberg University; letters to his daughters, Helen and Barbara; and transcriptions and photocopies of other letters.

Items about Jacob Gould Schurman Day (February 8, 1986) at the University of Heidelberg include a typescript copy of an address by John R. Silber, President of Boston University. Also, a cassette copy of a recording of Schurman's speech given when he departed as ambassador from Germany.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Cornell University Presidential Papers Project has been made possible by the gifts of the late Robert W. Purcell and L. William Kay III. Dale R. Corson provided the initial impetus and support while President of Cornell University (1969-1977), and has continued to actively promote the project. Through their interest and generosity, the preservation of these papers has been ensured, and their access and use have been enhanced.

The preservation microfilming and the production of this guide to the papers of Jacob Gould Schurman has particularly benefited from a grant from National Endowment for the Humanities, administered by the Research Libraries Group. This grant was part of a multi-institutional archival preservation project.

The conservation, arrangement, reformatting, and description of the Jacob Gould Schurman papers has been a project involving several persons working on different aspects of the collection: particular mention should be made of Anne Kenney and Barbara Berger and additional staff of the Preservation and Microfilm Unit of the Department of Preservation and Conservation. In the Division of Rare and Manuscript Collections, this work has been conducted under the general direction of Curator of Manuscripts Elaine D. Engst, with the assistance of C. Herbert Finch, Gould P. Colman, Margaret M. John, and Cheryl Rowland, and student assistants Lauren Brown, Catherine Tingey, Gina Haas, and Maura Jane Flood. However, primary credit for the production of this guide and for the continued success of the Presidential Papers Project should be given to Phil McCray, the Division's Technical Services Archivist.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

The Schurman family was of Dutch descent, and after flourishing in America, was forced to leave New York for Canada during the American Revolution due to its Loyalist sympathies. Born on May 22, 1854 in Freetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada, Jacob Gould Schurman early in his life demonstrated himself as a talented student, and he earned a series of scholarships. After attending the Prince of Wales College and Acadia College in Nova Scotia, he graduated in 1877 from the University of London with first class honors in mental and moral science, attending other lectures at Manchester New College on mental and moral philosophy and religion. He then studied philosophy for a year at Edinburgh while simultaneously studying in London, earning there an M.A. and D.Sc. with distinction, in 1878. Schurman then studied philosophy in Berlin, at Göttingen, and at the University of Heidelberg. While in Berlin he made the acquaintance of Andrew Dickson White, ambassador to Germany and president of Cornell University.

In 1880, Schurman returned to North America to become a professor of English literature at Acadia College. From 1882 to 1886 he was professor of English literature, rhetoric, and metaphysics at Dalhousie University.

From Dalhousie, Schurman moved to Cornell University, where he served as a professor of Christian ethics and moral philosophy. His work at Cornell came under the close sponsorship of University Trustee and benefactor Henry W. Sage. When in 1890 Sage endowed the School of Philosophy, Schurman was appointed dean. Two years later, in 1892, as Charles Kendall Adams ended his troubled presidency of Cornell, Schurman became the third president of the university, serving until 1920.

Schurman's stewardship of Cornell was characterized by the extensive growth of the University's facilities, and its shift from a privately endowed institution to its current coalition of state and private funding. Throughout the twenty eight years of his presidency, Schurman was a proponent of academic freedom and an advocate of a generally liberal intellectual atmosphere on campus. During his presidency of Cornell, Schurman's scholastic pursuits and writings gradually moved away from philosophy and toward public and philanthropic endeavors. He became a presence in the national and New York State Republican Parties, identifying himself with Charles Evans Hughes, and it was thought that only his Canadian birth prevented him from seriously pursuing the presidency of the United States. While still president of Cornell, Schurman served as chairman of a commission examining social and political life in the Philippines in 1899. In 1912 and 1913, he was minister to Greece and Montenegro during the Balkan Wars. In America, he served as vice president of the New York State Constitutional Convention in 1915, and was a member of the New York State Food Commission in 1917-1918.

Upon leaving Cornell, Schurman went to Japan and the Far East, and then served as minister to China from 1921 to 1925, a time of war and great political upheaval. His pattern of finding himself in tumultuous times continued when he served as the American ambassador to Germany from 1925 to 1930. The honor that was due him for his efforts to rebuild the University of Heidelberg translated into popularity with the centrist forces in the Weimar Republic.

After a lectureship in California and additional travels and writing on international subjects, Schurman died in New York in 1942.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPRECIATION

Schurman and Heidelberg

February 8, 1986 was celebrated as Schurman Day at the University of Heidelberg. More than forty years after his death, Jacob Gould Schurman's influence was still strong at the university he had cherished as no other. Schurman arrived in Heidelberg 1878, and it was there that his intellectual foundations found their bearings. Philosophy in Germany in the late eighteenth century was a cultural passion. Innovation and intense activity in philosophical dialogue combined with the spectral setting at Heidelberg influenced Schurman forever. At the age of seventy three, in 1928, Schurman undertook to acknowledge his appreciation to the university by leading an effort to raise funds for its growth. In many of his speeches concerning the campaign, he acknowledged that he had gone to Heidelberg, in part, because there was no American university that could provide the kind of passionate liberal learning and moral philosophy for which he yearned. Schurman first obtained from John D. Rockefeller $200,000, and eventually raised almost $600,000. The monies were used to erect a new lecture hall, called the "New University." Schurman's passionate crusade of vigorous fundraising was a fervid moment in a otherwise decorous and sober public life. By an abiding association of Heidelberg and his own intellectual flourishing, sentiment combined with his usual practical skill to result in the marshalling of forces and finances to noble effect.

PROVENANCE

The letterbooks and correspondence of the Jacob Gould Schurman papers derive from the Office of the President of Cornell University, and for many years were in the care of Cornell University Library. Other correspondence, photographs, testimonials and social correspondence, and personal and family letters were transferred to the Department of Manuscripts and University Archives at various times from Schurman family members, notably including Judge Jacob G. Schurman, Lydia Schurman Godfrey, and G. Michael McHugh. Some Schurman letters have on several occasions over the years been transferred from the Department of Rare Books of Cornell University Library. Other contributors have included John R. Silber, and the Dewitt Historical Society of Ithaca, New York.

CONSERVATION AND PRESERVATION

A grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities made possible the microfilming of a large measure of the collection, excluding only some of the testimonials and ephemera. The letterpress copybooks (commonly referred to as letterbooks) were highly acidic and were in an advanced state of deterioration prior to the microfilming. Some pages were already illegible, or had faded altogether; in some cases the ink of Schurman's signature had caused perforation of the paper. For the letterbooks and clippings, the microfilm is the only extant form. Conventional preservation has included acid-free foldering and boxing, encapsulation, and the enveloping of photographs. The microfilm project was carried out by the Micrographic Preservation Service of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The papers of Jacob Gould Schurman include a wide variety of forms of material, and illustrate all aspects of a life that embraced scholarship, moral philosophy, university administration, family relations, politics, and diplomatic service. Schurman's presidency and ambassadorships are portrayed chiefly by his correspondence, which ranges from routine letters of university administration, to correspondence with several presidents of the United States and political leaders in the Philippines, Greece, China, and Germany. Family correspondence and photographs describe Schurman's travels and international ventures. An extensive clipping file chronicles Schurman's public life. Many of Schurman's philosophic, scholastic, and political writings, as well as his many speeches are included, both in draft and published form. His philanthropic and diplomatic life resulted in numerous testimonials, proclamations, and ephemera.

Major correspondents include United States Presidents William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Warren G. Harding, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, and Franklin D. Roosevelt; other correspondents include David Starr Jordan, Goldwin Smith, Carl Schurz, Charles Evans Hughes, Liberty Hyde Bailey, Elihu Root, Henry Cabot Lodge, Gustav Stresemann, William John Alexander, Andrew Carnegie, and Andrew Seth Pringle-Pattison.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

I. CORRESPONDENCE, 1877-1942

subseries A: Incoming Correspondence, 1879-1942

Letters received by Schurman range from the time of his student days abroad to notes of condolence received by family members upon his death in 1942. A few letters from Schurman to his recipients were retained in this file. Schurman's correspondents in this selection of letters include major philosophers, Presidents of the United States, family members, mentors, colleagues, students, admirers, and international diplomats and heads of state. The entire breadth of Schurman's professional careers and aspects of his family life are illuminated in these letters. His fundraising for the University of Heidelberg is clearly outlined, as well as his strong advocacy of Philippine independence, his close interest in German political affairs, and his personal relationship with several international scholars and political leaders. Other topics include the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and international anti-imperialist movements. Philippine, Chinese, Japanese, and German affairs figure prominently in these letters. The letters from his presidency refer to Cornell University administration and relations with the Trustees. Major correspondents include William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Warren G. Harding, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, David Starr Jordan, Sao-ke Alfred Sze, Gustav Stresemann, Frank H. Hiscock, Mynderse Van Cleef, Johannes Hoops, John D. Rockefeller, George Eastman, Sergio Osmeña, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Andrew Seth Pringle-Pattison.

The names listed for each folder are selected, and it is from these names that the index is derived; therefore, the letters of additional correspondents may be found in the series.

subseries B: Letterbooks (Outgoing Correspondence), 1889-1921

The letterbook copy impressions of letters written by Schurman as President of Cornell University profile both his personal character and formal manner in the execution of his administrative duties. A few letters of Charles Kendall Adams commence the letterbooks, and Acting Presidents are the signatories of several letters, notably T. F. Crane 1912 and 1913 when Schurman was serving as Ambassador to Greece, and Acting President Albert W. Smith in 1920 and 1921. Volumes 1-50 are letters signed by President Schurman; volumes 51-80 are letters signed by President Schurman's Secretary on behalf of the Office of the President.

In addition to the routine administrative subjects in the correspondence that devolved typically from the Office of the President of Cornell, topics include the 1903 typhoid epidemic in Ithaca, the establishment of the Carnegie Fund, the Leo Frank case, the Chi Psi fire, the construction of several new campus buildings, co-education and women students, African-American students on campus, and relations with Ithaca, New York. Other topics and concerns in the letterbooks include the president's relations with faculty, college benefactors, and presidents of other universities; also, fraternities and campus housing, foreign students, religious education, and Sage Chapel preachers. President Schurman made several appearances before alumni groups throughout the nation, and correspondence to this effect is plentiful. Cornell's relations with other universities, other associations of American universities, and educational societies are mentioned frequently. The element of publicity is suggested by Schurman's many letters to newspapers, magazines, and publishers. The university's role in World War I is shown as the president assists in the mobilization of resources and facilitates the university's preparation of its students to become soldiers; letters to the United States War Department are numerous. The development of the New York State College of Agriculture and the New York State Veterinary College at Cornell is referred to in many letters, as well as a proposed School of Forestry. Schurman corresponded frequently with Andrew Carnegie, and with officials of the Carnegie Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation. He also wrote many letters to immediate family members of Ezra Cornell.

Principal recipients of letters include Lyman Abbott, Liberty Hyde Bailey, Frank Barton, C. E. Bennett, Charles H. Blood, George Boldt, G. P. Bristol, J. E. Creighton, L. M. Dennis, W. A. Hammond, Frank H. Hiscock, Charles Evans Hughes, C. H. Hull, David Starr Jordan, A. T. Kerr, D. S. Kimball, Albert R. Mann, Veranus A. Moore, Jared T. Newman, Henry S. Pritchett, C. W. Pound, W. M. Polk, Robert F. Plummer, Theodore Roosevelt, H. W. Sackett, M. W. Sampson, A. W. Smith, Goldwin Smith, William Howard Taft, Frank Thilly, Mynderse Van Cleef, Andrew Dickson White, J. DuPratt White, W. F. Willcox, and C. V. P. "Tar" Young. In addition to these principal recipients, many additional names are listed in the index, including such important Cornell personalities as Willard Straight, E. B. Titchener, and Martha Van Rensselaer.

The index to letterbooks 1-50 is derived from the lists of correspondents kept by the President's staff that precede each volume. Letterbooks 51-80 were signed by the President's Secretary, and very often state matters of fact and perfunctory announcement, such as those making reference to the unavailability of the President and rejections of pleas, but several iterate the standing policy of Cornell University on various issues. An abstract of several key issues and topics follows the index to the letterbooks.

subseries C: Family Correspondence, 1877-1939

The collection contains letters exchanged among several members of the Schurman family, and includes handwritten transcripts of nearly illegible handwriting. As Schurman and members of his family traveled throughout the world, letters home provide a narrative account of both family and professional developments.

II. SCHURMAN ARTICLES, SPEECHES, AND BOOKS, 1875-1941

A collection of holographic, typescript, and printed versions of speeches delivered or published by Schurman, concerning the several themes of his career: religion and moral philosophy, education, and political developments in the Philippines, Japan, China, Greece, and Germany. The series includes many addresses and speeches given on campus during his presidency.

III. SUBJECT FILES, 1881-1940, [1986]

These files concern Germany, the Philippines, and China; also Cornell University, United States political affairs, international relations, and education. The series includes a few of Schurman's personal papers, financial information, and miscellaneous notes and drafts. Also, material relating to the February 8, 1986 "Schurman Day" at the University of Heidelberg, with articles about Schurman and his relationship with the University of Heidelberg by John Silber, Frank H. T. Rhodes, and Detlef Junker.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS (cont.)*IV. CLIPPINGS, 1892-1942

A comprehensive project involved members of the staff of the President's Office and others in chronicling Schurman's career. In some cases, a newspaper printing of a speech delivered by Schurman is the only copy of the speech to be found in the collection. Caricatures of Schurman as printed in newspaper stories are in the clippings, as well as an account of his touting of Charles Evans Hughes for the Presidency of the United States, and his vigorous promotion of Philippine independence. Similarly, affairs in other parts of the world, and Schurman's interest in or involvement with these, can be traced in the clippings.

V. PHOTOGRAPHS, 1867-1942

Four main topics are documented photographically: the Philippines, Germany, China, and Schurman personal and family life. Formal and casual photographs are included, each style tracing Schurman's path from university president to international ambassador.

VI. PROCLAMATIONS, PROTOCOL AND SOCIAL MATERIAL, TESTIMONIALS, AND EPHEMERA, 1878-1939

Many forms of material and documentation associated with Schurman and his personal and profession activities appear in this series, including many that document his fundraising for the University of Heidelberg and the reverent esteem for him that ensued. Examples of chinoiserie are included, and a temperance union scroll petition protesting Cornell student revelry and drunkenness on campus; notably, the first signatory of several hundred, is Liberty Hyde Bailey. Schurman family members' diplomas and Schurman's honorary degree diplomas are included. Other proclamations and diplomas acknowledge Schurman's many accomplishments and ventures, as well as his penchant for collecting art and other material representations of world culture.

RELATED COLLECTIONS

The National Archives holds microfilm of Schurman's diplomatic and ministerial correspondence from his ambassadorships and activities as minister and commissioner.

In addition to the following list of collections in the main or in large part concerned with Schurman, reference to and discussion about him can be found in numerous papers of Cornell University faculty members, administrators, trustees, students, and Ithaca residents. Morris Bishop's A History of Cornell is perhaps the most extensive account of Schurman's presidency and influence.
