MARCH 3, 1866.] HARPER'S WEEKLY.

HON. EZRA CORNELL.

HON. EZRA CORNELL, the founder of the Cornell University, was born in the town of Westchester, New York, January, 1807. His father and many remote ancestors were Quakers, and young EZRA was brought up under the teachings of this peculiar sect. His father, ELLIOTT CORNELL, was a justice by trade, but was a man of considerable culture and strongly-marked character. He attended the age of thirty-one, and reared a family of eleven children, of which EZRA was the oldest son. When the latter was about twelve years old the family went to De Ruyter, New Hampshire. At the age of sixteen EZRA and his younger brother wishing to attend school in the winter, obtained permission to do so if, by the next planting-time, they would have cleared off five acres of timber. They went to school, and the five acres were cleared.

In 1826, at the age of nineteen, Mr. CORNELL commenced life for himself. He left home and worked for two years as a carpenter and joiner in Syracuse and Homer, in this State. In 1828 he removed to Ithaca, which became his permanent residence. Here he commenced work in the machine-shop of a cotton-factory. In 1831 he married. His wife put him a Quaker he was expelled from that sect. In 1830 he purchased the right of a patent plow for Maine and Georgia, and traveled in those States to sell this improved implement of agriculture. It was about this time that Mr. CORNELL entered into the telegraph enterprise. The first method proposed for the construction of telegraph lines was to lay the wire under ground. Congress had appropriated $50,000 to lay such a line between Baltimore and Washington. Mr. CORNELL invented a plan for the special purpose of digging the trench for the wire and laying it at the same time. His project was a success; but he soon discovered that the wires were not perfectly insulated. Finally the whole scheme of an underground telegraph was given up, and the plan in use at the present time was adopted. Mr. CORNELL, from his contract for the New York and Buffalo line, made $6000, his first success in business. Since then, from various telegraphic contracts and speculations, he has realized several millions of dollars.

Mr. CORNELL first entered into political life in 1831, when he was elected to the Assembly of this State by the Union party. In 1833 he was elected to the Senate. But it is not Mr. CORNELL's political success or his large fortune with which we have to do in this sketch. It is the manner in which he has used his wealth that entitles him to the gratitude and esteem of his countrymen.

In 1838 he appropriated $100,000 to establish a free library in Ithaca. His recent splendid donation of $500,000 to establish a University in Ithaca illustrates his benevolence. He has also given his home farm of 200 acres as grounds upon which to build the University buildings. He has purchased for the institution the Jewett Paleontological Cabinet at Albany. The buildings will be erected a short distance northwest of Ithaca, on an elevation of 100 feet above Cayuga Lake. The State has appropriated for the support of Cornell University the income to be derived from the Lock Grant Fund, permanently invested for that purpose. The number of acres appropriated to this State is 200,000. This land scrip is now worth only fifty cents per acre. Mr. CORNELL has begun to buy in and locate this scrip, and hopes by thus increasing its value to secure for the University this primary endowment of $3,000,000.

CASTING AT THE ETNA WORKS.

On Saturday, the 24 of February, a cylinder for one of the largest marine engines in the world was cast at the Etna Works in this city. This enormous cylinder weighs 18 tons, is 13 feet 8 1/2 inches long, 110 inches in diameter, and 2 1/2 inches thick. It is five inches longer in diameter than any cylinder made for a paddle-wheel steamer having an engine

Dear Allan,

I'm disgusted with life. We just had a honid soc. quizz. My marks so far are C-, 60, 70, and today's didn't help any. And this ed. class is disgusting.

Mike is going home on Thurs. Even if I didn't have a soc. quizz on Friday I couldn't make it because I have so much to do for Thurs. that I wouldn't have a chance to pack. I'm so disgusted now, I'd like to leave tomorrow.

It's raining out. I hope it stops by tonight!

December 12, 1936

Sat. morning

Dearest, I love you.

I had a very nice time last night. We went to the movies first and saw "Theodora Goes Wild".
 It was grand. You ought to see it. At the Snow Ball - I wore my red dress - we had a grab bag full of noise-makers. And there were some yards of tinsel around so we all draped ourselves in that. It looked very Christmasy but even more like New Years.

Darling, I didn't wear a bell. I don't like to do crazy things with anyone but you. I don't "let myself go" with other people.
 I would feel very silly. Believe it or not,
 I am very reserved with anyone but you.
 (Would you like me to be reserved with you?)

Your description of Shep's experience was wonderful. I can just see him. You are so sweet.

Chicago Ill. Jan 7th '82 - Friend Joe.
Yours of Dec. 30th. received and was pleased to hear from you.
Was pained to hear of your bereavement. Please accept my heart felt sympathy. I was down to Ithaca during the holidays and had a very pleasant time although it rained most every day. Ithaca did not seem like the same place. I met Perry Hunter at Buffalo. At Ithaca
I met several of my classmates but none that I used to associate with. I suppose you remember Barnes' 81? He got married during the holidays. Mow, Hunter and Harkness 81 are married and I suppose before long there will

Ithaca, N. Y.
Sept. 28, 1920.

Dear Mother and all;
Here I am in Prudence Ripley Hall after a hard journey and good night's sleep and breakfast in a lovely big dining room.
I shall have had a very exciting trip from Syracuse to Ithaca.
It began to grow dark when we got a little way from
S. and then the clouds kept piling up, one on the other until one of the worst storms I have ever

Ezra Cornell, 11, of Bloomfield, N. J., great-great-great-grandson of the founder of Cornell University, relaxes at his grammar school desk while apparently pondering his future as a trustee of that Ivy League institution. The Cornell board of trustees has named him one of its members. The university charter says one seat must go for life to a lineal descendent of the founder.
Ezra succeeds his father who died last fall.
The boy cannot take his seat until he is 21.

 Nov 17th

my dear Louise,
 It was surely a pleasant surprise to hear from you and I am heartily ashamed that I did not write to you after last Commencement. We had a glorious time Commencement week. I graduated all O.K. and you ought to have seen me lay hold of that "sheepskin" when Prexy Schurman handed it out to me. We had a class of 600. Well to make a long story short I left here the next day after Commencement and went home and I was there most of the time except for a few short visits over to Athens to see my old

Lake View, Erie Co., N.Y.

My Dear Uncle:
 It is now 25 years since I have seen you ached a letter from you. I called on you at Niles in July 1853. You then had a fine field of 50 acres of corn. I should like to hear from you by your own hand, and learn how the paths of life have been to you. You are much older than myself, but I begin to feel the effects of age creeping over me, although not quite yet. You are the oldest of my Mother's brothers living, and I thought when at Niles in '53 that you had but a few acres of land, and that you had made an excellent change. I should very much like a statement of yourself and family since you have been there. I do not even know what changes have occurred in your family. — I bought my farm here, on the shore of Erie, the year before I saw you last. It is

COR. LEXINGTON AV. & 23RD STREET

Dear Sir

I take great pleasure
ation Mr J. S. Lehmaier

He was a very good and thorough Student in my Department and earned for himself a very high Standing in his class.

His record in the College Shows that at one time he was nearly successful in receiving a prize awarded for excellence in Philosophy

Any thing that you can do to aid him in your Department or elsewhere will fully appreciated by

Your obt servant

Norwalk Dec. 10 1877.
Kirby Smith Esq
Hillsboro.
Dear Sir.—
As I calculated I reached home Friday morning & have been nearly down sick ever since. Now however I am feeling all right and am taking this opportunity of getting up my neglected correspondence. This being my third letter this morning one to my old chum Randall of whom you have heard me speak, and one to the librarian of Cornell in answer to a circular.
It seems they are going to publish a Ten Year Book.

Notes culled from the Lectures of Prof. Wilder upon Human Physiology.

Method of Study. Hygienic suggestions.

Human Physiology treats of the organs of the Human body and their functions.

Human Anatomy is that department of Human Physiology which treats of the position, structure and economy of the organs of the human body. The study of Anatomy is carried on by means of the dissection of human bodies. In other words Anatomy is equivalent to the what of the Science of Physiology.

Hygiene is that branch of Physiology which treats of the laws of health or the laws which regulate the human body. These laws are deduced from a knowledge of the Anatomy and Physiology of the human body.

Lecture Second

Robinson, Wakefield R. I.
to Anna H. Gardner

Nov. 28/94

Mrs. Anna Gardner,
Dear Madam,

I recently wrote your nephew Mr. Clarence I. Robinson of Kinnelon, N.J. for information concerning his branch of the Robinson family. In order that I may have it to complete a genealogical chart of the Rhode Island branch of the family in this country.
It was made by Dr. Stephen Dwyer and Robinson, who lived in Wakefield R. I. the most of his life, and was published in an incomplete revision form by Mr.
Thos. R. Hayward, also of Wakefield and a book called "Recollections of Olden Time" and written by him. I have been able to complete some branches that have hitherto been incomplete, in a small chart of the Rev. William Robinson branch, deputy Gov. under the Crown, when the state was an English colony, made by a Mr. Henry R.
Smith of Medford & Newnamtown Pa. a descendant of Thos. Robinson of Wakefield.
I leave that Rev. William's son William, unmarried, died, 1st Elizabeth, daughter of Philip Hanson of Wakefield by whom he had three children, Hannah, Abigail and Philip.

Dear Robbie,

Your letters always reveal a tormented and a quiet mind, uncommon for the American or is rather positive - With this character are more joy but the pains are more and a unknown thing is often ting for being happy, the imagination too much -

I like much your expressive description landscape back of San Pedro. I see it well but I should have liked a photo
 you not took one - ?

On the 20 may we went to Paris

Led. Jan. 23. '80
 A.B. Cornell Esq
 Dear Sir
 Under it be advisable for the Board to meet at some early day and appoint a committee or take some proper action to dispose of the question of re-organization?
 As I am not familiar with the state of course of proceedings last winter in procuring the men, with the present position of the question, I do not feel authorized to advise this. I only suggest it, on the theory that all are interested and anxious to have the business closed up.

Mr. L. H. Gates

Dear Sir:

I find I am so crowded for time that I cannot well test your young cattle on Friday nor for a week or two.
Then seeing that the life of our Commission is wearing around if the test were delayed it might be too late to charge on the State the indemnity for any cattle that might possibly be condemned. It may therefore be best to have Dr. Donohue send an inspector to attend to this and get the case in promptly for payment
if any Condemnations are required.
I regret very much that I cannot myself see to this at once but I think you will be in good hands. If you should prefer

W002, W005, W006, W208, W438 & W481

Ezra Cornell

Ezra Cornell was the son of Elijah and Eunice Barnard Cornell. The family, of New England Quaker stock, settled in De-Ruyter, Madison County, N.Y., in 1819, where Ezra's father farmed and made pottery. Ezra learned something of both, as well as carpentry from his father, a former ship's carpenter. At 18 he set out on his own and in 1828 he settled in Ithaca, N.Y., where he worked as a carpenter and millwright. His employment in building and maintaining flour mills there came to a close when they were converted to textile mills in 1841. Cornell's interest in promoting a patent plow brought him into contact with the promoters of the Morse magnetic telegraph; from that time on he was involved in the telegraph industry - organizing, building, and operating lines. He constructed lines which connected New York and Washington, Philadelphia and New York, New York and Albany, then turned to the Midwest to construct a network of lines connecting major points. Cutthroat competition in these early days of the industry led to the combination of many of the leading companies into Western Union Telegraph Company. The concern grew rapidly until it dominated the business in the United States and much of Canada. Cornell's considerable personal fortune was the result of his involvement in such activities during the first 30 years of the industry. Once he had achieved great personal wealth, Cornell became concerned with public affairs. He financed the construction of a great public library in Ithaca and built and stocked a model farm. His interest in agricultural affairs led to his presidency of the State Agricultural Society. He was a leading member of the New York State Legislature during the 1860s, first as an assemblyman and subsequently as a senator. Here he became concerned with higher education. Cornell's pledge of his farm as a site plus a half-million-dollar endowment was the essential step that led to the enactment of legislation to found Cornell University. The school opened in 1868. Thereafter Cornell took a keen interest in the university, bestowing sizable gifts and encouraging its adherence to some of his egalitarian ideas of education. The university's freedom from religious ties, interest in the education of women, emphasis upon agricultural and engineering training, and interest in educational opportunities for poor students made it one of the more advanced educational institutions in America. Cornell, a frequent sight on campus, also carefully administered the disposition of the university's Morrill Act land-grant, husbanding that unique resource and eventually producing substantial returns for the university. Cornell died in 1874. He was survived by his wife, Mary Anne Wood Cornell, and a son, Alonzo B. Cornell, later governor of New York.

W005, W007, W029, W360, W439 Andrew Dickson White

Andrew Dickson White was born in Homer, N.Y., on Nov. 7, 1832. At the age of 17 he entered the Episcopal-oriented Geneva (Hobart) College in western New York, but he disliked it and after a year dropped out and entered Yale. Upon graduating in 1853, he and his friend Daniel Gilman went to Europe. White studied languages and history in Paris and Berlin, and during 1854-1855 he served for 6 months as an attaché to the American minister in St.

Petersburg, Russia. In 1856 White received his master of arts degree from Yale and then accepted an offer to be professor of history at the nonsectarian University of Michigan. The young, innovative teacher was an immediate success. During his 6 years there he conceived of a new university for central New York that would be shorn of outworn traditions and would offer the broadest opportunities for study in higher education. When his father died in 1862, White returned to New York to handle the business affairs of his father's bank. In 1864 he became a state senator, and in the New York Legislature he joined with another senator, Ezra Cornell, on the problem of utilizing the land grant of the Morrill Act (1862), which provided the state with the means of offering education in agriculture and mechanical arts. White fought to concentrate the Federal aid in one institution, and Cornell agreed to give $500,000 and land for a site to bolster that aim. The result was Cornell University, officially inaugurated in October 1868, with White as its president. He retired from this post in 1885. During his years at Cornell, where White taught history as well as being chief administrator, he brought to reality his earlier concept of a nonsectarian, coeducational university where not only the classics but also modern subjects including science, agriculture, mechanical arts, and even military science would be taught - a place where every student could study just what interested him or her. White's reforms in teaching and in the curriculum gained him national attention. White took a leave of absence from Cornell to serve as U.S. minister to Germany (1879-1881). After he retired from the university he served as U.S. minister to Russia (1892-1894) and U.S. ambassador to Germany (1897-1902). He was also minister to the Hague Peace Conference in 1899. He spent his later years in writing and influencing educational projects. He died on Nov. 4, 1918, in Ithaca, N.Y.

him into prominence, while the arrival of dead lions sent by express and other episodes of the kind caused more than one diversion in the life of the town. Dr. Wilder was born in Boston on August 11, 1841, the son of David and Ciela Colton Burt Wilder. He received his B. S. summa cum laude in anatomy from Lawrence Scientific School, Harvard, in 1862, and the degree of M. D. four years later. After serving as a surgeon with the 55th Massachusetts Infantry (colored) during the Civil War, Dr. Wilder was for two years an assistant in comparative anatomy at the Museum of Comparative Zoology, and in 1867-8 curator of herpetology for the Boston Society of Natural History. In 1868 he came to Cornell as professor of neurology and vertebrate zoology, and devoted the best part of his life to the institution. The following quotation from one of former President Andrew D. White's letters shows how much he appreciated Dr. Wilder's work. "He came to us at the very beginning and has borne the burden and heat of the day ever since, working with a devotion to science, to his students, to the University, and to all truth as it presents itself to him in a way which has entitled him to the gratitude, love, and respect of us all. Not least among the services he has rendered has been his promotion of cheerfulness and hope in the early dark and difficult days of the University organization." Dr. Wilder's pupils remember him as a wonderful teacher. They recall his habit of urging his students to strive in composition for "clearness, consistency, correctness, conciseness, and completeness." These he called his five c's. About 1871, Louis Agassiz enlisted Professor Wilder's cooperation in making a series of preparations of the brains and embryos of domestic animals for the Museum of Comparative Anatomy in Cambridge, and from that time on Dr. Wilder made neurology his special study. He prepared nearly two thousand vertebrate brains, including thirteen from educated persons. The list also comprises the brain of the famous criminal, Ruloff, and of the almost equally famous elephant, Jumbo. Among the exploits of the great scientist which astonished the public of his day, was the feat of reeling 150 yards of silk from a spider which has since been identified as Nephila clavipes. In 1865 silk from these spiders was woven into ribbon on a steam loom. The account of their habits published in the Atlantic in August 1866, was the only article ever illustrated by that magazine. Dr. Wilder advocated the simplification of anatomic nomenclature, the dissection of the cat as a prerequisite to that of a man, and the objective study of the brain in primary schools, beginning with the brain of the acanth shark. He was an advocate of temperance as distinguished from total abstinence, and a violent opponent of smoking. He favored the use of chloroform in capital punishment. The Wilder Quarter-Century Book comprising papers prepared for the occasion by 15 former pupils, the first American Festschrift, was presented at the 25th anniversary

W008 & W016 Burt Green Wilder

DR. BURT G. WILDER DIES. Was One of Best Known Men of University's Original Staff. Dr. Burt Green Wilder, zoologist and educator, one of the great figures connected with the early days of Cornell, died on January 21 near Newton Center, Massachusetts. He had been in poor health for some time. A pupil and assistant of Louis Agassiz, Dr. Wilder came to Cornell at the time of its opening through the recommendation of the great biologist. He built up the Department of Neurology and Vertebrate Zoology, until its fame spread far beyond the university, and Professor Wilder himself became known internationally for his scientific work. For over forty years he continued to lecture, retiring in 1910 as an emeritus professor. Dr. Wilder was also one of the members of the early Faculty best known to Ithacans, his searches for cats and other animals to be used in the laboratory bringing sary of the opening of the University. Dr. Wilder was the author of a long list of publications on various scientific subjects, including many articles in The Reference Handbook of Medical Sciences and biographies of his teacher, Louis Agassiz, and his classmate, Jeffries Wyman. He wrote both the words and the music of the Founder's Hymn, and the music for "Old Ironsides," as well as a number of other songs. He possessed an astonishingly versatile mind. The list of societies to which Dr. Wilder belonged includes the Advisory Council of the Simplified Spelling Board, the Non-Smoker's Protective League, the American Philosophical Society, the Boston Society of Natural History, the A.A. A.S., the American Neurological Association, and the Association of American Anatomists. He had served as president of the last two and as an officer of others. Dr. Wilder's first wife was Sarah Cowell Nichols, an aunt of Professor William N. Barnard '97; she died in 1904. Two years later he married Mary Field, who died three years ago. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Shepherd Stevens, of New Haven, Conn., and Mrs. R. R. Reed of Washington, Pa.

W009, W369 & W597 Lucien Augustus Wait

DEATHS IN THE FACULTY. PROFESSOR L. A. WAIT. Lucien Augustus Wait, professor of mathematics, emeritus, died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., on September 6. He had spent the summer at Lake Mohonk, and had gone to Clifton Springs to consult a physician. His illness was not thought to be serious till a short time before he died. Professor Wait had been a member of the Cornell faculty since 1870. He was born at Highgate, Vermont, on February 8, 1846. He was educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard College, where he received the degree of A.B. in 1870. In the same year he was appointed assistant professor of mathematics at Cornell. He was made an associate professor in 1877, and a professor in 1891. From 1895, when Professor Oliver died, until he retired in 1910, Professor Wait was at the head of the department of mathematics. In 1873-4 he had served as United States consul at Athens and the Piraeus. He was the last to survive of the three Cornell professors of mathematics, Oliver, Wait, and Jones, whose text-books were known to students of the seventies and eighties as the "O. W. J." algebra, etc. Professor Jones died in 1911. Soon after he came to Ithaca

Professor Wait opened a tutoring school in the Cascadilla building and in course of time developed it into the Cascadilla School for boys. He was the principal till 1893, when he appointed Charles V. Parsell '72 to take his place, and in 1909 he withdrew from the school. Professor Wait was a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity and the Phi Beta Kappa society. He married, in 1873, Anna Dolloff, and leaves two daughters, Mrs. Robert H. Hazeltine and Mrs. William S. Brayton. He married, second, in 1906, Mrs. Adaline E. Prentiss, who survives him.

Lucien Augustus Wait— Sept. 6, 1913 We, the members of the University Faculty, desire to place on record an expression of appreciation of the life and services of Lucien Augustus Wait, a detailed report of which was placed on our record on the occasion of his retirement in 1910 (President's Report, 1909-10, Appendix II, pages VIII and IX.) Upon his return from a two years' journey around the world, he renewed his keen interest in the affairs of the University, in particular of the Department of Mathematics, in the progress it was making in research, and in the welfare of its members. We shall all miss his kindly sympathy and helpful encouragement. We express our sorrow and extend our sympathy to the bereaved family of our late associate and friend. G. P. Bristol, E. L. Nichols, V. Snyder Retirement Statement: On the retirement of Professor Lucien Augustus Wait from active teaching after a long and successful career, his colleagues in the University Faculty desire to place on record their high estimate of his services to the cause of education and sound learning. Called in 1870 to an Assistant Professorship in the Department of Mathematics in the third year of its history, fresh from study at Harvard, he bore an important part in shaping the policy of the Department, and in establishing its well-known high standards. His unusual ability as a teacher and organizer led to his promotion in 1877 to the Associate Headship of the Department, relieving Professor Oliver of much of the administrative work ; and he became sole head at Professor Oliver's death in 1895. His administration has always been notable for efficiency, harmony, and devotion to high ideals of scholarship. In planning the mathematical instruction, he has kept steadily in view its various aims and purposes, including intellectual discipline, preparation for the scientific professions or for work in pure science, and the training of teachers and investigators. How well he has succeeded in the difficult task of holding an even balance among the diverse interests is well-known to all who have had any personal concern in the matter. On the disciplinary side, he has been careful to have the instruction of every grade placed upon a sound logical basis; on the scientific side, while keeping in close touch with the related departments in the College of Arts and Sciences, he has also studied the needs of the various professional Colleges; and in the interests of prospective teachers he has always given due prominence to the pedagogical side of the work. A notable feature of his administration is the encouragement he has given to the research work of his younger colleagues and of the graduate students. He has always planned that each instructor, after his initiatory period, should take some share in the graduate work, and should not be so overburdened as to leave him no time for his private investigations. Professor Wait has also encouraged the preparation of suitable text-books, being ever eager to adopt progressive methods of presentation and instruction, and has himself set an example of thoroughness and effectiveness in the classroom. While firm in enforcing the rules and standards of the Department, his unfailing courtesy is proverbial; and his qualities as a teacher and a man have gained him the warm regard of a long line of Cornell alumni, and of the Faculty and Trustees, many of whom are numbered among his former students. A man of ripe and varied culture, Professor Wait has taken a deep interest in all the educational problems which have come up before the Faculty, and his accustomed attitude has exhibited a fine blending of the progressive and the conservative. We shall miss his genial presence from our meetings, but we hope he may long remain a member of our University community.

W010 Frederick Louis Otto Roehrig

OBITUARY. F. L. O. ROEHRIG. Frederic Louis Otto Roehrig, A. M., Ph. D., M. D., who was professor of Sanskrit and modern Oriental languages at Cornell from 1869 till 1885, died in Pasadena, Cal., on July 14. He was eighty-nine years old and was a native of Halle, Prussia. At an early age he showed a genius in the mastery of languages. He graduated successively at the Universities of Halle, Leipsig and Paris. He was elected laureate of the Imperial Institute of France, receiving the Volney prize for linguistics. For some time he was attached to the Prussian Embassy in Constantinople, after which he taught in Paris. In 1853 he came to this country and became assistant librarian of the Astor Library of New York. From 1858 to 1861 he taught medicine in Philadelphia. At the outbreak of the Civil War he took a commission as surgeon in the United States army and held it until 1867, when he became acting librarian of the United States Surgeon-General's office in Washington. Soon after the opening of Cornell University he was appointed professor of Sanskrit and modern Oriental languages and held this chair until 1885. Since 1895 he had been university lecturer in Semitic languages and Oriental philology in Stanford University. He was the author of books in many languages, published in various countries. He was a chevalier of the Imperial Order of the Medjidieh in Turkey, a member of the American Philosophical Society, the Asiatic Society of Paris, the Oriental Society of Germany, the American Oriental Society and the American Philological Association, and an honorary member of the Council of the Gaelic Union of Ireland. He was the author of numerous compositions for the piano. His son, Frederic Louis Roehrig, '83, an architect in Los Angeles, survives him.

W011 Bayard Taylor

Bayard Taylor was born to Joseph and Rebecca Way Taylor on January 11, 1825, in the village of Kennett Square. At that time, the predominately Quaker village was only a crossroads with a few dwellings, including a tavern, a hotel, and the stone-plastered building of two-and-a-half stories where the Taylors lived. Bayard Taylor was named in honor of the esteemed Delaware senator James A. Bayard. Bayard's mother had taught him to read at age four, and early in his life, he found his real refuge in books, never tiring of reading poetry and books about the countries he longed to visit. Bayard was a curious and voracious reader as a child, and by the time he finished his formal schooling and tutoring in 1842, Bayard knew that he wanted to be a poet. His desire for literary recognition also prompted him to begin a correspondence with Rufus W. Griswold in November 1842. At that time, Mr. Griswold was the editor of Graham's Magazine (1842-43) and the compiler of The Poets and Poetry of America (1842). It was Bayard's first literary friendship, and by October 10, 1843, he had his first interview in Philadelphia. Griswold encouraged Bayard to publish a collection of his early poems, and in February 1844, Ximena; or, the Battle of the Sierra Morena, and Other Poems was published. Around the same time, Bayard's cousin Franklin was enticing him to accompany Barclay Pennock and himself on a forthcoming trip to Europe. Unfortunately, Bayard could not afford the journey. He hoped to finance his trip by persuading some local publishers to agree to pay him for sending back reports of his travels. This plan seemed doomed to failure until, at last, several individuals agreed to such an arrangement, including representatives from the Saturday Evening Post, United States Gazette, and Graham's Magazine. On July 1, 1844, Bayard, Barclay Pennock, and Franklin Taylor, departed New York and sailed for Liverpool on the packet ship Oxford, and arrived in Liverpool on July 29th. The next two years were spent traveling through England, Germany, and Italy, living on approximately six cents per day. His letters tell of his delight and of the financial crises that occurred. His letters to his newspapers were widely read, having been written in an insightful and engaging manner. On his return to America, he was advised to collect them into a book, which was published in 1846 as Views A-foot, or, Europe Seen with a Knapsack and Staff, with a preface by N. P. Willis. From the beginning, it was extremely popular, going through twenty-four editions within thirteen years. After his return from Europe, Bayard wished to marry and settle down with Mary S. Agnew, who had been his sweetheart since their early school days. Despite the objections of her parents, who thought Bayard lacked secure employment, Bayard and Mary became engaged soon after Bayard returned to Kennett Square. Immediately, Bayard began looking for employment that would provide a fixed income sufficient for him to marry. After a failed attempt at newspaper publishing, he went to New York in late November or December 1847. There, he obtained editorial work at the offices of the New York Tribune and Union Magazine. While working at the Union Magazine Bayard was visited by Horace Greeley, publisher of the Tribune. Greeley said to Bayard, "Now you must do something for this young man. His name is Thoreau. He lives in a shanty at Walden Pond, near Concord, on $37.21 a year, and he must be encouraged." Bayard read the manuscript, Katahdin, and the Maine Woods, and persuaded Greeley to pay Thoreau seventy-five dollars for it. Unfortunately Bayard's good intentions were overshadowed by an editorial mistake that brought immense indignation from Thoreau. While in New York, he continued to write, and in December, 1848, published Rhymes of Travel, Ballads and Poems, which was approvingly criticized by Edgar Allan Poe, who enjoyed the "glowing imagination and sonorous well-balanced rhythm..." In June, 1849, Bayard sailed to California via the Isthmus of Panama in order to report on the gold rush for the Tribune. During the next five months, Bayard visited San Francisco and the mines of the Mokelumne River, Stockton, the Sonoma Valley, and Sacramento. An account of his experiences in California was published in May 1850 under the title Eldorado, or Adventures in the Path of Empire. This book has proven to be Bayard's most enduring work. Many letters passed between Bayard and Mary Agnew during this period of separation, their marriage having been twice postponed because of Mary's health problems. When Bayard visited her upon his return from California, he found her greatly weakened, and realized that their time together would be short. With this knowledge, they were married at her home on October 24, 1850 in the presence of her parents and his mother. Within two months, on Saturday, December 21st, Mary died of complications due to tuberculosis. Bayard found it difficult to write after the death of his wife and began to consider the possibility of traveling again. After a short period of grief, he departed Philadelphia on August 22, 1851 with his brother William. They arrived in Liverpool and traveled to London and then the continent, parting company in Vienna. From November 4, 1851 to April 14, 1852, Bayard traveled through Egypt with August Bufleb, a wealthy German of forty-five, whom he met in December. They shared adventures and became good friends on a trip that was full of good fortune and camaraderie. After he departed Egypt, he journeyed to Lebanon, Syria, Palestine, and Asia Minor, finally arriving in Constantinople. While in Constantinople, Bayard learned that he would be traveling to the Far East on assignment for the Tribune. He journeyed throughout India, and then went on to China, touching at Singapore, and arriving at Hong Kong on March 16, 1853. In 1853, he received an appointment as master's mate in the United States Navy in order to travel to Japan with Commodore Perry on the U.S.S. Mississippi. This trip resulted in A Visit to India, China and Japan, in the Year 1853. Bayard found on his return from the Orient, that through the Tribune letters, his name had become widely known. Invitations to lecture poured in, and a new and prosperous career opened before him. His unusual experiences and engaging stage manner made him a popular speaker. The next few years were spent in lecturing, writing of his Eastern adventures, and revising the books he had already published. In July 1856, he departed New York once again for Europe in order to travel through the northern countries and gather material for a future book. On December 6, 1856 Bayard arrived in Stockholm, Sweden, and after a week, departed for a two-month tour of Lapland and the Arctic regions. Bayard writes in his journal that the temperature was minus 47 at noon on January 28, 1857. Before continuing his northern travels, he briefly visited Germany and England. While in England, he spent two days with Alfred Lord Tennyson. Bayard and Tennyson spent their time together discussing poetry, religion, politics, and geology. After this brief visit, Bayard joined his friend August Bufleb in Norway, where they spent the summer traveling together. The experiences of these trips, sent back to the Tribune as letters, formed the basis of his book, Northern Travel: Summer and Winter Pictures of Sweden, Denmark and Lapland, which appeared in the fall of 1857. After Bayard's trip to Norway he returned to Gotha, where he to Bufleb's home in Gotha, where he became acquainted with Mrs. Bufleb's niece, Marie Hansen. In June 1857, they became engaged, and on October 27, 1857, they were married. That winter, they made a trip to Greece, a place he longed to visit. He and his wife returned to Gotha in the spring of 1858 to await the birth of a daughter, Lilian, and on October 1, 1858, the family sailed for America. After settling the family, Bayard departed on a lecture tour to obtain money to begin the building of Cedarcroft, his future country estate north of Kennett Square. The estate was finished in the summer of 1860, and was dedicated with great celebration on Saturday, August 18, 1860 with a production of a comedy, Love at a Hotel, written by Bayard and his friend, Richard Henry Stoddard. Guests included Ralph Waldo Emerson, John Greenleaf Whittier, James Russell Lowell and Horace Greeley, among others. His new home proved to be an expensive luxury (it cost $15,000 to build), and it was frequently necessary to set aside the poetry that he loved for more lucrative writing, as well as continuing with his lecture tours. In 1862, he accepted an appointment as chargé d'affaires of the Russian legation in St. Petersburg. In December 1863, Bayard was in Washington, D. C. for a series of three lectures on the topic of Russia, its people and place in history. President Abraham Lincoln attended Bayard Taylor's lecture in Willard's Hall. The President, impressed by Bayard's lecture, wrote him a brief letter of admiration. Later, in 1869, Bayard published his Ballad of Abraham Lincoln, "one of the earliest compositions in verse about Lincoln, prepared especially for children." Bayard's first novel, Hannah Thurston: a Story of American Life, was published shortly after his return to America in 1863, and was followed with John Godfrey's Fortunes; Related by Himself: a Story of American Life in 1864. Both of these novels sold very well, and were popular long after their initial publication. Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote to Bayard about Hannah Thurston and called the book "an admirable one, new, true, and striking,—worthy of such a world-wide observer as yourself, and with a kind of thought in it which does not lie scattered about the world's highways." He also spent the year of 1865 working alternately on his poem, The Picture of St. John, and a novel, The Story of Kennett, which were published in 1866. Both of these works also received favorable reviews. Then, in June and July of 1866, he made a trip west to Colorado, which resulted in the publication of his travel work, Colorado: a Summer Trip, in early 1867. By this time, Bayard was becoming weary of traveling and found it increasingly difficult to carry on any sustained work away from Cedarcroft. He became determined to give up lecturing and depend solely on writing. Although Bayard was never in debt, Cedarcroft proved to be a drain on him financially. In 1869, he purchased more land and completed the first draft of his translation of Faust, but again it was necessary to embark on a lecture tour. In early September 1869 Bayard accepted an emeritus position at Cornell University in German literature. For the next several years he delivered lectures on Goethe, Humboldt, Lessing, Schiller, and others. Bayard enjoyed these lectures and the friendships he developed at Cornell, but he was grateful when they were over so that he could return to his writing. In 1870, his last novel, Joseph and His Friend: a Story of Pennsylvania, was published. Bayard considered this to be his most successful novel, although it was not well received by the general public. By the time the

Taylor departed once again for Europe on June 6, 1872, they had decided to give up Cedarcroft. The Taylors remained in Europe until September 1874, when they returned to Kennett, and in November, the Taylors returned to New York and made it their permanent home. In 1877, he began to write what was to be his last work, the poem Prince Deukalion: a Lyrical Drama. Once the poem was finished, he had decided to begin a life of Goethe and a life of Schiller. Fortunately, he was given the opportunity when he was appointed Minister to Germany in 1878. He knew the country and its people well, had a deep interest in German literature, and as he said, he would also be in the midst of the material he most needed. This appointment gave him a new hope of being able to complete his contemplated biographies. Before leaving New York for Berlin, Bayard was able to visit Kennett Square. There was a reception for the author in Borough Hall on the evening of February 27, 1878. Bayard and his family departed for Europe on April 11th. During the voyage, Bayard spent some time with Mark Twain, who was also aboard the ship. Twain called Taylor "a genial, lovable, simple-hearted soul,...happy in his new dignity... He was a poet...and had also made the best of all English translations of Goethe's 'Faust.'" Unfortunately, shortly after meeting Twain, Bayard became seasick, and was forced to remain in his cabin until they arrived in Germany. The new Minister found a cordial welcome in Berlin and Bayard wrote enthusiastic letters about his experiences in Berlin to the people at home, but he was never really well after arriving in Germany. Extremely conscientious about his official work, he was unwilling to allow illness to interfere. That previous August, he had already lost twenty to thirty pounds, and on October 12, 1878, he was diagnosed with a liver condition and edema. On the December 19th, about 2:00 pm in the afternoon, he fell asleep in his chair, and by 4:00 pm, he had passed away quietly in his sleep. He was temporarily buried in Berlin, and then in March 1879, his body was transported back to America, where it arrived in New York on March 13, 1879. His remains lay in state in the Governor's Room at New York's City Hall, and the next day his casket was taken to the railway station, loaded on a special train, and transported to Kennett Square. The train arrived at the Kennett station at 5:30 pm, whereupon the casket was carried through the village of his birth, returning once more to Cedarcroft, where he was laid out in the library. On the following day his neighbors and literary associates followed in a funeral procession to his final resting place in Longwood Cemetery.

BAYARD TAYLOR. —In the death of Bayard Taylor the University experiences a great loss and one which can not be recovered. Few of the under graduates know of the deep interest which he felt and expressed toward the institution which now so sincerely mourns his death. He was connected by life-long ties of friendship with many of our leading instructors, but that which attracted him most towards the institution was its truly national character. For Bayard Taylor was a true American. He grew to full maturity and perfect ability alone and unaided — lighting against prejudices and obstacles — yet never wavering. In Cornell he recognized a repetition by an institution of the struggles of his own life and he enlisted himself in the ranks of her soldiers. To the ardor of the teacher imparting knowledge in a loved study was added the enthusiasm arising from application of, and sympathy in, the aims and struggles of the University, and these combined in a nature so warm as was his, induced him to work strongly and ever for Cornell's good. His fame has been recounted by pens far abler than ours but none animated by more sincere sorrow for his death. Cornell mourns him heartily and deeply and her students will always hold the name of Bayard Taylor in grateful and affectionate remembrance.

W012, W506 & W595 William Channing Russel

OBITUARY RECORD. WILLIAM CHANNING RUSSEL. Prof. William Channing Russel, LL. D., long Vice President of Cornell University, and for some time its Acting President, died at his home in Yonkers yesterday. Dr. Russel was born in Boston, on Feb. 23, 1814, and was a nephew of William Ellery Channing, after whom he was named. Graduating from Columbia College, with a degree of A. M., in 1832, he studied at the Harvard Law School, and then entered on the practice of law in New-York City, where he remained until the civil war. At the close of the war he was called from a position in the Freedman's Bureau to the Chair of History in the College of Horace Mann, at Antioch, Ohio. On the organization of Cornell University, in 1868, Dr. Russel was one of the first men selected for its Faculty, being made Professor of South European Languages and Associate Professor of History. To these duties he added, a year or two later, those of the Vice Presidency, a post which he held until his retirement, in 1881, officiating during the long foreign absences of President White as Acting President of the University. After leaving Cornell, he filled for two years, (1881-83,) during the absence abroad of Prof. (now President) Andrews, the Chair of History at Brown University. Prof. Russel was a man of great power as a teacher of history. His clearness and terseness, his keen political sense, his ready irony, his wonderful knack of questioning and cross-questioning, will long be remembered by those whose good fortune it was to be under his instruction. In his class in English and American constitutional history he introduced, perhaps earlier than any other American teacher, what is now known as the seminary method; but it is doubtless his inimitable treatment of the history of Rome that will remain longest and most fruitfully in the memory of his old students. To many such the news of his death will come with a pang. His seven children, who survive him, are William Russel, Jr., of Philadelphia, Edward C. Russel of Helena Mont., Howland R. Russel of Milwaukee, Miss Lucy E. Russel of Boston, Mrs. William H. Sharman, Mrs. George H. Houghton, and Miss Sarah Russel of this city.

W013, W441 & W592 Goldwin Smith

DEATH OF GOLDWIN SMITH. Goldwin Smith, professor of English history (emeritus) in Cornell University and one of the earliest and most potent friends this University had, died on Tuesday afternoon, June 7, at his home, The Grange, in Toronto, Canada. Since February, when his thigh bone was broken by a fall, he had been confined to his bed. At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, held on the afternoon of Dr. Smith's death, President Schurman was appointed to represent the University at the funeral. Professor Hiram Corson also attended the funeral, which was held in Convocation Hall, Toronto University, on Saturday afternoon. The Armory flag was placed at half mast and Goldwin Smith Hall and the portraits of Goldwin Smith in the University Library were draped in mourning. The great bell in the Library tower was tolled at the hour of the funeral. President Schurman expressed the University's sorrow in a statement which was given to the press on Wednesday. He said in part: "In the death of Goldwin Smith Cornell University loses one of its most devoted friends, its oldest emeritus professor, and the most illustrious scholar who ever sat in its faculty. He came to Cornell University as professor at its opening in the fall of 1868 from the oldest university in the English-speaking world—Oxford, where after a distinguished career of scholarship he had held the Regius professorship of history—and his great reputation as a man of letters, an historian, and a publicist at once reflected lustre upon our new and struggling University. "Mr. Goldwin Smith more than once told me that no event in his life gave him more satisfaction than his participation in the founding of Cornell University. A generation ago, when the institution was the object of cruel attacks, he stood on this campus and defended both its founder and its management, while at the same time, dark and hopeless as the outlook then was, he prophesied for it a bright and glorious future. I believe he said, 'it will be a great and good institution, and one which any man will feel it an honor to serve. I have believed it an honor to serve it. My affections for it are unchanged. My hopes for it are unabated.'" After speaking of Dr. Smith as the friend of the American Republic and as the friend and champion of democracy, liberty and peace among the nations, President Schurman said: "Goldwin Smith was the exponent and exemplar of the highest culture of the nineteenth century. His spirit had been nurtured and formed by the best literature of classical antiquity and of modern times. As an historian he strove like Plato's wise man to be a spectator of all time and all existence. Thus more easily than most men he adjusted himself to the changes in the world which he had surveyed for four score and seven years. Literary man though he was, he welcomed the progress of science and willingly accepted its general theoretical results. Nor had the deep and dark problems of philosophy daunted this intrepid searcher after truth. What, in view of existing knowledge, can reasonably be affirmed, he has not hesitated to affirm — nor has he scrupled to remain in doubt where the plummet of his spirit could touch no bottom. I call him, all considered, as perfect an exemplar as can be found of the knowledge, culture, and thought of our time." Goldwin Smith was born at Reading, England, on August 13, 1823. He studied at Eton College and the University of Oxford, matriculating as an undergraduate of Christ Church in 1841, becoming a demy of Magdalen the next year and graduating in 1845. He won the Hertford scholarship in 1842, the Ireland scholarship in 1845 and the Chancellor's prizes (for Latin verse, 1845; for Latin essay, 1846; for English essay, 1847). He received his master's degree in 1848 and about the same time was elected a fellow of University College. In 1850 he was called to the bar, but never practiced. After serving as a secretary of the Royal Commission on the University of Oxford, and as a member of the Popular Education Commission, he was, in 1858, made Regius professor of modern history at Oxford. During the American Civil War he was an active champion of the North. He visited the United States in 1865. In 1868, impelled partly by the death of his father, which forced him to give up his Oxford professorship, and partly by a desire to study and write the history of America, he came to this country to live. At the invitation of Andrew D. White he accepted the professorship of English history at the new Cornell University. He was in residence at Cornell from the opening of the University in 1868 until 1872. Since then he had lived in Canada, returning to Ithaca every year, until his age prevented, to deliver a course of lectures. In 1875 he married Mrs. Harriet (Dixon) Boulton, of Toronto. She died in September, 1909. At Toronto his home was The Grange, an old English house set in a park which occupied a whole city block. Here he studied and wrote. He was a prominent exponent of the idea that Canada is destined to merge her political life in that of the United States. Dr. Smith published many books. For two generations he was a leader of thought in newspapers and magazines. His last visit to Cornell was in 1904, when he laid the corner stone of the Goldwin Smith Hall of the Humanities. Among the titles of his published works are: Irish History and Irish Character; Lectures on Modern History; Rational Religion and the Rationalistic Objections to the Bampton Lectures for 1858; Does the Bible Sanction American Slavery?; The Empire; On the Morality of the Emancipation Proclamation; A Letter to a Whig Member of the Southern Independence Association England and America; The Civil War in America; Three English Statesmen; Essays on Reform; The Reorganization of the University of Oxford; The Irish Question; The Relations Between America and England; William Cowper; Jane Austen; The Conduct of England to Ireland Loyalty, Aristocracy and Jingoism; The Political Destiny of Canada; History of the United States; Oxford and Her Colleges; Bay Leaves (Translations from the Latin Poets) Specimens of Greek Tragedy; Guesses at the Riddle of Existence; Shakespeare: the Man; Commonwealth or Empire The Founder of Christendom; Lines of Religious Inquiry; My Memory of Gladstone. In 1882 Oxford conferred upon Dr. Smith the degree of D. C. L. In 1865 he received from Brown University the degree of LL.D., and the University of the State of New York in 1870 gave him the degree of L. H. D., President White being delegated to confer this degree at the Cornell University Commencement in that year. He was made a D. C. L. of Princeton University in 1896. Dr. Smith was in 1876 elected to honorary membership in the Cornell chapter of Psi Upsilon.

W014 & W590 Hiram Corson

DEATH OF HIRAM CORSON. VENERABLE PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH LITERATURE PASSES. AWAY. Hiram Corson, emeritus professor of English literature in Cornell University, died at his home, Cascadilla Cottage, a little after noon on, Thursday, June 15. He was in his 83d year. His death was not unexpected, although he had recovered from a severe illness in the winter. His son, Eugene Rollin Corson '75, of Savannah, Georgia, was with him when he died. Professor Corson was born in Philadelphia on November 6, 1828. His earliest instruction was received in his own home, from his father, a mathematician of exceptional ability, and it was not till he was fifteen years old that he was sent to school. For five years he studied in private schools near Philadelphia, distinguishing himself in mathematics and in Latin and Greek. He had studied stenography and in 1849 he became an official reporter of the United States Senate, for a time serving also as secretary to Senator Lewis Cass. But he showed his bent for books a year afterward when he became connected with the library of the Smithsonian Institution. There, during six or seven years, aided by his connection with the library, he gave his leisure time to indulging what was becoming his strongest interest, the study of the English, French and German literatures. In 1854 he married Miss

Caroline Rollin, a lady of French birth and European education, and in 1859 he returned with his family to Philadelphia. There seems to have been in that city at that time a group of persons whose bookish tastes attracted the young Corson. He was a leading member of the Philadelphia Shakespeare Society, in which Dr. Horace Howard Furness received his first great impulse to the study of Shakespeare, and for several years he was a public lecturer on English literature and kindred themes. His fame extended beyond his own circle of friends, and in 1864 Princeton University conferred upon him its degree of Master of Arts. In the following year Girard College elected him to its chair of moral science, history and rhetoric. This chair carried with it the office of vice-president of the college, and Professor Corson, finding the duties too burdensome, resigned it after a single year to accept the more congenial professorship of rhetoric and English literature in St. John's College at Annapolis. It was while there, in 1870, a scholar in his prime, that he accepted the invitation of Cornell University to its chair of rhetoric and oratory, succeeding Professor Homer Baxter Sprague, who had accepted the presidency of Adelphi Academy. Professor Corson found that at Cornell, with no assistant, the whole burden of instruction in English composition, oratory and literature was too much for him, and after a year, on the recommendation of President White, an additional professorship was created, and Charles Chauncy Shackford was appointed professor of rhetoric and general literature, Professor Corson taking in 1872 the professorship of Anglo-Saxon, English literature and oratory. Before long he was relieved, at his own wish, of the elementary instruction in Anglo-Saxon, and the instruction in oratory was made a separate department, leaving him free to give all his time to the work he liked best and for which he was nobly fitted—the reading and interpretation of the great works of English literature. For a brief time after the retirement of Professor Shackford in 1886 he assumed supervision of the department of rhetoric, but the coming of Professor James Morgan Hart in 1890 freed him finally from that part of the instruction in English which was less to his taste. St. John's College conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon him in 1878, and in 1903 Princeton gave him the degree of Doctor of Letters. Mrs. Corson died in 1901. In 1903 Professor Corson, having reached the age of seventy-five years, retired from active teaching. He was appointed professor emeritus and lecturer on English literature, and until he was more than eighty years old he gave an occasional public reading. His last public appearance on the campus was at the Milton tercentenary celebration in December, 1908. On Dr. Corson's eightieth birthday his colleagues of the Faculty gave him a loving cup, and Dr. Andrew D. White made the address of presentation. He said: "For forty years your professor's chair has been a center of ennobling ideas, and for more than thirty years of this period there have radiated from your lecture room at Cornell University influences which have bettered and strengthened your students, your colleagues and the community at large. "Nor has your work been merely academic. Your teachings have wrought profoundly at other centers of thought: wherever earnest men and women have gathered to study the most precious treasures of our literature, whether in the mother country or our own, you, by your voice or your writings, have been a power for good. "Especially happy has been your teaching, both in itself and as an example. Having watched its development in this university, from its beginning until now, I cannot forbear expressing my joy as I reflect upon your influence as a scholar, a teacher a public reader, and as exercising the subtle charm of illuminating and inspiring conversation. You have never favored pedantry. Your interpretations of the great masters of our literature have made them not mere dried specimens to be buried in note books, but vitalizing forces ministering to what is best in the building of character. Your commentaries have resulted not merely from minute studies of verbal niceties, but far more from broad surveys of general literature, ancient and modern: living studies for living men and women." Among the books Professor Corson wrote were Chaucer's Legende of Goode Women, with introduction and notes, 1863; An Elocutionary Manual, 1864; Address on Occasion of Induction as Professor of Moral Science, History and Rhetoric in Girard College, March 29, 1865; The Satires of Juvenal, with a literal translation, 1868; Hand-Book of Anglo-Saxon and Early English, 1871; Syllabus of a Course of Lectures on the English Language and Literature, 1873-1876; Jottings on the Text of Hamlet, 1874; The University of the Future, 1875; The Claims of Literary Culture, 1875; The Idea of Personality and of Art as an Agency of Personality, as embodied in Browning's Poetry, 1882; The Two Voices and A Dream of Fair Women, by Lord Tennyson, with biography and a general introduction and notes, 1882; An Introduction to the Study of Robert Browning's Poetry, 1886; An Introduction to the Study of Shakespeare, 1889; A Primer of English Verse, chiefly in its aesthetic and organic character, 1892; The Aims of Literary Study, 1895; The Voice and Spiritual Education, 1896; Selections from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, with introduction, notes and glossary, 1896; An Introduction to the Prose and Poetical Works of John Milton, 1899. In 1901 he edited Mrs. Corson's translation of Pierre Janet's The Mental State of Hystericals. He was a spiritualist and a mystic, and believed firmly that he held communication with the spirits of his dead friends. His last book, now on the press, was a collection of such messages. Dr. Corson was recognized not only at Cornell as a great interpreter of literature. His books on Shakespeare and Browning were widely read and received high recognition abroad. His writings won him the friendship of Tennyson and of Browning. He founded two prizes at Cornell—one for the best competitive essay on Robert Browning and the other, established in memory of his wife, for the best competitive essay on a subject in French literature or philology. Professor Corson's funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon of this week in Sage Chapel, and the burial was in the city cemetery.

W015 Evan Wilhelm Evans

The Evans Lectures are named for Evan William Evans, the first professor appointed at Cornell, a mathematician and college friend of A. D. White. The lectures are intended for an audience of mathematics faculty and graduate students, to bring them together to share in the excitement of mathematical research. The Evans Lectures are made possible through the generosity of an anonymous donor. Evan William Evans was born in 1827 in Wales. His family emigrated to America soon after his birth. In 1851 he graduated from Yale University, where he made the acquaintance of Andrew Dickson White. After graduating from Yale he served as Instructor in Mathematics at Yale. He later became Professor at Marietta College in Ohio. In February 1867, White recruited Evans to head Cornell's Department of Mathematics and Engineering. He was among the first group of faculty at Cornell. He held the post until a few months before his death in 1874. James Oliver (of Oliver Club fame and himself a student of Benjamin Pierce at Harvard) described Evans as "a man of few words but of remarkably sound and independent judgement that carried great weight in the faculty councils, and as an acute and thorough student, a philosophical and original thinker, a firm and loyal friend... Characteristic of his instruction or policy were: the remarkable power of concentration with which he would follow others' work without using his eyes, his uniform preference for oral above written examinations, and his habit of taking a calculus class over the same ground with two successive authors for the sake of the cross-light" Evans was also a scholar of Cymric literature and philology and has been described in this area as "having no superior in the United States." He wrote treatises on "the oil and mineral region of southeastern Ohio" and "Primary elements of plane and solid geometry" and an article titled "On the path and velocity of the Guernsey county meteor of May 1st." Remarkably enough, the name of Evan William Evans is present to this day somewhere in Malott Hall (with a slightly different spelling)!

—During vacation, three elegant sepulchral tablets have been placed upon the interior walls of the Chapel. They are of burnished brass, with black and red enamel, and are from the firm of Cox & Son, London. One reads as follows: "In memory of Evan Wilhelm Evans, M. A. (Yale), born 1827, died 1874, who, from 1868, filled with great ability and fidelity the chair of Mathematics in this University and who was also distinguished for his profound knowledge of Celtic Philology."

W018 John Philip Riley Jr.

John P. Riley ('22 CE), for many years the director of development for the New York City Housing Authority, January 1, 1956, became vice-president and chief engineer of IBEC Housing Corp., New York City, which uses a mechanized, poured-in-place concrete building method and is currently constructing 1625 houses at San Juan, Puerto Rico. Since 1939, Jack has supervised the development of more than a billion dollars worth of housing for the Housing Authority and also served as coordinator of school construction for the Board of Education of New York City.

John P. Riley, Jr. was born on August 31, 1900, the son of John and Minnie (Mulerman) Riley. John Riley served in the United States Army for a brief period during World War I. He was discharged in 1918. In 1922, he graduated from Cornell University with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering. During his professional career, John Riley served as assistant regional director in charge of rural resettlement in eleven northeastern states, civil engineer with the firm of Parsons, Klapp, Brinckerhoff, and Douglas, superintendent of housing and building for the Borough of Queens in New York City, director of development for the New York City Housing Authority, vice-president and chief engineer of IBEC Housing corporation, and coordinator of school construction for the Board of Education in New York City. During his career he supervised the development of more than a billion dollars' worth of housing. As a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, John served on many national committees, as general chairman of the national ASCE convention committee for New York City, and as Director from District I on the ASCE national Board of Direction. His service in the ASCE Metropolitan Section included membership on various committees and as its president during 1953-1954. John was also active on the committees that were instrumental in relocating the United Engineering Center to its present location in the United Nations area in New York City. He also served as an active member and officer of the Cornell Society of Engineers. John Riley married Barbara Rudden in 1931. She preceded him in death in 1983.

Dr. Chester Dead; Bacteriologist, 81. Wrote First Textbook in U. S. on Determinative Field—Rubber Research Chemist. Invented Carbon Process. Honored by Science Group in 1940—Aided Survey on Land Fill Decay Here. Dr. Frederick Dixon Chester, bacteriologist and chemist, died Friday in his home at 2965 Marion Avenue, the Bronx, after a short illness. His age was 81. Dr. Chester, who was chief chemist of the Mimex Company, Long Island City, engaged on rubber research, was an authority on determinative bacteriology and wrote at the turn of the century the first textbook on this subject in the United States. He also did research on microbiology and biochemistry. In 1940 Dr. Chester, a founder and former vice president of the Society of American Bacteriologists, received a plaque from the society in recognition of his contributions to science. He was the inventor of a new graphite refining process for the Graphite Mining and Refining Company, and for the Stackpole Carbon Company introduced scientific control for mixtures of carbon materials, resulting in reduction of losses. Born in Santo Domingo, Haiti, Oct. 8, 1861, he studied at Washington University, St. Louis, from 1876 to 1878, and obtained a B. S. degree in 1882 and an M. S. degree in 1885 from Cornell University. Dr. Chester was Professor of Geology and Botany at Delaware

College from 1882 to 1892, bacteriologist and mycologist at the Delaware Experimental Station from 1889 to 1907 and director of the Delaware State Bacteriological Laboratory from 1899 to 1907. Dr. Chester was a consulting chemist and bacteriologist from 1907 to 1924, chief chemist of the Stackpole Company in Pennsylvania from 1924 to 1930 and director of research of the Technical Sales Corporation from 1930 to 1932. From 1935 to 1939 he engaged on special research on fungi at the New York Botanical Garden, holding a fellowship there the last two years. In 1940 he was chief bacteriologist on a survey for New York City on the bacteriological decomposition of land fills. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Amanda Chester.

W078 William Barker Ruggles Jr.

Obituary. WILLIAM B. RUGGLES '83. William Barker Ruggles, a graduate of Sibley College in the Class of 1883, died on January 23 of pneumonia at his home, 91 West Fifth Street, Bergen Point, N. J., in his fifty-fifth year. He was the head of the Ruggles-Coles Engineering Company of 50 Church Street, New York, which he founded. Mr. Ruggles was born in Bath, N. Y., and was a son of the late William B. Ruggles, formerly state superintendent of public instruction. He was a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity. In his senior year at Cornell he was president of the Mechanical Engineering Association, and also of the Athletic Association. When he graduated he held the Cornell records for the 440-yard run and the standing broad jump. He began the practice of his profession in New York soon after his graduation. "About a year ago," the New York Times said, "the Russian Government sent for him, and he went to Petrograd and visited the great wheat growing provinces, where he designed plans for the storage and handling of wheat which called for the expenditure of more than $100,000,000. Mr. Ruggles had been engaged by that Government to carry out these plans after the war. He was the inventor of an iron ore dryer extensively used on the Mesaba Range, and was interested in other corporations, being president of the Novella Cement Company and a director of the Buffalo Potash & Cement Corporation." Mr. Ruggles was a member of the Engineers' Club, the Cornell University Club of New York and the New York Athletic Club and of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. His wife and a daughter survive him.

DEATH OF D. W. GUNNER. Daniel W. Gunner, '87, who was appointed Instructor in Civil Engineering this year, died at his home in Schaghticoke, N. Y., on Monday of this week, of typhoid fever; the immediate cause of his death being, however, a severe internal hemorrhage. Mr. Gunner was twenty-six years of age, and one of the most promising civil engineers ever leaving Cornell. He graduated last year and his record in the University secured [sic] him the excellent position which he was called upon to fill. Mr. Gunner was held in the highest respect and esteem by professors and students, and the news of his death, coming as it did so unexpectedly, cast a shadow over the hearts of his many friends at Cornell. Upon the reception of the sad news a meeting of the students in the Civil Engineering department was called, and it was decided that the faculty of the department and Curtis and Edwards, of the Senior class should attend the funeral. The following resolutions were also adopted: Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst a worthy and much beloved friend and instructor, therefore be it Resolved, that we, the undergraduates of the Civil Engineering Department of the Cornell University, recognize that in the death of Daniel W. Gunner, we lose a faithful friend and conscientious worker, a man of widely recognized ability and one who has gained a high place in the esteem of his fellow students. Resolved, that we extend our deepest sympathy to his family and friends in their affliction, mourning with them our common loss. Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and that they be published in the college papers.

I am only replying to your letter. Adrian Monroe Yarrington born March 26, 1863 in Sayville, Long Island. Graduate of Oswego Normal from there to Cornell in 1889 taking B.A. degree in three years graduating in 1892 with "cum laude." Took M.A. degree at Columbia with 1902 class. Taught in Pratt Institute High School, then in Manual Training High School all in Brooklyn. Died February 15, 1934 of cancer of the stomach, at the above address where we have lived thirty years, buried in Sayville. I trust some of this is what you wished.

I wish to thank you for your kind letter of sympathy. It means much to me at this time. Sincerely yours Marie L. Yarrington.

W085 George Weirs King

Biographical Note. Taken from the "Biography of Dr. George W. King", by Joaquin Miller, published in 1894. George W. King, the leading medical practitioner of Marysville, Montana, descended from one of the pioneer families of Vermont, his ancestors having located in that State previous to the Revolutionary war. The paternal grandfather served with Washington in that struggle and participated in the hardships endured by the patriot soldiers at Valley Forge. The father of our subject, Cyrus W. King, was also born in Vermont. He married Miss Louisa E. Duncan, a native of Quebec, Canada, and a daughter of James Duncan, an early settler of that province and founder of the village of Chrysastum. He resided there until his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-four years. Mr. and Mrs. King had ten children, six sons and four daughters, nine of whom still survive. The father lived to a good old age, and the mother is still living, aged eighty-seven years. George W. King, the ninth child in order of birth in the above family, was born at Malone, New York, October 20, 1852. He attended the public schools of his native place, afterward took a special course at the Cornell University and graduated at the medical department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, in 1877. He then served as assistant surgeon at the university one year, next followed the practice of his profession at Kempton, Illinois, two and a half years, practice in New York City one year, and then went to Chicago. While in [Chicago] Mr. King suffered a severe attack of pneumonia. After his recovery he was offered the position of surgeon at Marysville for the Montana Company, and believing that the climate of this place would prove beneficial to his health, he accepted, arriving here in 1883. Mr. King has since resided in this city, and has filled his position with the company in a most satisfactory manner, as well as doing a general practice in Marysville and the surrounding country. He has also invented many appliances for his use in surgery. One is a valuable device in which to set fractured limbs, and another is used to place injured men while raising them out of the mines. He takes special and laudable pride in surgery, and has performed many difficult and important operations with utmost success, which he has from time to time reported in interesting articles to the medical association of the State. He is a member of that society and has the honor of being its first vice-president. The Doctor has invested largely in Helena city property, where he has built a beautiful residence, but gives close attention to his patients in Marysville. Dr. King was married July 25, 1881, to Miss Aramella J. Griffen. They have two daughters, Georgia E. and Mildred L., born in Montana. Our subject is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the Knight Templars and Shrine, and also of the A. O. U. W. and the K of P. In political matters he affiliates with the Republican Party. An illustrated history of the state of Montana : containing a history of the state of Montana from the earliest period of its discovery to the present time, together with glimpses of its auspicious future; illustrations and full-page portraits of some of its eminent men, and biographical mention of many of its pioneers and prominent citizens of to-day: Lewis Publishing, 1894.

A more recent and unpublished biography by Deborah Lynn Guber, Associate Professor Department of Political Science at The University of Vermont of Dr. King's life and work follows. (Note: there is a discrepancy regarding King's date of birth) Dr. George Weirs King, son of Cyrus Weirs King and Louisa Permelia Duncan, was born October 1845 in Bellmont, Franklin County, New York, and died June 26, 1929 in Portland, Multnomah County, Oregon. He is buried there in Rose City Cemetery. After spending his youth in Bellmont, New York, George W. King entered Cornell University in Ithaca with sophomore standing in the fall of 1874, attending for just one year. He transferred into medical school at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor as a junior in September 1875, graduating in 1877. At the time of the 1880 federal census, George lived with his brother David Woodbury King in Mona, Ford County, Illinois, where he worked as a physician and David as an architect. Their residence was not far from that of the Eli Griffen family. He married Armilla Jane Griffen, July 25, 1881 in Kempton, Ford County, Illinois (although some records state Cook County). She was the daughter of Elli Griffen and Deborah Cortright. Usually called "Millie" by family members, she was born January 10, 1860 in Whiteside County, Illinois and died February 7, 1941. George W. King was employed as a doctor and surgeon in Helena, Montana and later in Portland, Oregon. In 1892, he filed a patent with the U.S. Patent Office in Washington, D.C. for a "Fracture Apparatus." In his application, he wrote, "In the treatment of fractures there is always difficulty, even with the aid of an assistant, in maintaining the limb in proper position and much extra pain is occasioned by frequent moving of the injured limb during the application of splints or bandages. My invention is designed to obviate this difficulty by providing a portable apparatus by means of which the operator, without the aid of an assistant, can apply and maintain proper extension and counter-extension of, and support for, the broken limb, and, at the same time have free access to every part of it for the convenient application of the splints or bandages."

W088 & W089 Lynde Palmer

FORMER OARSMAN PASSES. On or about November 20, 1936, Lynde Palmer '78 died at his home in Plattsburg. Lynde Palmer spent much of his early boyhood on or near Chateaugay Lake in northeastern New York. He learned to row soon after he learned to walk. It was natural, therefore, that when he entered Cornell in September, 1874, and found that his (Freshman) Class was organizing a six-oared crew for the Gluck Cup, he was interested; in fact he rowed No. 1 (bow oar) in that crew. The race was rowed north, by the east shore of Cayuga Lake, with a crowded trainload of enthusiastic spectators rolling alongside. The race started in fairly smooth water, which grew steadily rougher, so that the crews of '75, '76, and '77 swamped and waded ingloriously ashore; while '78, in a more seaworthy shell, crossed the finish line rowing with five oars, while Lynde Palmer held triumphantly aloft the stub of his broken oar. When it came to organizing a Freshman intercollegiate crew for the intercollegiate race on Saratoga Lake in July, 1875, Palmer held his place at No. 1. When this crew won the intercollegiate freshman race, most unexpectedly, Palmer was the first man to cross a winning line for Cornell. It was the news of this victory that sent President Andrew D. White, bareheaded, up into McGraw Tower to jangle the chimes to express his joy. The next year at Saratoga Lynde Palmer was substitute Varsity No. 1. Though Palmer was a good student, he only stayed at Cornell two years. Afterward, for several years, he was a successful cattle man in the Middle West, and then engaged in Pacific Coast lumber business, finally becoming Eastern representative of one of the greatest of the lumber companies. When John Ostrom '77 and Lynde Palmer '78 and Albert W. Smith '78 were the only living members of the rowing squad of '75, together they took "A Sentimental Journey" (Alumni News, May 13, 1926) to Saratoga and the Lake where they had rowed long ago. Last summer the same trio went down the St. Lawrence to Tadousac and up the beautiful, picturesque Saguenay. Now, alas, the congenial trio is broken.—A. W. S. '78.

First Cornell Oar ever to lead across [sic] the finish line in an intercollegiate race has been hung in the Willard Straight Hall game room. It was pulled by the late Lynde Palmer '78 who rowed bow in the Freshman shell at Saratoga July 13, 1875, when the Cornell boat came from behind to beat Harvard, Brown, and Princeton. The oar was given by Palmer's fraternity, Alpha Delta Phi, and will go ultimately to the University trophy room when one is established.

4005. John Sayles Waterman. He was born at Smithfield, Providence County, R. I. He graduated at Cornell University, 1877. While in college he was a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity. He was a member of the victorious Cornell Varsity crew at Saratoga Lake in 1875. He married Jeannie Mead Treman. 1806. He was engaged for several years in the manufacture of agricultural implements under the firm name of Treman, Waterman & Co. at Ithaca. At the time of his death the Ithaca Daily Journal said of him: "He was not only a close student while in the University but a fine athlete as well, and much of the credit of the Cornell crew's famous victories at Saratoga was due to his prowess, he pulling bow oar in those memorable contests. Some of his friends are of the opinion that his early physical decline was attributable to his overexertion in those races. After finishing his studies, Mr. Waterman became interested in business here as a member of the firm of Treman, Waterman & Co." He died March 10, 1891, at Pittsford, Vt. ANDREW D. WHITE ON ATHLETICS, By A. W. S. '78. In 1875 and '76 the Cornell oarsmen rowed in six oared shells, and the bow oarsman steered; his right foot being held in a stirrup that controlled the rudder. In the season of 1875, John Sayles Waterman, on Cayuga Lake, and later on Saratoga Lake won a reputation for steering courses that would make an arrow envious. At the end of this season, after Cornell had won the freshman and varsity intercollegiate races, after the smoke of the fireworks of the Ithaca celebration had cleared, after the joyful sound of the chimes that President White helped to ring had faded to silence, John Waterman's father and mother felt that it would be better for John to give up rowing; not that it had interfered with his University work, which was always well done, but because, in a small Rhode Island village they could not understand the enthusiasm for rowing, and wondered if it was wholesome for a young man. This discussion came to the ears of President White, who thereupon wrote a letter to father Waterman. This letter has been carefully preserved by Mrs. Jennie Treman Waterman and is now a valued possession of John Waterman's grandson, John Treman Mann, a freshman in the College of Architecture, and a candidate for the Freshman Crew. The Cornell University, President's Rooms, Ithaca, N. Y. April 5, 1876. Dear Sir: It was with exceeding regret that I learned of your objection to your son's taking a position on the University crew at the next contest. Mr. Ostrom informs me that his leaving destroys almost certainly the chances of the Cornell Crew and I trust that I may be pardoned for a natural desire that our young men should again bear off the palm of this contest as they have at the two Intercollegiate contests in scholarship and at the athletic contests last year. But, deeply as my pride is enlisted in this matter, did I suppose that entering for this contest would injure your son in any way whatever, I would not think of suggesting a reconsideration of your decision in the matter. It is only because I am satisfied that in no respect will it injure him, but in some respects be a benefit to him, that I write this letter. I feel sure that your opposition is based upon some misapprehension of the subject. I have had, myself, a large experience as a student at two colleges in this country and two Universities abroad, and as a Professor in two of the largest Universities in this country, and I assure you that the dangers to students do not arise in any considerable degree from matters of this sort. On the contrary I regard the stimulus given to healthy, manly exercise by contests of this kind as one of the greatest safeguards against the lounging, easy-going, billiard playing and fast horse driving habits into which so many of the more scholarly men fall. First, as regards loss of time from study: my own experience at Yale College and our own University as well as what I can learn from your son and others who have engaged in boating shows me that any thoughtful, studious man really loses nothing in the long run, by giving much attention to physical training and even by entering contests of this kind. In my observation what there is of a man in a student is brought out in such contests to such a degree as to more than make up for the apparent small loss of time from attention to books. Next, as to its effect on health; I have found in my possession, and will gladly put into your hands if you desire it, a very careful work by an English Scientific man, containing careful statistics as to the health of all the students at Oxford and Cambridge in England who have taken part in the famous rowing contests there for forty years. The author of this book took pains in the case of every student in the contesting crews, during all that time, to find either from the student himself, or from his physician, family and friends, all particulars regarding his after health and career in life. So far from the contestants having been injured by rowing, the average health was much better than that of graduates generally. So also has been their average length of life. And what is still more remarkable, those very diseases of the heart and lungs which, it is popularly supposed, are created or aggravated by the exertion of a close contest, were shown to average far below the usual rate as shown by the medical statistics of those Universities and of England in general. In the next place as to the success in life of those engaged in these contests, it seems to me to have been promoted by the energy and vigor stimulated in them, rather than to have been injured. Among those who have rowed in the successful crews are a surprising proportion of the leading men in English Church and State. Men who have been marked by their healthful energy and vigor in public positions. As I look back upon my own college life I find confirmation of this. I was graduated in a class of 107 at Yale College, and the boat club to which I belonged was the first that ever sent a challenge for a contest to Harvard College; and as I now look over the names of my classmates who are distinguishing themselves in various directions, I am struck by the fact that the fact fact that the boating men stand very high. So far from boating having injured them it has certainly done them good. Instead of lounging during their leisure time, they went to the water, took their oars, rowed out into the stream, and thus got what American students so sadly lack, manly physical exercise in the open air. As you are possibly aware, I was by no means robust; on the contrary I have always been delicate in health; but all the fatigues of rowing did me no harm; and so far from injuring my studies, whatever success I had in College was largely due to the fact that I was enabled by this kind of exercise to keep my health up to a proper point. I consider the time laid out in this as time thoroughly well spent. [Continued on page 29$ I have told your son that on no account should he think of going counter to your wishes in this matter; but he tells me that he thinks your main objection is to his forming a taste for rowing exercise and for the society into which that will throw him. As to his forming a taste for rowing exercise, I think I may speak all the more freely to you since my advice to you coincides with my course in regard to my own son who is about to enter college. By all means in my power I have encouraged him to take his exercise in boating; partly for the reasons given above, but partly because it seems to me that it is a simple, manly, inexpensive taste which is most likely to draw him away from less worthy ways of spending leisure time. I shall be heartily glad if he develops no worse hobby, and gets into no worse company than his boating will afford him. There is also another consideration which, though it may not be so easily seen is none the less real. I allude to the fact that such training and thoroughness and exercise of skill as is required in preparing for one of these contests is a discipline of great value to any young man. It teaches him the necessity of self-denial, self-restraint, regular exercise, regular habits; it shows him more clearly than all the lectures and sermons in the world, the fact that temperance, self-control and careful management of one's self, secure health, strength and vigor. In closing permit me to repeat that not to win any contests would I endanger the physical, or moral or intellectual welfare of any student of all the 500 entrusted to us. But it seems to me, in this case, that a great service can be rendered to the University without harm to your son; but on the contrary with good results to him and I sincerely hope that you will reconsider your decision. To be again successful in bringing his boat in first will give your son a legitimate place among the thoughtful, earnest athletic young men of the country. With him there is no doubt that our young University will be again successful; without him it is more than doubtful. I have labored hard during the best years of my life to build up this institution, making some sacrifices and relinquishing much that most men care for. As you are aware, we have been subjected to attacks on account of what we consider necessary reforms in education, and valuable steps in educational progress. Every success, whether in contests of mind and muscle, forces upon the attention of the American people the fact that our system produces men sound morally, intellectually, and physically, and is the only adequate reward which some of us, who have struggled on here to accomplish this result, will ever receive, I sincerely hope that you will reconsider your decision. I will keep an eye upon your son and will do everything in my power to have his career prove that these contests have not injured him. I remain very respectfully and truly yours, Andrew D. White. Dictated. Mr. W. W. Waterman, Esq. This appeal must have been effective, for in the following intercollegiate race on Saratoga Lake,

W088 & W089 Daniel Otis Barto

OBITUARY. DANIEL O. BARTO '77. Daniel Otis Barto died at Urbana, Ill., on January 18, after an illness of several months. He entered Cornell in 1873, and remained three years. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, and rowed on the crews of 1875 and 1876, of which Acting President Smith was also a member. From 1880 to 1888 Barto was principal of the Ithaca High School, leaving Ithaca for California, and later teaching in the Roxbury Latin School. He returned to Ithaca in 1890, and again became principal of the High School, in 1893 taking up similar work in the State of Illinois. He was graduated from the University of Illinois late in life, and remained there as head of the department of poultry husbandry until his death. He was twice married. His first wife, who was Lola Dewey '77, died in California in 1888. In 1892 Mr. Barto married Miss Lucy Murray '92, who survives him, with two daughters, Harriet Thompson Barto, an instructor in nutrition in Teachers College, Columbia, and Margaret Murray Barto, an instructor in physical education in the University of Illinois. Just before his death he wrote, on December 8, to a classmate a letter from which extracts are given below: "If I was surprised at getting a letter from you I was also greatly pleased because of the chance to call a hello over the space of forty years and, as it happens in my case, to add a good-bye, for I am now in my easy chair waiting for the call which I am promised will come within a few weeks to cross over. About three years ago, after sixty-five years of perfect health and a very happy active life, my physician informed me that a cancer had fastened its grip upon me and that a year would probably bring the end here. 'From the experience of my acquaintances who have met this most dreaded disease I preferred to make no fight but use whatever time was granted me as peacefully and usefully as I could. My case has surprised my friends and the doctor in that its progress has been so slow and so peaceful. I have been able to go on with my university work, as director of my department, and last September was reappointed for another term; so I am to be permitted to reach the end with the harness on. But I realize that the end is very close and if I am wearing the harness I have ceased to pull any load. I can only attribute the slow progress of the disease to the effects of the old rowing days, which helped give me a strong, sound body that has resisted so stubbornly. Another surprise has been that I have not found this experience so terrible. With the comforts of my home and the care of my family I have never found the pain more than I could bear quietly, and the pleasure that my reading and visits With my friends, both those here and the old ones who have gone ahead—I am not a Spiritualist but I mean the living over again in memory the days that you have enjoyed and renewing in this way the friendships that death interrupted.— All these things I have found intensely enjoyable. Then, too, I have found much interest in watching the gradual unwinding of the spring that has kept us going here. And most of all the thinking, wondering, what the great Beyond holds for us. And more and more as I draw nearer has my conviction strengthened that existence on the other side must be a continuance of the life here with all its interests, all we loved still possessing us and lived under the conditions more perfect. I had no thought when I began of imposing all this on you. I hope age hasn't made me a garrulous old man. But I know there is a common interest in the experiences of our friends as we reach the years when we know that the same things are just ahead for us all. You probably don't look just as I recall you, but your face and voice and my liking for you are still very distinct. Maybe,—I hope—sometime we may meet and continue what we enjoyed here. But I imagine I hear you saying, 'I don't remember Barto as being such a talker.' Good-bye." President Smith writes of Professor Barto as follows: "I was associated with Professor Barto in the intimate relation of membership in the varsity crew that rowed at Saratoga in 1876. We used habitually to take our light walking exercise together and thus we had opportunity for interchange of ideas upon all subjects. I have never known a man of finer character or of higher ideals of life; and with all his serious earnestness there was a deep sense of humor that showed in the sparkling eye and the ready smile. His sympathy was unfailing and he was always mindful of the feelings and rights of others. He was a modern knight, without fear and without reproach."

W088 & W089 John Lewis

OBITUARY. JOHN LEWIS '79. John Lewis died suddenly at his home in Springfield, Ill., on May 11. He received the degree of B. M. E. at Cornell in 1879, and was a member of Beta Theta Pi. He was captain of the '78 freshman crew which, in 1875, at Saratoga, won the first rowing victory for Cornell. In 1876 he rowed at no. 5 in the varsity crew; he stroked the varsity crew in 1879, and rowed at no. 2 in the varsity crews of 1880 and 1881. He was regarded as one of Cornell's most skillful oarsmen. For a number of years he had been with the Illinois Watch Company, of Springfield, Ill.

W088 & W089 John Nelson Ostrom

terian Hospital in Chicago, Ill., January 30. He was the coach, captain, stroke, and only surviving member of the first Cornell Varsity crew ever to win an intercollegiate race, at Saratoga July 14, 1875. A more extended biography of him will appear in our next issue. He is survived by his son, John N. Ostrom, Jr. '29, 6824 East End Avenue, Chicago.

JOHN NELSON OSTROM, '77. By Albert W. Smith '78. One who helped in the building of Cornell University is dead. He was a member of the first Cornell crew to row in an intercollegiate race. This race was rowed in 1873, in June, on the Connecticut River at Springfield. Cornell finished fifth. The next year the intercollegiate race was rowed on Saratoga Lake. Cornell again finished fifth. John Ostrom grew tired of finishing fifth. He had done his utmost to win with his muscles; meanwhile he kept up a constant wise thinking about how to finish first. In the fall of 1874 he got full control. He studied the English stroke of Oxford and Cambridge and developed the "Ostrom stroke." He selected much lighter men as better fitted for six-oared shells without coxwains. His choice of oarsmen was based not only upon physique but upon character. He prescribed a generous, plain training diet; and for exercise outside the boat he favored games like "two old cat" with a soft ball; games that gave physical enjoyment, that stirred the spirit of fun, that strengthened friendship. In undertaking the guidance of Cornell rowing in September, 1874, he found great lack of enthusiasm for crews with a habit of finishing fifth. Money for the sport came grudgingly, or not at all. Then John Ostrom put on his thinking cap again. He went to Union Springs and challenged Charles Courtney to row a six-oared race at Ithaca. The challenge was accepted enthusiastically, and a Courtney crew was organized and trained. A fully loaded regatta train watched this race. John Ostrom stroked his crew and won. Even the Freshman crew kept well in the race. Courtney told Ostrom afterward that he had never rowed so hard before. Enthusiasm flamed; money flowed freely. Even the Freshman crew was sent to Saratoga. And both crews won. The village of Ithaca and young Cornell went wild. President White, with some excited students, ran up into McGraw Tower and pumped the Chimes without regard to rhythm or melody, to express their enthusiasm. Dr. White said afterward that the winning of those races did more to bring the young Cornell University to the attention of the world than any efforts the Trustees could have made—financially or otherwise. The next year at Saratoga, Cornell again "swept the field," and again the world asked: "Well, what and where is this Cornell University?" That is what John Ostrom did to help in the upbuilding of Cornell! In his professional life Ostrom was a skilled engineer of bridges. At one time it was considered necessary to replace one of the great bridges over the Mississippi river at St. Louis. Ostrom suggested that certain repairs, replacements, and strengthening of members would render the old bridge trustworthy. He was put in charge of the work. That was many years ago. It saved some millions of dollars. The bridge is in safe service today. He would never send a workman to any dangerous place on a bridge where he would not go himself. That was the kind of a man he was! The C.B. & Q. Railroad retired Ostrom, obeying unwillingly a company rule on age limit, but immediately appointed him consulting engineer, and thenceforward he made an annual inspection of all their important bridges. All through his life John Ostrom loved Cornell, and ever at Commencement time he came to "the Hill" to pay tribute to his Alma Mater. But now he will come no more.

"UNCLE PETE" PASSES. Professor Albert W. Smith 78,

Mechanical Engineering, Emeritus, died August 16. He was known affectionately as "Uncle Pete" and beloved by Cornellians for more than forty years. Until confined by illness two weeks before his death, he walked almost daily from his home at 13 East Avenue down the path to Willard Straight Hall, greeting friends as he went, frequently visited Alumni House, and never lost his interest in students, alumni, and the University. A memorial service will be held for him after the University opens, and President Day has designated Professor Bristow Adams, Dean Smith's long-time friend, in charge of arrangements. Romney Berry '04 recalls that "Uncle Pete was one of the few remaining men who overlapped Ezra Cornell. And he just barely did. Ezra Cornell's chief interest in his last year was his new house, Llenroc, now the Delta Phi house. But he didn't live ever to sleep the night there although the place was heady finished and ready at the time of his death. But his body lay in state there all through the night before the funeral. For the watch that night and as a guard of honor, four students were selected—one from each of the four Classes. Uncle Pete was the Freshman. That was his first and last contact with Ezra Cornell. That long night with the Founder bit deep into Uncle Pete's character. His voice always shook when he spoke of it." Having received the BME in 1878, Dean Smith returned as a student in 1887 to Sibley College, received the MME the next year and became assistant professor of Mechanical Engineering. In 1891 he went to the University of Wisconsin as professor of machine design, and in 1891 President David Starr Jordan, LLD '86, called him to the chair of mechanical engineering in Stanford University which had opened the year before. He remained at Stanford until 1904 when he came back to Ithaca as Dean of Sibley College and served in that capacity until he retired in 1921. During 1920-21, between Presidents Schurman and Farrand, the Trustees appointed Dean Smith Acting President of the University. As a Freshman, Albert Smith was a member of the first Cornell crew to win an intercollegiate race, at Saratoga in 1875, and he rowed in the Varsity boat that won the next year. He was president of his Senior Class, a member of Theta Delta Chi. He wrote textbooks on Machine Design and Materials of Machines, biographies of Professor John E. Sweet and of Walter C. Kerr '79, a "character study," Ezra Cornell, Bells of Cornell, Poems of Cornell, and had partially completed a new book of essays and poems, Glimpses of Cornell. Dean Smith was chairman of the Ithaca city commission which developed Stewart Park at the head of the Lake and was instrumental in establishing the Louis A. Fuertes bird sanctuary there. Mrs. Ruby Green Smith, PhD '14, survives him, with their son, Alpheus W. Smith '19, and daughter, Mrs. Robert P. Ludlum (Ruth A. Smith) '27. Their daughter, Mrs. Harold Reynolds (Dorothy Smith) '22, died in 1938.

Few graduates of Cornell University have contributed as much to the spirit and service of Cornell as has Albert William Smith, one of its earlier graduates, and a teacher and administrator during twenty-one years, preceding his retirement as Professor of Mechanical Engineering, Emeritus. Born in Westmoreland, New York, on August 30, 1856, Albert Smith entered Cornell as a student in 1874, and was graduated in 1878. During this period he distinguished himself as a student and as an oarsman on the first of the outstanding Cornell crews. He returned to Cornell in 1886 as a graduate student. In 1887 he was made assistant professor of mechanical engineering in Sibley College at Cornell, where he remained until 1891 when he became professor of machine design at the University of Wisconsin; he left there a year later to become head of the department of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, returning in 1904 to his Alma Mater to become dean of Sibley College until his retirement in 1921. He was acting president of Cornell University from April 3, 1920, to October 20, 1921. After his retirement, writing, which had been his avocation, became his vocation. Seven books published in this period are: biographies of John Edson Sweet, Walter Craig Kerr, and Ezra Cornell; Poems in Varying Moods; Poems of Cornell; Facing Life, The commencement address at Cornell in 1921; A Springtime Odyssey on the Shores of Southern Seas. Also, during his retirement he influenced alumni and others to make gifts to Cornell and guided the direction of those gifts. As an engineer he added honor to his profession; as a teacher and writer in his professional field he clarified abstruse problems; as an administrator, he was incisive, patient, considerate, and sympathetically understanding. Without the least detracting from his success as an engineer, teacher, and administrator it may be said that his outstanding contribution came through the example of his character, the breadth of his culture, his enthusiasms for the best in literature, music, and art, and his wholesome influence on students, who at one time voted him the most respected and most beloved teacher at Cornell. Sorrow at his death is tempered by thankfulness for his inspiring life.

W088 & W089 James Lorenzo Jarvis

OBITUARY. JAMES L. JARVIS '78. James Lorenzo Jarvis, for many years a practicing physician in Syracuse, N. Y., died at his home in that city on December 27, 1923. He came to Cornell in 1874 from Canastota, N. Y., as a student in the natural history course and soon after showed marked ability as an athlete. He became a member of the Tom Hughes Boat Club and that fall stroked the freshman crew. The next spring 'he played first base on the freshman baseball team and rowed number four on the varsity crew which won the first intercollegiate boat race for Cornell on July 14, 1875, at Saratoga. Prior to that race, the same crew defeated a crew from Union Springs of which Charles E. Courtney and his brother, J. F. Courtney, were members. In the fall of his sophomore year, Jarvis rowed with the varsity, again defeating a crew from Watkins, and also played first base on his class ball team as well as the Alpha Sigma Chi (now Beta Theta Pi) team. In July, 1876, he rowed a second time with the varsity at Saratoga when Cornell won its second intercollegiate boat race over that course. In addition to his athletic ability, Jarvis played the 'cello in the Orchestra. He remained here two years. Later he went to Bellevue Medical College in New York and in 1885 graduated from that institution.

COLUMBIA DEFEATED. THE FINAL IN SERIES OF INTER-COLLEGIATE DEBATES A CORNELL VICTORY. The final debate in a series of three with Columbia was won by Cornell in the Lyceum at Ithaca, on Friday night, March 7. The question debated was, "Resolved, that the United States should resist—by force, if need be—the colonization of South America by any European power," Cornell supporting the negative. President Schurman presided, and the judges were Professor W. H. Mace, of Syracuse University, Professor W. C. Morey, of Rochester University, and Professor Walter Wyckoff, of Princeton University. In an interview, Professor Winans of the department of Oratory spoke upon the debate as follows... Manton Marble Wyvell. Negative. To bind the United States to resist all colonization in South America by any European power is, in its best light, an arbitrary, dictatorial proposition. For it is evident that colonization may be of two kinds forcible or peaceful without the consent of South American countries, or at their solicitation. To the detriment of the South American people, or in their interests. But this arbitrary rule makes no exception it refuses to consider a particular case on its merits; it treats just and unjust colonization alike... [excerpt of full text]

W111 Chester Jermain Hunn

TWO TEACHERS DIE. Within nine days, two beloved teachers died in Ithaca. Professor Chester J. Hunn '08, Ornamental Horticulture, died June 30 after a long period of ill health, and Professor Edwin H. Woodruff '81, former Dean of the Law School, died July 8... Professor Hunn was the son of the late Charles E. Hunn, plant propagator and gardener at the University when Professor Liberty Hyde Bailey started the first courses in Horticulture here. Chester Hunn was largely responsible for establishing the courses in nursery management and research in plant propagation; was instrumental in arranging the gift from alumni of trees and other garden materials for the Farrand home in Brewster when President Livingston Farrand retired; and recently had taken active part in assembling and propagating materials for the University Arboretum. He entered Agriculture in 1904 from Ithaca High School and received the BS in 1908. Immediately, he went to the experiment station in Honolulu, transferred in 1914 to the University of Puerto Rico, and returned to the Graduate School in 1916. During the War he was registrar of the Army Aviation School here, and in 1920 joined the Bureau of Plant Industry in Washington, D. C. Since 1916 he had been assistant professor of Ornamental Horticulture. He was Faculty adviser of his fraternity chapter, Lambda Chi Alpha, and of Scarab, honor society in Agriculture and Hotel Administration, and a member also of Pi Alpha Xi. He was active in organizing the first school track meets run by the Cornell Club of Hawaii, and with Professor Ralph S. Hosmer, Forestry, he organized He Hui Hawaii, comprising students and members of the Faculty who had lived in Hawaii. He is survived by Mrs. Hunn and their son, Charles H. Hunn '43, and by a sister, Anna E. Hunn '12, and two brothers.

Chester Jermain Hunn. March 14, 1884 — June 30, 1941.

Chester Jermain Hunn, Assistant Professor in the Department of Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture, died June 30, 1941, at the Memorial Hospital, Ithaca, New York, in his fifty-seventh year. He had been in ill health for some time. The name Hunn has long been associated with Cornell horticulture, since Charles E. Hunn, the father of Professor Hunn, was gardener in charge of the greenhouses when Liberty Hyde Bailey began horticultural instruction at Cornell. Later Chester J. Hunn was largely responsible for establishing the courses of instruction in nursery management, and for research in plant propagation. These activities have received the cordial support of the nurserymen of New York State. Recently he had had an active part in assembling and propagating plant materials for the Cornell Arboretum. For this he possessed a special gift and enthusiasm and these brought him into wide contact with nurserymen and their organizations all over the country. Professor Hunn was graduated from Cornell in 1908, after which he went to the Experiment Station in Honolulu. In 1910 he married Jessie McCormick of California, who was then teaching in Hawaii. He transferred to the University of Puerto Rico in 1914, and returned to Cornell for graduate study in 1916. During the first world war he served as Registrar of the Cornell Aviation School and in 1920 he joined the staff of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. Professor Hunn was called to Cornell in 1926 as Assistant Professor of Ornamental Horticulture. Professor Hunn was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha and Pi Alpha Xi; was faculty adviser for the honorary fraternity, Scarab; and was co-founder, with Professor Hosmer, of the Hawaiian Club of Cornell University, in which he had a continuing and active interest. In these societies and in many other student, alumni, and horticultural activities Professor Hunn's helpful participation will be greatly missed. Especially will he be missed by students of the University, because he always maintained an alert, understanding, and sympathetic interest in their athletic, social, and educational enterprises, and endeared himself to all of those with whom he came in contact.

FACULTY DEATHS AND DEPARTURES: Six well known faculty members died during the summer and early fall; and a dean resigned. John N. Tilton '13, professor emeritus of architecture, died May 29. He taught from 1932 until his retirement in 1959, serving as acting dean, assistant dean, and secretary.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 73, No. 4, Nov 1970, p. 33.

John Neal Tilton. June 16, 1891 — May 29, 1970. Professor John Neal Tilton came to Cornell in 1909 from Chicago, where he had been born and reared, to study architecture. In 1913 he received the degree of Bachelor of Architecture and a year later that of Master of Architecture. He then returned to Chicago, and, with the exception of two years as an officer in the U. S. Army Air Corps during World War I, worked as an architectural designer for Marshall and Fox, Architects, until 1926. At that time he formed a partnership under the name of Armstrong, Furst, and Tilton, practicing in Chicago. In 1932 he left Chicago and joined the faculty of the College of Architecture at Cornell as an assistant professor, becoming professor in 1936. In 1937-38 he served as acting dean of the College, from 1938-40 as assistant dean, and from 1940-45 as secretary. In 1959, after twenty-seven years of dedicated service, he became professor of architecture, emeritus. During his tenure at Cornell, Professor Tilton retained his partnership in Chicago on a part-time basis. Professor Tilton taught with distinction and great devotion and served well generations of Cornell students. His special fields of interest were in the area of working drawings, specifications, and mechanical equipment of buildings. In addition to his teaching responsibilities he served on a number of University committees, including the University Aptitude Committee, the Executive Committee on Student War Service, and the University Scholarship Committee. He also served terms as chairman of the Student Conduct Committee and the Committee on Student Activities. He was active in many professional organizations. He was a long-standing member of the American Institute of Architects, and at one time was secretary of the Central New York Chapter. He was also a member of the honorary societies Tau Beta Pi, Gargoyle, and L'Ogive. In recognition of his dedication to his teaching and to his students, the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture awarded Professor Tilton its "Citation for Excellence in Teaching" in 1958.

In addition to serving the University, John Tilton also served his community in many ways. He was one of the most faithful and beloved members of St. John's Episcopal Church, to which he gave freely of his professional talents, especially in its building and redecorating program and as a member of its vestry. He was also a dedicated member of Rotary International, and was an honorary member of the Ithaca Rotary Club at the time of his death. In 1940 John Tilton married Hazel Davidson of La Grange, Illinois, who died in 1967. Professor Tilton died at the age of 78 at the Lakeside Nursing Home, Ithaca, where he had been a resident for two years. He is survived by a brother, Brigadier General Rolland L. Tilton of Hampton, Virginia, and three nieces. Stuart M. Barnette, Thomas H. Canfield, Francis W. Saul.

W179, W361, W733 Charles Kendall Adams

CHARLES KENDALL ADAMS. DEATH OF THE SECOND PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY. At Redlands, Cal., on July 26, 1902, died Charles Kendall Adams, second president of Cornell University. He was still comparatively a young man, having been born January 24, 1835. All his life, except the last few years, he had been a strong man. But disease fastened its hold upon him, and for two years or more preceding his death he had sustained a constant struggle against ill health, a struggle cheered by occasional gleams of hope, but leading inevitably to defeat. For a quarter of a century Dr. Adams had been a national figure in educational circles. Except for his seven years service as president of Cornell, he had done his work in connection with the great state universities of Middle West, Michigan and Wisconsin. Born in New England, reared among pioneer conditions in Iowa, battling his own way to the best obtainable education, rising steadily to even higher position and larger influence, he illustrated in his life the most typical traits of American manhood. Dr. Adams' active and varied career divides naturally along three lines of service, those of the teacher, the educational executive and the scholar and author. Notable as were his achievements in all these lines, they must be summarized here very briefly. As a teacher his fame rests on his organization and management of the department of history in the University of Michigan. In his period of foreign study he paid quite as much attention to the methods and organization of education as to the technicalities of his own specialty. Indeed he was all his life one of the best informed of Americans as to the achievements of other nations along educational lines. Succeeding Andrew D. White as professor of history at Michigan, he made the historical department of that institution notable in several respects. First of all, he introduced the seminary as an organization for aiding advanced students in research work. From his training in the seminary there came a goodly number of scholars who occupy, or have occupied, professorships of history in our best institutions. One of his most distinguished pupils told the writer some years ago that Dr. Adams inspired his students not so much by the brilliancy of his lectures as by the force of his own example of painstaking, untiring industry. "Whether you shall ever become scholars," he used to tell his students, "depends chiefly upon the use that you make of your leisure." And as they saw him toiling, hour after hour, day after day, with enthusiastic perseverance, they learned the secret of learning and became possessed of the same spirit that possessed him, the spirit which made the German scholars great, the spirit which Dr. Adams had in a high measure in the days before executive duties interfered with his leisure for study. For a historical seminary to mean anything it must be equipped with an adequate library. Doubtless one of the pleasantest tasks that ever fell to Dr. Adams was the assembling of the historical library at the University of Michigan. In this work he was practically unhampered, funds being generously provided by his college associate and life-long friend, J. J. Hagerman. Dr. Adams' experience as the chief executive officer of a university began when he became president of Cornell in the summer of 1885. It was continued, after his resignation at Cornell, in the presidency of the University of Wisconsin, from which he retired a year ago on account of failing health. The progress of the University of Wisconsin in material equipment, faculty, students and prestige during his administration is unsurpassed in the history of our state universities. As scholar and author Dr. Adams is known chiefly in connection with two works, his "Manual of Historical Literature" and "Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia." The "Manual of Historical Literature" may not unfairly be called an epoch making work in American historical scholarship. When a revision of Johnson's Cyclopaedia was first planned in 1891, Dr. Adams succeeded President Barnard as editor-in-chief. In the reorganization of the editorial staff he brought together the most distinguished body of scholars that up to that time had ever been engaged upon a work of reference on this side of the Atlantic. His earliest work "Democracy and Monarchy in France" attracted wide attention and his life of Christopher Columbus is a valuable monograph. He was called upon for numberless addresses, many of which were published, and he contributed his share to current periodical literature. But to Cornellians Dr. Adams' work as president of Cornell must have the greatest interest. Circumstances have apparently deprived that work of adequate general appreciation. With all loyalty it must be frankly admitted that when Dr. Adams came in 1885 Cornell was not, except in name and ideals, a university. Measured by present day standards it was not even an all-round good college. Parts of it were excellent, but many needed parts were altogether lacking and other parts, tho present, were—sadly incomplete. The internal organization was inadequate there was no effective relation with the schools of New York state, or any other state the standards of admission were not high, nor were they properly enforced, and the commencement procession was liable to halt for a relenting faculty to vote a diploma to a delinquent senior. There was a great deal to be [sic] done, a great deal, too, that was not agreeable to be done, when Dr. Adams undertook the presidency of Cornell. How much he accomplished is in part measured by the condition of the University when he resigned in 1892. Almost every part of its organization had been essentially modified. Courses of study had been rearranged, the requirements for degrees simplified, a system of registration and control of the students work made effective, the separate offices of registrar and dean created, the requirements for admission advanced, better relations established with the secondary schools of the state, the system of admission by certificate elaborated, the number of students increased about three-fold. In the faculty several members had retired, while such new names had been added as Schurman, Wheeler, Nichols, Burr, Dennis, Bailey, Andrews, Bristol, Hutchins, Burdick, Finch, Jenks, Wilcox, Huffcut, Carpenter, Kemp, Tarr, Ryan, von Klenze, Durand—the list is from memory and far from complete—many of whom still remain to strengthen the Cornell faculty, while others have been called to high service in sister institutions. A tendency to increase salaries was developed and the sabbatical year was instituted. The law school was established firmly and well. Plans were made for a medical school, for Cornell was -now to be a real university. The library building rose to command lake and valley with its splendid bulk. The agricultural experiment station was founded, Dr. Adams being among the most active of those who persuaded Congress, to make additional grants for agricultural experimentation and instruction. The department of horticulture was created. The Sage School of Philosophy was inaugurated. The classical department department [sic] was greatly strengthened, the museum of casts was established, Sibley college went far in its wonderful development. Barnes Hall arose by the side of Sage Chapel to bear further witness to the truth that Cornell's nonsectarianism was as far as possible from irreligion. The building of professor's houses on the Campus was greatly extended, so that a faculty community was formed on chose beautiful "slopes that can scarcely be paralleled in the world. Percy Field opened the way for Cornell's athletic development. All this in seven years. Surely an era of notable development for Cornell. President Adams did not accomplish it all unaided, nor on the other hand did he fail to meet formidable opposition in some of his most cherished plans. That he should always be judged impartially by those with whom he failed to agree was not to be expected. He came at a time when many things had to be done; he went ahead and did as many of them as he could, as wisely as he could, and he did a great deal. Men of experience test executive officers by results, and by this test President Adams' administration must be pronounced successful. His work has not been undone. President Adams' term of office was necessarily in some ways a period of storm and stress. Whenever things are being brought to pass rapidly some people are disturbed. The reorganization of any large enterprise involves a certain amount of discomfort, if not suffering, and it surely arouses antagonisms. But no one can doubt now that the time had come, in 1885, for Cornell to grow, and to outgrow, too, many of the old conditions. The time of wearing, pinching poverty was past, an era of prosperity was dawning. Early prejudices had been in large measures lived down. The growing public confidence in the University was in part responsible for the rapid increase in the number of students. The way was open toward the future of which Ezra Cornell, Andrew D. White and their associates had dreamed. The University in all its parts must be fitted for the emergency. So Dr. Adams term as president is a crucial period in Cornell's history. That he devoted himself with single-minded fidelity to Cornell's interests as he understood them no one ever doubted. His predecessor planned the University with a breadth, wisdom and almost prophetic foresight that are wonderful in our eyes. But the institution was not the complete and beautiful vision of the founder and of the first president when Dr. Adams became the second president. He built strongly and wisely upon the good foundations. By what he built and for what he suffered in the buildings he deserved the lasting respect and gratitude of those who love Cornell. C. H. T.

W189 Stanislaus Pascal Franchot Tone

Biography for Franchot Tone. Date of Birth: 27 February 1905, Niagara Falls, New York, USA. Date of Death: 18 September 1968, New York City, New York, USA (lung cancer). Birth Name: Stanislas Pascal Franchot Tone

President of the Dramatic Club at Cornell University, Franchot Tone gave up the family business for acting, making his Broadway debut in "The Age of Innocence". Tone then went into movies for MGM, making his film debut in The Wiser Sex (1932). With his theatrical background, Tone became one of the most talented movie actors in Hollywood. Franchot Tone was born into a well-to-do upstate New York family. Tone traveled the world with his parents and attended various schools, including The Hill School in Pottstown, Pennsylvania, from which he was dismissed "for being a subtle influence for disorder throughout the fall term." He entered Cornell University, studying romance languages with an initial goal of eventually teaching in such. But he also joined Cornell's drama club, becoming its president his senior year. The interest in theater would sow a seed soon to be germinated. Tone had no interest in the family electro-chemical business. He decided to become a serious actor. He meant business by joining a theater stock company in the city of Buffalo, earning only $15 a week. He toiled with dedication, playing bit roles and educating himself in the theater business. He moved to Greenwich Village and auditioned for the New Playwrights' Theater, making his Broadway debut in 1929 with Katharine Cornell in "The Age of Innocence". Tone portrayed Curly in the flop Broadway production of "Green Grow the Lilacs" which would later be developed into the musical "Oklahoma!". He later discovered the Group Theatre in New York formed by Lee Strasberg and Harold Clurman. This was the first functional school for "Method" acting in America, followed later by The Actors Studio, also under Strasberg. In late September of 1931 the theater presented its first production, "The House of Connelly", with Tone and Morris Carnovsky in the leading roles. Tone appeared in "Big Night" and later appeared in "Success Story", after which Strasberg proclaimed him as the best actor in the company. His performance in "Success Story" also prompted a contract offer from MGM. He moved to Hollywood in November 1932, although his aspirations as an actor did not include becoming a Hollywood star. His first screen appearance was under the Paramount banner, not MGM, in The Wiser Sex (1932) starring Claudette Colbert. The Paramount brass did not see the potential, a telling sign of the chasm between Hollywood acting and that of the theater. Tone, however, was definitely on the "A" List ladder. His first MGM film, Today We Live (1933) co-starred the ambitious Joan Crawford. Here his woes with Hollywood actresses began in earnest. He and Crawford became a couple, and MGM could see the potential for better box office by pairing them in several movies. Tone worked through 1933 with other leading ladies, such as Loretta Young, Miriam Hopkins and Jean Harlow, before he worked again with Crawford. However, he was already being saddled with "the other man" roles. In his next movie with Crawford, Dancing Lady (1933), he was competing with Clark Gable. By their next movie together, Sadie McKee (1934), Tone was the leading man but in forthcoming outings with Crawford he would have other film rivals and his characters tended to be less dynamic than hers. He was loaned to Warner Bros. for Dangerous (1935) with 'Bette Davis'. Davis also became romantically interested in him, and her incipient rivalry with Crawford made her all the more incensed with Crawford on finding out that she was engaged to Tone. Davis was envious and ashamed of her advances toward Tone, and the incident is believed by many sources to be the start of the famous warfare between Crawford and Davis that lasted to their dying days. Tone and Crawford did marry in late 1935, but the chemistry did not gel. Tone was an Eastern blueblood who shunned the artificial Hollywood lifestyle, while the unsophisticated Crawford could not get enough of it, and publicity. Those differences and Crawford's bigger star power became glaringly obvious when the media labeled him "Mr. Joan Crawford". Tone's film career did not match Crawford's phenomenal rise, and he was still dedicated to substantial support of Group Theatre productions. The marriage goals and the money diverged sharply; they divorced in March of 1939. Tone was most definitely becoming a matinée idol name. In 1935 he had two big hits, proving his wide range and depth as an actor. His whimsical demeanor lent well to comedic roles, which is why his wisecracking Lt. Forsythe in The Lives of a Bengal Lancer (1935) rang true. He also had considerable dramatic power, as seen in the second of these movies, the much anticipated Mutiny on the Bounty (1935) with his former co-star Gable. He, Gable and co-star Charles Laughton all received Oscar nominations for best actor. This was a first, and certainly an embarrassment which the Academy sought to remedy by introducing Best Supporting Actor and Actress Oscars the next year. Though Tone had other substantial roles through that decade, he seemed ready for a break with his film career. He suddenly returned to Broadway, and was able to thumb his nose at Hollywood due to the great success of his 1940 role as a newspaperman in Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column". Unfortunately for him, MGM pointed out that he was still under contract to them, so he had to return. Tone had stimulating enough roles while with MGM until 1944, particularly the World War II adventure Five Graves to Cairo (1943) which Cary Grant turned down because he didn't want to spend the summer in the Arizona desert, where it was being shot. Thereafter Tone worked to beat Hollywood at its own game. He freelanced at other studios and concentrated on parts that would expand his talents. He started working towards that goal with Universal's critically successful Phantom Lady (1944), in which he played a psychotic killer. He also began producing films that he felt would be challenging and successful. One of his best efforts in this capacity was the psychological B noir The Man on the Eiffel Tower (1949) as star and producer, with his great friend Burgess Meredith as director. However, his success as an actor and producer didn't extend to his personal life, and he still couldn't get past his weakness for marrying Hollywood starlets. By 1948 he divorced his second wife, Crawford rebound Jean Wallace. Between 1950 and 1952 he was embroiled in the most foolish act of his career: his involvement with actress-turned-prostitute Barbara Payton. Just about everyone in Hollywood warned him against getting involved with Payton, including ex-wife Crawford. He failed to heed those warnings, however, and soon married her. The marriage only lasted a few weeks, and he paid a pretty heavy price: a hospital stay because of some fairly serious injuries (broken cheekbone and nose and a concussion) that required surgery after he was attacked and beaten by one of Payton's most possessive boyfriends, brutish actor Tom Neal. The uproar over this assault ended Neal's acting career. Tone's distancing himself from Hollywood continued into the 1950s, proving that dedicated stage acting and Hollywood usually did not mix. However, his need to adapt and mold the acting profession continued unabated. He saw the great potential of TV to provide both a live and economically filmed (the new videotape format) spectrum of stage plays. For a decade he was heavily involved in the medium and contributed over 30 performances in a number of prestigious TV playhouse productions. He didn't forget Broadway, though. In 1957 he scored a triumph in Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon For The Misbegotten", and even his personal life brightened considerably. His last wife was much more amenable to being a helpmate. Dolores Dorn helped with his ambitious production of "Uncle Vanya" both Off-Broadway and in a lukewarm film version in 1958. When the more formal playhouse programs were replaced by TV drama story hours, Tone was again an enthusiastic contributor. He also worked in episodic TV from the late 1950s, notably a turn in a fondly remembered episode of the classic "Twilight Zone" (1959). He did not give up on the silver screen in his last decade. He turned in a memorable performance as the president in Advise & Consent (1962), directed by Otto Preminger. Though he had planned on retiring from acting at the beginning of the '60s, he in fact was working into the year of his death. Along with co-buying Theater Four in New York to launch new plays, he planned another personal multi-tasking (starring in and directing) film effort of the life of artist Auguste Renoir, but that was not to be. In reality, the title of his last film before his passing was as prophetic for him is for all of humanity – The High Commissioner (1968).

W193, W370, W732 Jacob Gould Schurman

PRESIDENT SCHURMAN DIES. Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, third President of the University, died in New York City August 12 at the age of eighty-eight. For several years he had lived at the University Club in New York, and had never lost his keen interest in Cornell. He came to the University in 1886, the first Sage Professor of Philosophy, and his always-popular lectures on philosophy and ethics were continued after he assumed the Presidency in 1891. He resigned to take effect after the Commencement of 1910. During his twenty-eight years as President, the enrollment of the University increased from about 1,500 students to more than 5,600; the teaching staff from 113 to 629; annual income from $500,000 to more than $3,500,000 and there was immense development of the physical plant including most of the buildings of the State Colleges, the first of the University Dormitories on West Avenue, and many other structures. In his administration, too, the University Summer Sessions were started and the Library grew from 136,000 volumes to more than 600,000. Born on Prince Edward's Island May 22, 1854, President Schurman studied at Prince of Wales College and Acadia College, won the Canadian Gilchrist Scholarship of the University of London in 1875, and there received the AB in 1877 and the AM in 1878. He studied also at the Universities of Paris and Edinburgh, receiving the Edinburgh DSc in 1878 and having won the Hibbert Scholarship open to graduates of all British universities, spent the next two years at Heidelberg, Berlin, Göttingen, and in Italy. He came to Cornell from Dalhousie College where he taught metaphysics and English literature. Many universities in America and abroad awarded him honorary degrees. He spent the year 1898-99 in the Philippines as president of the first US Philippine Commission and helped draw the original charter for the islands, and that of 1912-13 as US Minister to Greece and Montenegro. In 1921 he became US Minister to China and four years later was appointed by President Coolidge Ambassador to Germany. He was in Berlin until December, 1929, and while there raised $500,000 among Americans for a new academic building at Heidelberg University. He published many books on philosophical and historical subjects, and was a keen student of world affairs, lecturing on international relations at California Institute of Technology in 1931-31. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, American Academy in Rome, and an officer of the French Legion of Honor. Mrs. Schurman died in 1930. Of their eight children, five attended the University: the late Robert Schurman '07, George M. Schurman '13, Mrs. Raymond Ware (Catherine Schurman), Sp '14, Jacob G. Schurman, Jr. '17, and Mrs. Vladimir Petro-Pavlovsky (Barbara Schurman) '21, wife of a British Army officer and a passenger on the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm from the Orient.

Jacob Gould Schurman (May 22, 1854 – August 12, 1942) was an Canadian-born educator and diplomat, who served as President of Cornell University and United States Ambassador to Germany. Schurman was born at Freetown, Prince Edward Island on May 22, 1854 the son of Robert and Lydia Schurman. Schurman lived on his parents' farm as a child, then in 1867 took a job at a store near his home, which he held for two years.[2] At the age of fifteen, Schurman entered the Summerside Grammar School on Prince Edward Island, and in 1870 he won a scholarship to study at Prince of Wales College for two years. After Prince of Wales College, he studied for a year and a half at Acadia College in Nova Scotia. While a student at Acadia College, Wolfville, Nova Scotia, in 1875, he won the Canadian Gilchrist scholarship in the University of London, from which he received the degree of BA in 1877 and that of MA in 1878, and in 1877-1880 studied in Paris, Edinburgh and (as Hibbert Fellow) in Heidelberg, Berlin and Göttingen. He was professor of English literature, political economy and psychology at Acadia College in 1880-1882, of metaphysics and English literature at Dalhousie College, Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1882-1886, and of philosophy (Sage professor) at Cornell University in 1886-1892, being Dean of the Sage School of Philosophy in 1891-1892. In 1892 he became the third president of Cornell University, a position he kept until 1920. As Cornell's president, Schurman helped invent the modern state-supported research university. Under the Morrill Act, states were obligated to fund the maintenance of land grant college facilities, but were not obligated to fund operations. Subsequent laws required states to match federal funds for agricultural research stations and cooperative extension. In his inaugural address as Cornell's third president on November 11, 1892, Schurman announced his intention to enlist the financial support of the state. Cornell, which had been offering a four-year scholarship to one student in each New York assembly district every year and was the state's land-grant university, was determined to convince the state to become a benefactor of the university. In 1894, the state legislature voted to give financial support for the establishment of the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine and to make annual appropriations for the college. This set the precedents of privately-controlled, state-supported statutory colleges and cooperation between Cornell and the state. The annual state appropriations were later extended to agriculture, home economics, and following World War II, industrial and labor relations. In 1898, Schurman persuaded the State Legislature to found the first forestry college in North America, the New York State College of Forestry. The College undertook to establish a 30,000-acre (120 km²) demonstration forest in the Adirondacks, funded by New York State. However, the plans of the school's director Bernhard Fernow for the land drew criticism from neighbors, and Governor Benjamin B. Odell vetoed the 1903 appropriation for the school. In response, Cornell closed the school. Subsequently, in 1911, the State Legislature established a New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University, and the remains of Cornell's program became the Department of Natural Resources in its Agriculture College in 1910. The State later followed the same model to establish a state college of ceramics at Alfred University. He was chairman of the First United States Philippine Commission in 1899, and wrote (besides a part of the official report to Congress) Philippine Affairs—A Retrospect and an Outlook (1902). With J. E. Creighton and James Seth he founded in 1892 The Philosophical Review. He also wrote Kantian Ethics and the Ethics of Evolution (1881); The Ethical Import of Darwinism (1888); Belief in God (1890), and Agnosticism and Religion (1896). Schurman served as United States Ambassador to Greece in 1912-13, Ambassador to China between 1921 and 1925, and then as Ambassador to Germany between 1925 and 1929, a position twice previously held by Cornell's first president Andrew Dickson White. In 1917 Schurman was appointed honorary chairman of the American Relief Committee for Greeks of Asia Minor, an organization which provided humanitarian relief to Ottoman Greeks during the Greek genocide. He retired to Bedford Hills, New York in 1930. In 1960, Cornell named the administrative wing of its veterinary school Jacob Gould Schurman Hall in his honor.

W226 Dorothy McCormack

Bethel—Dorothy McCormack Grady died June 10, 2005 in Northfield. She was 88 years old. Born July 2, 1916 in North Andover, Mass., the daughter of John and Gladys (Houghton) McCormack, she attended school in Elmhurst, Queens, N.Y. and graduated from Cornell University, where she was a member of Kappa Delta. She earned Master's Degrees from Columbia and Rutgers Universities, also winning election to Kappa Delta Epsilon and Beta Phi Mu honor societies. She married Allan B. Grady in 1939. He died in 1985. Their daughter, Lael Grady Kirk, died in 1986. She taught in Bethel, Vt. and Peapack, N.J. schools; later serving as assistant librarian in West Morris (NJ) Regional High School and media director at Bedminster (NJ) Elementary School. She was an active member of the New Jersey Library Association, editing the bibliography "New Jersey in the Classroom." A resident of Bedminster, N.J. for 27 years, she served as president of the elementary school PTA and co-chair of the local U.S. Bicentennial committee. She was a founder of the Bedminster-Far Hills Library (now Dillion Library), which she served as president and long-time board member. She was also active in local chapters of the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women. She returned to Bethel June 1978 with her husband, building a home on land adjacent to that once owned by her paternal grandfather. She pursued an active civic life, serving the Bethel Historical Society as a trustee and editing two of its publications, a coloring book entitled "The Story of Bethel," and the memoirs of her father, "Recollections of a Vermont Boyhood." Other local interests included the Women's Club, the Bethel Bicentennial Committee, the local Red Cross, and the Bethel Elementary School program "Environmental Learning for the Future," sponsored by the Vermont Institute of Natural Science. Her biography appeared in the 1968-69 edition of "Who's Who of American Women." She enjoyed a life-long love of travel, exploring the United States with her parents and brother, and the world with her husband, daughter, and friends. In her 80s she traveled the Labrador coast on a French Canadian 62-foot sailing boat, and at the time of her death, had visited most of Vermont's 251 towns. Survivors include two granddaughters, Leslie Kirk Nicholas of Chicago and Stephanie Kirk Newman of Norfolk, Va.; and two great-granddaughters. She was predeceased by her brothers, John and Robert McCormack. Donations in her memory may be made to Bethel Public Library c/o Audrey Turk, P.O. Box 42 Bethel, Vt. 05032; or United Church of Bethel c/o Lawrence Nobile, 163B Bicentennial Lane, Bethel, Vt. 05032. A memorial service will be held Saturday, July 2, 2005 at 11 a.m. at the United Church of Bethel. Arrangements are under the direction of Day's Funeral Home in Randolph.

The Freshman crews of '75 and '76 were extraordinary ones, but that of '78 was a phenomenal one. Shinkel the stroke, who was afterwards to achieve an unenviable notoriety, was yet possessed of rare qualities as an oarsman: a cool head and wonderful strength of muscle, backed up by pure grit.

In 1881 the victors of the Lake George Regatta were sent to compete in the Henley races, where after five weeks' training they lost the three contests in which they were entered. They were not allowed to row in the college race which they especially desired to enter, and in the other races were pitted against the best boat clubs in England. English oarsmen were fair enough to give Cornell the compliment of sending out the best college crew in the world. The crew also rowed in a regatta on the Danube at Vienna, in which, after gaining a lead of four or five lengths, the stroke fainted or pretended to faint. It is hardly necessary to go into details of the wretched affair. The Era summed the whole matter up by saying: "We were beaten in England by the best crews in the world aided by circumstances very unfavorable to us. We were beaten at Vienna through the treachery of a member of our crew. Humiliating as this admission is, we believe it to be true, and in justice to the other members of the crew the facts should be known."

W229 George Meade Emory

Cornell Obituaries – GEORGE M. EMORY, '90 Judge George Meade Emory, LL. B., '90, one of the most prominent lawyers of Seattle, Wash., died in that city Monday, July 9, as a result of being shot twice on the preceding Saturday night by Chester Thompson, the nineteen-year old son of William Thompson, formerly counsel for the Great Northern railway and a nephew of Maurice Thompson, the poet and author. Judge Emory spent his early years in Syracuse, N. Y., removing there from Washington, D. C., his birthplace. His father, who was an army officer, died when he was a young lad and he was brought up in Syracuse by his uncle, Dr. Thomas Emory. He was graduated from the Cornell Law school in 1890 and passed the state Bar examinations in Syracuse, removing soon afterwards to Seattle, where he had since resided.

THE THOMPSON TRIAL. The fifty-nine days beginning with December 6, 1906, and ending with February 2, 1907, will always be memorable in Tacoma as having been the period of the most remarkable legal battle and criminal trial that the Pacific Northwest has ever known, or is ever likely to know. This was the trial of Chester Thompson, then a boy twenty-one years of age, for the murder of former Judge George Meade Emory of Seattle, transferred to the Pierce County courts on a change of venue from King County. Out of it, bringing to a supreme climax its many unusual, startling features, and fairly overwhelming the throngs that jammed the court room day after day, was evolved an address to the jury that has become a classic in legal history—the wonderful plea of Will H. Thompson in behalf of his son. Tacoma was only casually interested when the news came on July 7, 1906, that Judge Emory had been shot down in his own home by young Thompson. There was no mystery in the case. The facts seem to be plain, as told in the newspapers. The boy was wildly infatuated with Miss Charlotte Whittlesey, niece of Judge Emory, and when the latter refused to call the girl to the telephone to talk to Chester, the latter armed himself with a revolver and went to the Emory home. Asking "Where's Charlotte?" he ran into the house and Judge Emory followed. Shots rang out and Emory fell from wounds that proved fatal two days later. It seemed the most wanton of killings, and as Seattle had been stirred by a singular number of similar homicides, the youth was rushed through a mob to jail only with difficulty, and there was a powerful sentiment against him. Rumors of strange conduct on his part coming up immediately, a great newspaper took up the cry that this "murderer must not escape on the grounds of insanity." It was at a time when insanity was being made the defense for Harry Thaw in New York, and in this state for young Sidney Sloane, who killed his father in Spokane; for George Mitchell, who killed Joshua Creffield in Seattle, and for Esther Mitchell, who, in turn, killed her brother. There was sympathy for Will H. Thompson, the father, who was widely known as an attorney, author and orator; for the mother, who lay dying in the home, ignorant of her son's predicament, and for two brothers, Maurice and Oscar Thompson, but little or none for the accused youth in the King County jail. Then the public began to get the measure of Will H. Thompson. At a meeting of lawyers to honor Judge Emory's memory, he had the courage to go and pay sorrowful tribute. His words stirred his hearers to tears as he closed, saying: "If there were one and but one Jingering ray of light in my darkened and silenced home I would give it to illumine the hearts of the widowed wife and the orphaned children of this man who has passed from us, though I and mine should sit in darkness while ever life should last." It began to be realized that this father's fight for his son's life would not be an ordinary one. Setting forth prejudice in his own community, Attorney Thompson had the case transferred to the Pierce County courts. On December 6th the trial began before Judge W. H. Snell, with more than one hundred witnesses subpoenaed. One week was consumed in selecting a jury, which, when sworn on December 13th, consisted of the following Pierce County residents: George Grieb, F. T. Spottswood, J. H. Benston, John M. Cronan, W. S. Peacock, John L. Reese, Harry Graham, Walter Scott, William Watson, F. B. Hoyt, W. A. Porter and Charles Vogel. Hoyt was chosen foreman. The array of legal talent was an imposing one. King County was represented by Kenneth Mackintosh, prosecuting attorney, later judge, and his deputy, John F. Miller, afterward mayor of Seattle. Assisting the prosecution were Walter M. Harvey, then deputy prosecutor of Pierce County, and Thomas Vance of Olympia, who entered the case without compensation because of his long friendship for the Emory family. Will H. Thompson, long considered one of the ablest lawyers of Washington and for several years western attorney for the Great Northern Railway, headed the defense, assisted by W. H. Morris and S. M. Shipley, lawyers, and the latter a legal expert on questions of insanity. The defense admitted from the start that insanity would be the defense. Attorney Thompson even offered to furnish the prosecution with the names of his witnesses many weeks before the trial began. In the court room were a dozen or more distinguished alienists called by both sides to study the case and the defendant, who, throughout the eight weeks of the trial, sat with his eyes on the carpet, seeming oblivious to all that went on. The prosecution's opening statement reciting the cold facts of the homicide disposed of, the defense brought forth the first of the surprises of the keen legal battle. Attorney Thompson made his statement of his case at once, without waiting for the prosecution's direct evidence. It was a simple, intensely personal outline of all that had taken place in his family for years before the murder; how Chester, who had been unusually bright as a child, withdrew from others and would not play with them; how, after ranking high in his high school classes, he found himself utterly unable to do work at the university; how he began to say that his life was ruined because of some work that had been done on his teeth; how he refused to eat with other members of the family or scarcely to speak to them; how he began to walk abroad at night until dawn; and to talk out of his window seemingly to no one; how his infatuation for the Whittlesey girl changed to a sort of idolatry and he began to say that unknown persecutors were keeping him from her; an endless array of earmarks of abnormality, dovetailed into sorrowful glimpses of a home where the mother was dying and where defeat seemed to have come at every turn for the father. It was a recital that deeply impressed and quickened sympathies. Consequently, when the prosecution put on its witnesses to tell the details of the actual homicide, the jurors and the court room crowds saw the tragedy in a softened and melancholy light of all that the father had pictured. The shock of the state's case was gone. Then came a seemingly endless string of defense witnesses, day after day, week after week, who made an open book of the boy's life and who, piece by piece, detail by detail, substantiated all that the father had said, showing beyond doubt that the youth was mentally abnormal, and of a gentle, unoffending nature, but leaving in doubt whether he was possessed of delusions so powerful that he did not know right from wrong. The father himself was three days on the witness stand, sometimes leaving it to argue as attorney over the admissibility of points in his own testimony objected to by the state. Neighbors, family servants, street car men, schoolmates, occasional acquaintances, merchants with whom Chester had traded, teachers, everyone, it seemed, with whom he had come in contact, testified to peculiarities—some trivial, some tending to show the ideas of persecution common in paranoidal forms of insanity. Many medical experts were called, mostly to answer staggeringly long hypothetical questions, by which they said Chester Thompson was insane or wasn't insane, according to what was included or omitted in the questions. The jurors evidently grew very tired of this and admitted afterward that what the physicians said played no part in their verdict. Testimony was completed on January 27th, and Attorney Vance made a caustic argument for the state, flaying the defense theory and assailing the truth of its witnesses. Attorney Thompson's failure to place his son in an asylum, if he believed what he had testified to, was particularly attacked. Then "Old Man Thompson," as they called him at the courthouse, got into action. Everything else in the trial shriveled into insignificance beside the wonderful argument he began on the morning of January 31st. Words of singular emotional power leaped from his lips, and stirring figures of speech piled one on another in amazing pictures of the gloom and sorrow of his home and the mental martyrdom of his son. There were no dry eyes. Some who heard grew hysterical and cries of "don't" or "stop" punctuated dramatic pauses in his fiery appeal. Men who thought they did not know how to weep wept. Jurors and judge wept. Newspapermen scratched away on their copy paper with tears blotting out what they wrote. Thompson had been a Confederate soldier. He had fought with Gordon all around Richmond in the terrible days closing the great Civil war. In the jury box sat one or two ex-Union soldiers, and these his assisting counsel had asked him to challenge. He had refused. Near the opening of his argument he told the jury these facts. But he said he had no fear of injustice from any man who had been brave enough to face the hell of the Richmond trenches, and in a few words he then pictured an impetuous federal charge that had run down Gordon's men, himself among them—a charge so fierce that it left the Confederate line in the dust, demolished. His climax thrilled every one in the packed court room. Tears trickled from the eyes of the Union veterans. There were moments as terrible as other moments were sad. Whirling on Attorney Vance the father cried out: "When you are in a wood and a terrible storm overtakes you; when the huge trees are up-flung from the earth and crash on all sides of you; when the lightning plays and the thunder peals, you do not notice the buzzing of gnats and mosquitoes. After what I have borne, after what I have had to go through, after the sorrow which has been mine, after what I have suffered, the attacks of the attorney for the state, saying I lied, pass me without harm. Crack your little whip! Crack your little whip across my mangled shoulders if you will—I can bear it! If the whiplash of Vance's tongue was all I had to fear; if that was the only shadow across the path of the future, I should be the happiest man alive!" He likened his son's brain to a violin string. "It was tightly drawn. So long as no harsh hand was drawn across it, so long as it was carefully touched, it gave forth a sound of melody. But when came fever, when came a great overmastering, impassioned love, the string snapped. The reason vanished; that was all." "Death," he cried. "Do you think I fear death! Do you think the darkened mind of my son broods on the sting of death? Were I to go to him now and tell him we two had to die, we both would face it unflinchingly. It is not death, it is dishonor, we combat!" In his appeal to the jury not to disagree he begged: "If the sun has to set, let it go down now! If you are going to strike, strike now! I can bear the blow. Do not falter. For God Almighty's sake make a verdict and make it now! I can not go through this again." With all of this emotionalism, sweeping, as it did, everything before it, there was a continually recurrent marshaling of the facts as adduced by the testimony; the lawyer was always at the father's elbow, and an eternal "Why?"

cracked out as he dealt with the state's surmises to show that even by its own attempts to explain the boy's conduct they admitted his abnormality. When he concluded, on the evening of February 1st, it seemed certain that he had won his case, the fee of which was his son's life. The next morning Attorney Mackintosh made an able closing argument for the state and at 4:40 in the afternoon of February 2d the case went to the jury. Two ballots were taken and at 9:40 that night a verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity" was given. Everywhere the verdict was received with approval and applause, not so much through sympathy for the unfortunate youth as for the heroic father who had won his fight. Chester Thompson subsequently was committed to the insane ward at Walla Walla and though released on June 13, 1908, after a jury trial and on the recommendation of the prison physician, he was subsequently recommitted to the Medical Lake Hospital near Spokane to which he went without a guard, giving himself up to the superintendent and telling him that he had come there for treatment. He is there now. According to hospital physicians his case later developed into a typical one of paranoid insanity and it appears that had the Emory tragedy come later, instead of when the youth's delusions were comparatively hidden, the famous trial never would have been necessary at all.

W232 William Hazlitt Smith

EARLIEST ALUMNUS DIES. William Hazlitt Smith '73, earliest living Cornellian and only surviving member of his Class, died September 7, 1950, in Ithaca, where he had practiced law for many years. Born in 1853, he would have been ninety-seven years old September 24. Smith entered the University from Starkey Academy in 1869, the year after Cornell opened, and received the AB in 1873. He taught Latin and Greek in Ithaca Academy for a year, then went into a law office and was admitted to the Bar in 1876. For two or three years, he practiced with his brother, the late Simeon Smith '73. A specialist in titles and real estate, he worked in his office daily until last June 1, and retired from practice July 1, the oldest practicing barrister in New York State, both in years and length of service. He was a former president of the Tompkins County Bar Association, which honored him at a dinner in September, 1948. He was the first president of the Ithaca SPCA, which he and Mrs. Smith helped to organize in the 1890's especially to protect the horses that drew heavy loads up the hills, and was a founder and director of the Cinder Path Club, an organization of bicyclists. In later years, he was an avid follower of big-league baseball and made an annual trip to New York City with his daughter, Madge Smith '09, assistant to the Secretary of the University, to see the Yankees play; the last time in 1949. Miss Smith lives at 120 Oak Avenue, Ithaca. Secretary of his Class, Smith had never missed attending Class Reunions until this year. In 1948, he won the Class Secretaries Association Cup for registering 100 per cent of the living members of his Class. He represented the first Class with living members at the inauguration of President Edmund E. Day in 1937. University records indicate that Smith was probably the third-oldest alumnus still living. Antedating him in years (though not in the University) are George M. McGuire '76 of Santa Barbara, CaL, born March 4, 1853 and Addison L. Ewing '80 of Pacific Palisades, CaL, who was born September 16, 1853, eight days before William Hazlitt Smith.

W233 William Maddocks

William H. Maddocks, chief draughtsman of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, resides at Parsons, Labette county, Kansas. He was born in England in December, 1862. His parents were both natives of England, where his father is superintendent of the Brunswick works of the Patent Shaft & Axletree Company, Limited. He is a man of fine mechanical ability, which was transmitted to his sons, who follow similar professions. Mrs. Maddocks, whose maiden name, was Sarah Ann Orme, is deceased. William H. Maddocks has three brothers now living: Thomas, George and Arthur. Mr. Maddocks attended the common schools, and afterward the grammar and technical schools of his native city, and was later apprenticed to the trade of machinist and draughtsman. He finally located in America, and for a time was at Toronto, Canada. From there he went to Bloomington and Chicago, Illinois, where he was employed on the Chicago & Alton and Chicago & North-Western railroads as a machinist. He chose a floating position in order to better familiarize himself with his chosen profession. In the course of his travels he first visited Kansas about 1882. The following year he entered Cornell University, in New York State, and took a course in mechanical engineering, thus completing his preparation for his chosen life work. Returning to service on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, he served some time as a draughtsman, and did similar work on the Missouri Pacific Railway, at Palestine, Texas. He was later transferred to St. Louis and placed in charge of the draughting department for the entire system, under O. A. Haynes, superintendent of locomotives and cars. In 1889, Mr. Maddocks was called to Parsons, where he received an offer from the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, and immediately assumed the duties of his present position. He prepares designs for the locomotives, machinery, boiler plants, etc., used over the entire system. He has a fine office at the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway shops in Parsons; his duties call him away on the road frequently. Mr. Maddocks married Ada Bate, a daughter of J. R. and Sarah (Stearn) Bate, formerly of Michigan, but now of Parsons, Kansas. He has invested in some fine residence property in Parsons, and recently remodeled his home. Mr. Maddocks is a man of sterling worth and integrity. He is a prominent member of the Republican party in his section, and his convictions in matters of public interest are based on accurate information and correct conclusions. He affiliates with Masonic bodies, is a Knight Templar and a member of Abdallah Temple of Mystic Shriners, of Leavenworth, Kansas. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum and also of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, with headquarters in New York City, being the only member from Kansas. He is also a member of St. Louis and, Chicago Railroad clubs. In his religious views, he adheres to the Episcopal faith and is a regular attendant at church. He stands high in his chosen profession and has reached a degree of efficiency attained by few. He has made an excellent record, rarely bettered in all its particulars. He takes great personal pride in keeping abreast of the times, and uses only the best and most modern plans and materials, many of which are the result of his striking originality, skill and genius.

W234 Robert Elmer Rutherford

DEATH OF ROBERT E. RUTHERFORD. A LIFE FULL OF PROMISE ENDED. The many friends of Robert E. Rutherford in this city will be surprised and pained to learn of his death at the residence of his uncle, Jacob Banta, at Conklin Thursday night at midnight. He was only 29 years of age, a young man of fine mental qualities and character. He was a graduate of the High School in '82 and of Cornell University in 1887. Since his graduation from Cornell, he has been a student in the law office of Messrs. Carver, Deyo & Jenkins, of this, and was about ready to take his examination for admission to the Bar. His father, Christopher Rutherford, died Sept. 1st 1888, and just one year from that day his mother was buried in Spring Forest cemetery. Last March his only sister also died, and Robert's death removes the last member of the family. His illness was a very brief one. Two weeks ago Monday he was at his desk as usual, but complaining of not feeling well, went to his home on South Water street and a physician was called, who pronounced his case typhoid fever. He seemed discouraged from the start, and asked to be taken to his uncle's house, saying if he had to die, he wished to die among friends. And so he was taken to his friends, and there, surrounded by those nearest him by ties of kinship and affection, and guarded by all that love and skill could suggest, his young life burned out. His was a perfectly beautiful character, retiring, gentle, sympathetic. With a mind rich in natural endowments and cultivated by years of careful study, he was just ready to start out into his chosen profession, when the summons came to attend the family reunion beyond.

Robert E. Rutherford, Cornell '87, died of typhoid fever, at the residence of his uncle near Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 19. Mr. Rutherford was one of the Commencement speakers in '87, and since his graduation has devoted himself to the study of law at Binghamton. He expected to be admitted to the bar at the next session of court. His death is peculiarly sad, as he is the last of his family, his father, mother, and sister, together with himself, having died within about two years.

W236 John Taylor Nichols

John Taylor Nichols. This prominent lawyer of Detroit, where he has been active in his profession, and also as a business man for the last twenty years, is a representative in the third generation of the Nichols family, which has probably contributed more to the development of manufacturing and industry in the state of Michigan than any other individual family group. The grandfather of Mr. Nichols, the lawyer, was John Nichols, one of the founders and for many years president of Nichols & Shepard Company, of Battle Creek manufacturers. His father is Hon. Edwin C. Nichols, who still has a guiding hand in the industrial fortunes of the city of Battle Creek and is president of the Nichols and Shepard Company. Mr. John T. Nichols himself has an executive position as vice president in the great company founded by his father, and developed largely by its members. In a history of the notable personalities of the State of Michigan, there is an obvious propriety in giving space to the record of the various members of the Nichols family. The late John Nichols, the pioneer of the name in Michigan, was born at Liverpool, Onondaga county, New York, January 1, 1814, came to Michigan territory in 1835, and after a long and remarkable career died at his home in Battle Creek, April 15, 1891. John Nichols was one of the remarkable men of the last century. His work was largely created, and his industry and character became the foundation on which rests the material prosperity of one of Michigan's larger cities. Personally he was a man of untiring industry, great executive capacity, indomitable energy and perseverance, and never faltered before the untried obstacles that barred his way. Business sagacity was less an element in his success than solid ability to do and direct others in doing. His parents, Eliakim and Sally Nichols were early settlers of western New York. It was in practically a pioneer community that John Nichols spent his youth, and had only limited schooling in the modern sense. When thirteen years old he began figuring his own fortune, and at Palmyra became an apprentice to the moulder's and iron foundry trade. This trade became the basis for his subsequent career. In 1834 at the age of twenty, he married Miss Nancy C. Galloway. They had an unusually long and happy wedded life, which was prolonged beyond their golden wedding anniversary, until the death of Mrs. Nichols, December 26, 1892. In 1835 John Nichols brought his young wife to the territory of Michigan, the settlement of which was only begun in most of the southern counties. After one year in Lenawee county he found work in the machine shops then maintained by the state of Michigan, which was constructing the Michigan

Central Railroad. In 1848, he went west and located at Battle Creek, which thereafter was his home, and was the seat of his larger enterprise. He was first engaged in the manufacture of stoves, plows and other farm implements and iron castings. To his plant were afterwards added facilities for making engines, saw mill and grist mill machinery. In 1850 he crossed the plains into California, but after a brief residence there returned, and formed a partnership with David Shepard, thus beginning the firm name which has continued for more than sixty years, and now has an international reputation wherever agriculture flourishes. Their earliest output was one of the crude types of grain threshers in use during the decade of the fifties. They made a good machine, however, and they invented great improvements which soon made it the leading threshing machine of its day and generation. Their business ever since has kept abreast of the inventions and facilities of each succeeding decade. It was largely owing to the genius and practical business talent of Mr. Nichols that the product acquired its popularity, and in a few years the first shop was unable to fill the orders for the "Vibrator" threshing machine as it was called. In 1870 a stock company was organized, and extensive works were built on the east side of Battle Creek, at the place now called Nichols Station. The late John Nichols was not only a great industrial captain, but he also possessed a generous public spirit and interest in the welfare of his fellow men. He was the first to undertake the building of homes for workingmen, and he did much to make the lives of his employes more comfortable. The Nichols Memorial Hospital in Battle Creek is a monument to his substantial interest in his community. In politics he was first a Whig and afterwards equally loyal to the Republican principles. He never sought office and was quite content to do his duty through the avenues of private citizenship. A great lover of forest and streams, he was an eager sportsman, and for many years it was his delight to take a party of invited friends into the wilds of the north and west during the autumn hunting season. For forty-four successive years did he follow this most interesting habit, and the "Vibrator" hunting party, of which he was the host and directing spirit, with its multitude of people, its pack of hounds and the camp equipage and supplies for entertaining most royally his friends and the passers-by for many week, was one of the notable events of each season. Many scores of men in Michigan and elsewhere will recall with interest and pleasure his generous hospitality. The late John Nichols was the father of three children. His daughter, Mrs. Helen N. Caldwell, died March 8, 1903, and a younger daughter, Mary Elizabeth Nichols, died in 1854. His only son and surviving child is Hon. Edwin C. Nichols. Edwin C. Nichols, both during his father's lifetime and since, has been one of the vital forces in the progress of Battle Creek and the State of Michigan. He was born in Lenawee county, at the town of Clinton, July 20, 1838, only about one year after Michigan became a state. Educated in the schools of Battle Creek, he received his practical education for a career in the industry founded by his father. He started in at the bottom and learned every detail thoroughly. Mr. Nichols has been identified with the Nichols & Shepard Company, since 1857, and to him is due the credit for the later successful enlargement of the industry. The plant at Battle Creek as developed under his presidency now covers about forty acres of ground, gives employment to five or six hundred skilled workmen, and its product in threshing machines finds a market in all parts of the world. Mr. Nichols is also president of the Old National Bank of Battle Creek, and he is director of half a dozen or more large local industries and business enterprises of that city. In politics Edwin C. Nichols has done much for the Republican party in Michigan. He was a delegate to the constitutional convention. He has steadily refused all the larger political honors, such as nomination to congress and for governor, but has served his home city as mayor, as president of the school board, and was the first president of the board of public works of Battle Creek. Edwin C. Nichols is a Knights Templar Mason, is prominent in the club life of Battle Creek, and is also well known in Detroit, where he has membership in the Detroit Club, the Detroit Country Club, and the Yondotega Club. He belongs to the old and exclusive Chicago Club of Chicago. While not a member of any particular church, he has always been liberal in his support of religion and benevolence. The Nichols Memorial Hospital at Battle Creek is an institution in which he is much interested, and he has done much to support and maintain this hospital. Battle Creek both in its past and present attainments owes much to the broad capacity and ability of Mr. Nichols. Edwin C. Nichols in 1860 married Sarah J. Rowan of Argyle, New York. She was a daughter of James Hvatt and at her death in 1897 she left three children. These are Mrs. Helen N. Newberry of Chicago, Illinois; Mrs. Harriet Atterbury of Detroit; and John T. Nichols of Detroit. All the children were born and partly educated in Battle Creek. Both the daughters completed their education in a Seminary for young ladies near Boston, Massachusetts. The only male representative of the Nichols family in its third generation in Michigan, John Taylor Nichols was born in Battle Creek on February 3, 1868. From the public schools of his native city he entered Cornell University, where he was graduated with the class of 1889 in the literary department. In 1892 he was graduated LL. B. from the Harvard Law School, and in the same year was admitted to the bar of Calhoun county. Mr. Nichols was admitted to practice in the Federal court, in 1894. His practice as a lawyer began in Battle Creek in the offices of Hulbert & Meetcham. After about a year, in 1893, he located in Detroit, and was connected with the firm of Russel & Campbell until 1889. Since that year he has practiced alone. Mr. Nichols has membership in the Detroit and Michigan Bar Associations. As already stated he is vice president of the Nichols and Shepard Company of Battle Creek and is a director in the Oak Belting Company of Detroit. Socially Mr. Nichols has membership in the Detroit Club, the Yantodega Club, the Racquet Club, the Country Club, and the New Detroit Athletic Club. Mr. Nichols married Helen Beaudrier de Morat of Philadelphia, the daughter of Oliver Beaudrier de Morat. They are the parents of the following children, who are the fourth generation of the Nichols name in Michigan: Helen Beaudrier de Morat Nichols, and Joan Nichols.

W238 Herbert Edwin Baright

Obituary – Dr. Herbert E. Baright '89. Dr. Herbert Edwin Baright died in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on May 27, after an illness of several months following a general breakdown suffered in January. He was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on January 3, 1868, and received the degree of B.S. at Cornell in 1889. He was master of the chimes from 1886 to 1889, class treasurer in his sophomore year, and a member of the C. U. C. A., and was one of the ten delegates from Cornell to the first Young Men's Conference held in Northfield, Mass. In 1893 he was graduated from the University of Michigan, later studying in Vienna, Austria. In 1897-8 he taught in Mount Herman School, and for the next four years he was a physician at the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie. Then for eight years he was a physician at the Clifton Springs, N. Y., Sanitarium, and while located in Clifton Springs, he started the publication of The Daily Bible. Since leaving there he has conducted a sanitarium in Saratoga Springs. He was a fellow of the Academy of Medicine. Surviving him are his widow, Irene Benham Baright, his mother, Dr. Julia S. Baright, and his sister, Mrs. Leon R. Alexander.

Chapter IV, Memories – Cortlandt Donaldson/Virginia Donaldson. Cortlandt B. Donaldson was born in Cliffside Park, N.J., the son of the Rev. George Donaldson, a doctor of divinity, before the turn of the century. He and his family would come out to Cranberry Pond, newly named Cedar Lake, in 1907 by horse and buggy. "It would take the better part of a day, via Montclair and old Bloomfield Avenue," he recalls. ...Cortlandt's father Dr. George was born the year the Civil War ended, and his son says of him, "My father was an adventuresome person for being a very conservative man." George Donaldson was the first person in Cliffside Park to own an automobile—a 1907 Elmore." ...Dr. George Huntington Donaldson was born in Chatauqua County, New York in 1864. After attending Gilbertsville Academy in Gilbertsville, N.Y. he went to Cornell, graduating with the class of '88. After receiving a degree from Union Theologica Seminary he married Etta Beekman in New York City and completed a tour of the world in two years. Thereafter he held several pastorates near New York. After obtaining a Ph.D. from New York University he took up teaching in the New York City schools, continuing 30 years till he retired three years ago. The Board of Education states that his service was eminently satisfactory throughout, characterized by high intelligence, diligence and the finest quality of loyalty and fidelity to duty. About 1898 the Doctor and his family moved to Edgewater Heights, New Jersey where they were among the first residents. The Doctor became active in community affairs and was instrumental in founding the Grantwood Congregational Church. During his lifetime he was an active temperance leader, a member of the committee for furthering interest in participating in the League of Nations, a member of the International Labour Organization for furtherance of peace, the National Geographic Society, the Travel Club, the Jersey City Presbytery, the Foreign Policy Association of Cliffside Leisure-time Council, and various School societies.

W241 George Grover Munger

Obituaries – GEORGE GROVER MUNGER '88, until his retirement five years ago a lawyer in Syracuse, died on March 17 at his home in Syracuse, after a long illness. He was born in South Sodus, N. Y., sixty-seven years ago, the son of Rev. Reuben and Estelle Hinman Munger. He received the degree of A.B. His wife, Mrs. Ada Munger, a son, G. DeWitt Munger, and a brother, survive him.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 34, No. 24, 31 Mar 1932, p. 300.

George Grover Munger was born January 29, 1865, at South Sodus, Wayne county. New York, his father then being pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at that place. His early education was obtained in the schools of the different charges his itinerant father filled, but he was reared under the best home influences and the instruction of his scholarly father and accomplished mother counted more in those formative days than school instruction. At Auburn and at Ithaca he had the benefit of the high school courses and was fully prepared for college admission. He then entered Cornell University, specialized in history and political economy and was graduated Bachelor of Arts, class of '88. Choosing the profession of law he studied under the preceptorship of F. L. Manning, of Waterloo, New York, and in 1890 was admitted to the bar. He chose Syracuse as a location, was a partner with H. H. Bacon for one year, but since 1892 has practiced alone. While his practice is general in character he specializes in the law of real estate and of corporations, transacting a large business in the State and Federal courts of the district. In 1904 he was appointed receiver for the Royal Templars of Temperance, and has been called to fill other positions of trust and responsibility. He is devoted to his profession, but has outside business interests and is highly regarded as both a professional and business man. He is a member of the various bar associations, and is interested in those movements intended to make communities better places in which to live. His church affiliation is with the denomination whose ministry his honored father graced, and he serves Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church of Syracuse as trustee. He is one of the stewards of the Central New York Conference, a member of the Permanent Fund Commission and holds other positions of the conference open to a layman. He is a member of Central City Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons; Central City Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Central City Commandery Knights Templar; the Citizens' and University clubs; the

New York State Historical Society and American Historical Association. In political faith he is a Republican, but serves as a private in the ranks, seeking no political office for himself. Mr. Munger married, September 26, 1894, Ada M. Bishop, of St. Paul, Minnesota. Their only son, George DeWitt Munger, is a student at Syracuse University, class of 1919.

W242 Charles Edward Shinaman

Charles Edward Shinaman, attorney at law, with offices in the White Memorial building, was born in Marshville, Montgomery county, New York, June 12, 1867. Henry Shinaman, his father, was a blacksmith, who in 1846 came to the new world from Lauenfoerde, on the Weser river, Hanover, Germany, and settled in Marshville, New York. He died in 1874 and was long survived by his wife, Mrs. Caroline (Maertens) Shinaman, also from Lauenfoerde, who died in February, 1907. The ancestors of the family were artisans and agriculturists. The first step which marked the progress of Charles Edward Shinaman was the mastery of the common branches of learning as taught in the district school of Marshville. He was afterward graduated from the union free schools at Canajoharie, New York, and matriculated in Cornell University, from which he was graduated with the B. L. degree in 1889. He displayed marked strength of character and strong purpose by providing for his own support during his college days. He was also very active in all college lines. Pursuing a four years' military course at Cornell, he became captain of his company there and is now eligible to military service with a commission in the United States army. During his college days he was connected with the Cornell Daily Sun as editor and during his senior year as business manager, and placed the paper on a paying basis through capable control, executive ability and indefatigable enterprise. Coming to Syracuse on the completion of his collegiate course, Mr. Shinaman entered the law offices of Goodelle & Nottingham as a student and after thorough preliminary reading was admitted to the bar in 1891. He then began practice in association with the firm of White & King, and when Mr. King died the firm became White & Cheney, Mr. Shinaman remaining as assistant in the law office from 1893 until 1898, when he was admitted to a partnership under the firm style of White, Cheney & Shinaman. There was no further change in the partnership until 1905, when the admission of a fourth partner led to the adoption of the firm name of White, Cheney, Shinaman & O'Neil. Mr. Shinaman specializes in corporation law and has handled various cases of local importance. In the line of his profession he holds membership relations with the Onondaga County Bar Association and the New York State Bar Association. Aside from his practice he is a director of various corporations, of which he is also the attorney. Mr. Shinaman was married in 1905 to Miss Bertha Kocher, of Marshville, New York, and the same year they went abroad, visiting many points of historic, modern and scenic interest in the old world. They reside at 207 Highland avenue and have an extensive circle of friends in the city. Mr. Shinaman is a member of Central City Lodge, No. 305, F. & A. M., and the Knights of Pythias Lodge, No. 215. He also belongs to the Citizens' Club and the University Club of Syracuse, and to the Cornell Club of New York city. In political circles in this part of the state he has been very active and prominent, serving on the city and county committees, and from 1892 until 1900 being the clerk of the board of supervisors of Onondaga county. During the same period he was secretary of the republican county committee of Onondaga county and has frequently been a delegate to the conventions of the party, his opinions carrying weight in its councils. He is a splendid example of the self-reliant, energetic man, who accomplishes what he undertakes by reason of practical, systematic methods. In this age of bustling activity his forcefulness and his enterprise, and unfeigned cordiality and his deference for the opinion of others have made him popular.

W245 & W409 Veranus Alva Moore

DEAN V. A. MOORE DIES. EMERITUS DEAN OF VETERINARY COLLEGE. SERVED CORNELL FOR 33 YEARS—NOTED IN HEALTH WORK. Dr. Veranus Alva Moore '87, dean emeritus of the College of Veterinary Medicine, died on February 11 in the Ithaca Memorial Hospital, of which institution he was superintendent. He was seventy-one years of age. Death followed an intestinal operation and resulted from heart disease. Dr. Moore served Cornell for thirty-three years. Nine years after he received the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1887, he became a professor on the original Faculty of the College of Veterinary Medicine. In 1908, he was appointed dean, serving until his retirement in 1929, when he became professor of veterinary pathology, emeritus. After his graduation from Cornell Dr. Moore studied medicine. He developed interest in the profession through an accident that crippled him as a young man. When he was twenty-five years old, a successful operation permitted him to walk once more without the aid of crutches. He took the degree of Doctor of Medicine from Columbian (now George Washington) University in 1890. The University of Pennsylvania conferred the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine in 1911 and Syracuse University the degree of Doctor of Science in 1919. Dr. Moore's international reputation in science rested upon his work in the field of tuberculosis, but he was also well known for his work in infectious diseases and bacteriology. Early in January, Dr. Moore was made a fellow in the Royal College of Surgeons of London. It was the last of a long line of honors to come him during his lifetime. He was a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, and Phi Sigma Kappa. President Hoover named him a member of the White House Conference on Child Health. Dean Moore was born in Houndsfield, N. Y., April 13, 1859. In 1890, he became engaged in investigations of infectious diseases for the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture. He became chief of the Division of Animal Pathology before he returned to Cornell in 1896 as professor of comparative pathology, bacteriology, and meat inspection. Dr. Moore was brought to Cornell as a teacher by Dr. James Law, who organized the College of Veterinary Medicine. It was Dr. Law whom Dr. Moore succeeded as dean in 1908. When he retired in 1929 from the Faculty, Dr. Moore planned to devote his time to research, but his interest in medicine and public health led him to accept the superintendency of the Ithaca Memorial Hospital. During his term he saw brought to fruition a project in which he was long interested, the establishment of the Tompkins County Laboratory. His connection with the Ithaca Hospital was only one of many in the city of Ithaca. He was for twelve years a member of the Board of Education and of the Board of Health. He also served the Hospital as a trustee. He was a member of the Rotary Club and a director of the Savings and Loan Association. Dr. Moore was prolific with his pen. His writings included Laboratory Directions for Beginners in Bacteriology, The Pathology and Differential Diagnosis of Infectious Diseases of Animals, The Principles of Microbiology, Bovine Tuberculosis and Its Control, and many contributions to scientific journals. President Farrand paid this tribute to Dean Moore: "It is hard to picture Cornell without the quiet, lovable, trusted figure of Dean Moore. It is doubtful if there was any man whose passing could have brought the same feeling of sadness to so many members of the community, present and past. "For more than forty years, Dean Moore played, an important part in the building of a university. It was not alone his unchallenged leadership in the field of veterinary medicine that gave him his peculiar influence. It was not even his sturdy insistence upon the best scientific standards that won the admiration of his colleagues in all the faculties. It was the sterling character of the man, and the simple, winning, sympathetic personality that gave to his professional leadership its unusual touch. "The State and the city have lost a great servant, and Cornell University one of its best loved men." Dr. Walter L. Williams, professor of veterinary surgery, emeritus, said: "In the death of Dr. V. A. Moore the veterinary profession of America loses one of its most conspicuous members. As a teacher he wielded great influence upon the veterinary student body. Under his administration as dean, the Veterinary College made continuous and notable advancement in its visible equipment, in the size and strength of its Faculty, and in the character of its educational and research work." Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "I join with a host of friends and admirers of Dean V. A. Moore in mourning his death, which is not only a great loss to his family but to his community and State as well as to Cornell University, which he served so long and well." Funeral services were held on February 13 at the First Methodist Church, Ithaca. He is survived by his widow, Mary Louise Moore; a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Shackelton '20; two sons, Dr. Erwin V. Moore '17 and Dr. Norman Moore '23, and three brothers, Walter Moore, Fred Moore, and William Moore.

Veranus Alva Moore was born at Houndsfield, Jefferson County, New York, April 13, 1859. His parents were Alva and Antoinette Eastman Moore. His father died when

Veranus was thirteen years of age and the son worked on a farm to support himself and to assist his mother and the other children. In the course of his farm work he suffered a serious infection of the foot caused by stepping on a nail and the long treatment he received at Bellevue Hospital and elsewhere (in days when "Listerism" was a subject of merriment to the medical profession) awakened his interest in the obscure but fascinating problems of disease. In the intervals of hospital treatment he taught district school, and after studying at Mexico Academy in Oswego County he entered Cornell in the fall of 1883. He earned his way through college in spite of the fact that he still used crutches until his junior year. While at Ithaca, he specialized in pre-medical subjects and came under the inspiring influence of Burt G. Wilder and of James Law (who had studied with Lister at Edinburgh). So faithful and successful was the work of Mr. Moore that the required studies for graduation had been completed in the early spring of his senior year (1887). At that time there came a request from Dr. D. E. Salmon, and Dr. Theobald Smith of the Bureau of Animal Industry in Washington, for an assistant. Mr. Moore was recommended for that position and was accepted, the university granting him leave of absence for the remainder of the school year. He returned and graduated with his class in June. In the Bureau at that time were Daniel E. Salmon, by whose efforts the Bureau had been established, and Theobald Smith, whose epoch-making discovery of the intermediate host in the transmission of Texas fever to cattle paved the way for later discoveries concerning the role played by insects and their close allies in transmitting disease to human beings. Moore's interest in medicine was further intensified in the atmosphere of scientific investigation at the Bureau. Fortunately for him, the Columbian Medical School (now George Washington University Medical School), held its lectures and laboratory work in the late afternoon and evening. After carrying on his scientific work all day in the Bureau, with unbounded energy he took up the study of medicine, completed the course and graduated in 1890 with the degree of M.D. He then was appointed demonstrator in the school, and from 1894 to 1896 served as professor of normal histology. When Dr. Theobald Smith went to Harvard in 1895, Dr. Moore served as chief of the division of pathology in the Bureau till 1896. At this time the New York State Veterinary College opened its doors, and Dr. Moore was called to the professorship of Pathology, Bacteriology and Meat Inspection. He built up an admirable department, and the services he rendered to the livestock owners of the state and the nation were widely recognized. He also did yeoman service in helping to free the veterinary profession and the community from opinions without foundation, and put in their place the sound knowledge which bacteriology and the new pathology had made available.

To this end he published many papers (some 264), gave numerous addresses and prepared several books in his field. Among these are: Directions for Beginners in Bacteriology, The Pathology and Differential Diagnosis of Infectious Diseases of Animals, Bovine Tuberculosis and its Control. On the establishment of the Cornell University Medical College, Dr. Moore gave instruction from 1898-1910 to the medical students in the Ithaca Division, and gave these young people a broad outlook upon comparative bacteriology and pathology. In 1908, on the retirement of Dr. James Law at the age of seventy, Dr. Moore was chosen to succeed him as Dean of the Veterinary College, and continued in that office for twenty-one years. He brought to this important position the broad training which had come from his nine years at the Bureau of Animal Industry in Washington with its national outlook, and an intimate knowledge of the actual problems confronting the stock owners of every county in New York State. In 1909 his experience was further increased by study and observation of the efforts toward tuberculosis control in cattle made in the several countries of Europe on a trip made in the interest of the New York State Department of Agriculture. Dr. Moore brought with him to the deanship that precious quality of sympathy, which was his by nature and which had been greatly developed by his contact with the best minds in the country. He not only knew the needs of the stock owners of the state and country, but he knew the necessity of securing and retaining men of the highest grade for the teaching and research staff of the college. During his twenty-one years administration as Dean, he had the satisfaction of seeing notable advances in every department of the college. When he became Dean the annual appropriation for maintenance was $30,000. So skillful was Dr. Moore in making known the widespread benefits arising from the work of the college, and so eloquent and persuasive was his presentation of the needs and the benefits to come, that, when he retired, the annual appropriation for maintenance had increased almost six fold, that is, to $178,955. The six buildings and equipment in 1908 had cost $150,000. The eight buildings and equipment added during his administration cost an additional $366,000. The staff of thirteen in 1908 had increased to thirty in 1929; there were 80 enrolled students in 1908, and 134 in 1929. Up to 1908 the college had graduated one hundred and fifty-three; to these were added 550, making a total alumni body of 703. Up to 1916 the course had been three years long, since then it has been four years. As there was no place in the state where diagnoses could be made of such diseases as anthrax, blackleg, glanders, rabies, tuberculosis and other animal diseases, the Department of Bacteriology and Pathology established a laboratory for this purpose where specimens could be examined and information given. This diagnostic work has constantly increased in volume and importance. It is almost self-evident that an institute like the veterinary college in a great university cannot limit its facilities to undergraduates. Provision must be made for graduate work, and opportunity offered to practitioners who wish to become acquainted with the latest knowledge and the latest methods. Dr. Moore always had in mind the students and what was for their advantage, and after they became alumni he did not forget them. Every year just before Christmas he sent a letter to each, telling of the more important changes in the university as a whole, and then more particularly of the incidents in the past year at the college, the successes of the investigations by the staff and other matters which he thought might interest the alumni and make them feel that they were still a part of their alma mater. In 1909, he established the Conference of Veterinarians, a two-day session in which all matters of present vital interest to the profession are taken up and considered by alumni and men eminent in the state and in the United States. There are also clinics in which the new things in surgery and medicine are demonstrated. Every year more and more alumni return to the conferences, and the non-alumni practitioners of the state are much in evidence. Not alone in his official capacity as teacher and administrator did Dr. Moore meet the students and alumni on a friendly footing, but his home was open to them and they were sure of a friendly welcome by that beautiful household of father and mother, two sons and a daughter. What that friendly home influence has meant to the successive classes of the college, no one can estimate. In its hour of need Dr. Moore did not forget his country, but served in the Surgeon General's office where he was assigned to the duty of helping to organize the veterinary corps of the United States Army. Perhaps in no other way could be shown more clearly the honor and esteem in which Dr. Moore was held in the university community than by the statement that he was chosen by the University Faculty as one of its three representatives on the University Board of Trustees. This position he held from 1926 till his retirement in 1929. On retiring from the Veterinary College in 1929 at the age of 70, Dr. Moore had planned to devote his remaining years to a quiet life of research, and especially to the preparation of a history of Veterinary Medicine in America, but circumstances determined otherwise. He had been on the Ithaca Board of Health for twelve years, and had served for twelve years on the Board of Education. He had been a trustee of the Ithaca hospital since 1918, and a member of the medical staff from its foundation. He had urged and helped to bring into being the county laboratory, the contagious wing of the hospital and the nurses' home. It was perfectly natural therefore for the trustees of the hospital to turn to Dr. Moore, who to them seemed free, and ask him to assume the duties of superintendent, and, with his tried skill in institutional management, to straighten out the tangled finances, stop the growing deficit, and bring about genuine team work among all connected with the hospital. Dr. Moore put aside his plans for freedom from administrative cares because there seemed to be here a place where he could be of real service. He brought to this position very definite knowledge of the best practice in hospital management at the present day, and knew all too well its defects in earlier years. He brought also the precious faith in human nature which he believed could be counted on when rightly appealed to. One of his first efforts when he assumed the position in the autumn of 1929 was to try to make all connected with the hospital from the visiting physicians to the lowest employee see what to him was so clear: "that in a hospital, the patient is always first." As a patient in Bellevue, Dr. Moore had seen the beginnings of the first training school for nurses in the country. He naturally therefore had a deep interest in the nurses' training school in the Ithaca hospital, and had far-seeing plans for improving it, and for making it one of the leading schools in the country by a combination with the College of Home Economics in Cornell University. All of his constructive work, and plans were making notable progress when, alas, he himself came to need the ministrations of his own hospital. There on the morning of February 11, 1931 he passed from sleep in life to the dreamless sleep of death. Simon Henry Gage.

The Stanford School of Earth Sciences has received a unique

gift: the diploma presented to geologist George Hall Ashley at Stanford commencement in 1894—the first doctor of philosophy degree ever awarded by the University. Damaged by fire but still readable, the diploma was presented to Dean Allan Cox and Prof. James C. Ingle, chairman of the Geology Department, by Ashley's granddaughter, Helen Ross Staley, an architect who lives in Pasadena. Ingle plans to have the document restored. Ashley had a distinguished career culminating in the position of Pennsylvania state geologist. Between 1910 and 1944, he was included among the 1,000 leading American scientist in six editions of American Men of Science. Ashley received his undergraduate degree, mechanical engineer in electricity, from Cornell in 1889. John Casper Branner hired him as his assistant on the Arkansas Geological Survey in the summer of 1891 and brought him to Stanford that fall. Branner was chairman of the Geology Department when Stanford held its first classes in 1891. Nine graduate students, including Ashley, received master's degrees at the 1892 commencement, but no doctorates were awarded until 1894, when Ashley received his doctorate in geology. No more doctorates were presented until 1896. In 1895 Ashley married Mary Elizabeth Martin, who had been a fellow student at Stanford along with Herbert Hoover and his future bride, Lou Henry. Ashley began his career as a teacher, first in high schools and later in colleges. He taught both biology and geology at the College of Charleston (South Carolina) and pharmacognosy at a Charleston medical college. After spending three summers mapping the Cumberland Gap coalfield for the U.S. Geological Survey, he joined the survey in 1903. During his USGS years, he wrote two books about coal resources and occasionally served as acting director of the agency. In 1919 Ashley became Pennsylvania's state geologist and after building a state geological survey "from scratch" began identifying the commonwealth's coal and mineral resources. He was a prolific writer as well as a leader of professional, civic, and religious organizations. He was 80 years old when he retired in 1946, but he continued to work as a consultant, investigating Ute coal lands in Colorado for the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs and serving a term as president of the Society of Economic Geologists. Ashley died in 1951 at the age of 85. Staley, one of his 62 descendants, remembers that her grandfather was 6 feet 4 inches tall and wore size 14 custom-made shoes. One great-great-grandson is a geologist employed by the state of Vermont.

MEMORIALIZE ANDERSON. '96 Leroy Anderson Dam, second largest earth-filled dam in California and named for the late Leroy Anderson '96, was dedicated April 25 at ceremonies in Madrone, Cal., at which Governor Earl Warren of California spoke. Anderson, an orchardist in San Jose for many years, was long an advocate of water conservation, serving as president of the Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation District from 1929-33 and as secretary for the next four years. He died April 28, 1949. Anderson was director of the California Polytechnic School, a secondary school of agricultural, mechanical, and household arts at San Luis Obispo, from 1902-08; and professor of agricultural practice and superintendent of farm schools at the University of California from 1908-13. He received the BS in 1896, the MSA in 1897, and the PhD in 1902 at Cornell. Leroy Anderson Dam forms a reservoir of 75,000 acre-feet of water to serve the residents of Santa Clara Valley.

In the Ninth Annual Report of the station, 1896, Professor Wing reported on the first 5 years of milk records for the Cornell herd, and he stated further, "We have also been able to test the weekly production of several herds of 'thoroughbred' cattle in various parts of the state." This work actually began in 1894 when in response to several breeders' associations the station agreed to send an authorized representative to supervise the milk and butter records of "thoroughbred" cows for anyone desiring such records made, upon conditions laid down by the station. Nearly all calls for this service came from members of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. This association in 1885 had adopted a set of rules establishing what became known as a system of Advanced Registry into which no cow was allowed to be entered until she made a certain record for milk or butter production, the amount of this record depending on her age. Tests were made for 7 days and later for 30 days. The first report of these records made on breeders' herds was in Bulletin 152, "Studies Drawn from Officially Authenticated Tests of Holstein-Friesian Cows," by H. H. Wing and Leroy Anderson. These records were from eight different herds and 153 different animals. Eleven different men supervised the tests reported in this bulletin; among them were Professor Wing, George C. Watson, Leroy Anderson, and Hugh C. Troy. Later, Troy became a prominent professor in dairy manufacturing at Cornell. During the year 1899, Leroy Anderson resigned to establish a Department of Animal Industry and Dairy Husbandry at the University of California.

LEROY ANDERSON, 1902-1907. Appointed in May 1902, Leroy Anderson was instrumental in establishing the California Polytechnic as the first institution in the state to teach agriculture at the secondary level and the only institution other than the University of California where agriculture was taught. Born in Magee, New York in 1866, Anderson earned his PhD in 1897 at Cornell University. He taught there until 1900, when he came to California to join the agriculture faculty at the University of California. His recommendations for the Polytechnic School, submitted at the request of the board of trustees, resulted in his appointment as director in 1902. Anderson recruited the first faculty. He oversaw the construction of the campus buildings and the equipping of the agricultural and mechanics units. Throughout his five years he was a vigorous promoter of the school, lobbying with the state legislature for support and recruiting students throughout the state. Anderson resigned in January 1907 to return to the University of California as professor in Agricultural Practice and director of Farm Schools.

Late Cornell Engineer Honored. California's second largest earth filled dam was dedicated at Marone Apr. 25 in memory of Leroy Anderson, a Cornell engineer of the Class of 1896. Anderson had been a resident of Santa Clara Valley in California for 35 years prior to his death in 1949. He had long been an advocate of water conservation and worked for it many years against great odds. The Leroy Anderson Dam forms a reservoir of 75,000 acre feet of water. Principal address at the dedication was made by Governor Earl Warren.

LEE BARKER WALTON—AN APPRECIATION. Lee Barker Walton was born at Bear Lake, Pa., November 11, 1871, and died at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, May 15, 1937. My acquaintance with him began at a meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science in December, 1902, when his discussion of certain papers impressed me with his penetrating observation and logical statement. The friendship there begun remained unbroken through the years. I welcome the opportunity to pay tribute to his memory. Of his boyhood life I have scant personal knowledge. He never talked much about his own experiences but I have gathered from various sources the impression that he grew up under favorable conditions for the foundation of the scholarship so evident in his later career. From a letter by his sister I learn that he was born on a farm eight miles from the city of Corry, Pa., and entered school at that city in the third grade, going through the grades and two years in high school and two years of college preparatory at Keuka College, New York (near Penn Yan). She writes: "At about ten years of age he began collecting moths and butterflies. Through a friend he obtained the address of an entomologist in Canada and from him received much help and encouragement in this line of work. At one time he had over a thousand mounted bugs and beetles, some very rare specimens. By exchanging, his collection became very good. His chief occupation during vacations was the collecting of these bugs and beetles. His sister, some years younger, often accompanied him and learned to fear no insects. "From the time he learned to read he was an inveterate reader and by his actions showed he would rather read than do anything else. When boys came to play, nearly always after a short time he would be missing. They would find him reading with such intense interest he would not notice them. His family provided good reading but he would read everything he could find. "Although born on a farm he was never very much interested in farm life and seldom cared to do farm work. I remember one time when father wanted him to drive the horses on the mowing machine. The field was a large one with woods bordering one side. Nearly every time around the field when he would come to the woods he would leave the horses standing and go into the woods and hunt for bugs. When father spoke to him about it he replied that the horses needed the rest." In a letter from an early teacher we learn that "He was my pupil at 6 years of age. A bright, sturdy little lad in high red top rubber boots. Nature study and trout fishing were of special interest to him and he would roam the tamarack swamp and wilds of Sulphur Springs territory alone with great pleasure and wonderment. He was very proud of his capture of a loon and had it mounted by a taxidermist. His collecting and mounting butterflies and insects was so pronounced that the whole community was amazed." He doubtless passed through the various grades of elementary and secondary schools required as a preparation of entry to Cornell University, where he entered in 1893 and graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1897. His further preparation for a scientific career is summed up briefly in the obituary note by the writer in Science for July 15, 1938, from which I quote: "Later he spent the years '98 and '99 in Germany—except for six months in India where, according to Mrs. Walton, 'he was interested mostly in collecting butterflies and beetles'. We may question this since Caroline Louise Graham, the daughter of a Missionary to India, later became Mrs. Walton. He went to Brown University in 1899 and served as Assistant to Dr. A. S. Packard in 1900-1901, while working for the Ph.D. degree. He studied at Woods Hole during the summer of 1901 and was assistant to Dr. Bumpus at the American Museum of Natural History 1901-1902. He was Goldwin Smith Fellow and secured his Ph.D. at Cornell University in 1902 and that fall began his notable career at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, where he remained an outstanding figure until his untimely death. In this position he at once identified himself with the Ohio Academy of Science and became one of its most loyal members, serving as Secretary, President and on various principal committees". He was married to Caroline Louise Graham at Sangli, India, March 1, 1898, and five children were born to them. Harold Graham, born Nov. 13, 1898; Robert Barker, born March 13, 1900, died August 13, 1916; Margaret Bai, born August 21, 1902; Graham, born January 22, 1906; Roger Lee, born July 22, 1914. Harold graduated from Kenyon College in 1920, Margaret graduated from Wellesley, 1924, Graham from Kenyon College in 1927 and from Mass. Inst. Technology in 1930; Roger graduated from Kenyon College in 1935.

While none of the children have followed the father in the field of biology, all are filling important places in society, Harold in the field of actuarial insurance, Margaret as the wife of Dr. Faust of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., Graham as instructor in sanitary and hydraulic engineering in the University of Wisconsin, and Roger with the teaching profession in view. During the summers of 1905, '06, '07 and '09 he taught courses in biology at the Lake Laboratory, located then on Cedar Point near Sandusky, and his enthusiasm and broad training were an inspiration to both staff and students. The intimate associations in this connection naturally resulted in a close friendship which persisted through the years. With other members of the Ohio Academy of Science he was instrumental in the organization of the Ohio Biological Survey as a Department of the State University and served on its Advisory Board from its establishment to his death. In this connection he carried on studies, mainly on aquatic organisms, and the results of his studies appeared in two important papers, "The Euglenoidina of Ohio" and "Studies Concerning Organisms Occurring in Water Supplies", both being much in demand from outside Ohio as well as here. He held membership in a number of National Scientific Societies, among them Botanical Society of America, American Society Zoologists, American Society of Naturalists, Boston Society Natural History and Entomological Society of America. He was Fellow of American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of the council, 1915-17. He was a member of the Honorary Societies of Sigma Xi and Alpha Tau Omega. His interests were varied—not confined to his Biological work—and he was particularly interested in out door sports for young men, tennis, golf, hiking, fishing, and said "more of that kind of interest would tend to keep the young men in the proper condition morally as well as physically". He was "a great believer in play as well as work". He was interested in problems of evolution and many of his published papers had a bearing upon various phases of these fundamental biological questions. A good example of his originality of thought and method of attack on a problem is shown in his studies of the phenomena of spiral movement in aquatic organisms as exhibited in regions north and south of the equator where the spiral movement has a reverse rotation in forms he observed. The intricate structure of various arthropod groups and their bearing on the questions of their phylogenetic affinities formed the subject of a number of morphologic studies. He was a successful teacher, beloved by his students, many of them going on to successful careers. Here perhaps was his greatest contribution to science and society—a contribution which cannot be estimated in any statistical or analytical terms. Walton had the happy faculty of making friends with people in many different ranks of society and it was remarked of him by a close friend that he was “an aristocrat and a democrat”. He liked to associate with people high up and could also be found in a garage playing checkers with some of the garage men. He also had the facility to accomplish much with apparently little exertion. One of his close friends says “Lee accomplished more with the least apparent effort of any one I have ever known”. This facility was no doubt in large part due to his ability to see the important thing and to eliminate waste motion. It would be interesting to enlarge upon his interest in national and international affairs as he always had definite and original ideas to present in such matters. I do not think he ever carried the idea that his own view was the only one to be considered or that his opinions must be accepted without debate. Altogether as I think back over the many years of our association I am the more impressed with the constructive and beneficent nature of his life. He must have been a strong contributing factor in the community as well as in the college circle where so large a part of his life was spent. Personally the writer thinks of him as an admired companion, a wholesome nature full of the joy of life and capable of firing the enthusiasm of students and associates in the pursuit of knowledge, making serious work a joyful occupation. His friendship through the years is one of the treasured memories of life. Herbert Osborn.

W265 Robert Ludwig Junghanns

Robert Junghanns Park is located in the AB 167, on land that belonged to agricultural engineer Robert Junghanns. It is one of the most prized parks in the village. It is a passive park full of greenery and fresh air where the whole family can share time together, with facilities for the enjoyment of both public and private activities. Robert L. Junghanns was born in Poughkeepsie, New York on July 1, 1871. His university studies were conducted at Cornell University. He came to Puerto Rico when he was very young and was devoted to trade. Junghanns lived on street Hiram Gonzalez at number 122. The famous engineer was devoted to studying and preserving materials related to Bayamon culture. These materials are preserved in the Archivo General de Puerto Rico and are known as the Junghanns Collection. He planted trees in the range of properties that make up the park that today bears his name. Those trees are laurel, cedar, layer, and Guaraguao Mahogany, among others. Robert L. Junghanns died in Hato Rey on September 21, 1947.

24. Estate of Robert Ludwig Junghanns: The Secretary informed the Committee of the wills left by an alumnus, Robert Ludwig Junghanns, in favor of the University and the fact that he left four natural children born after the wills were made. These children have filed actions contesting the validity of the wills and claiming that they, as natural heirs, should receive the entire estate. The Secretary further reported that a brief examination had been made of the law in Puerto Rico, and it indicates that there are at least three possible conclusions to these contentions. Under one the University would receive the entire estate, under another it would receive one-half and under a third possibility it would receive one-third of the estate. The Secretary stated that he has asked an alumnus of the Cornell Law School of the Class of 1927, now of San Juan, Puerto Rico, Mr. Mariano Hector Ramirez, to investigate the matter and advise the University as to its rights in the matter. Mr. Ramirez has replied saying that he will make a thorough investigation. However, since the personalities involved may be important in such a controversy, the Secretary stated that Vice-President Doyle was anxious that this matter be presented to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees in order that the members thereof could make any suggestions as to the matter or personnel in Puerto Rico who might be desirable to represent the University. Trustee Upson offered to communicate with the president of a large sugar company with whom he is well acquainted and ascertain the counsel the sugar company uses in Puerto Rico. Vice-Chairman Donlon suggested that possibly Carlos Chardon of the University of Puerto Rico, and an alumnus of Cornell University, might be of some assistance.

Funds Willed Cornell Under Protest. A suit to contest the two wills of a Cornell alumnus, who bequeathed almost his entire estate to the University, was filed by his four children Thursday in Bayamon District Court, San Juan, Puerto Rico. Cornell is represented at the trial by counsel. Robert Ludwig Junghanns died in Bayamon Sept. 21, leaving an estate reportedly valued at $300,000 to be used at Cornell in the fields of anthropology, entomology and tropical agriculture. He attended Cornell from 1893 to 1897 and received the B.S.A. degree in 1897 and the M.S. in Agriculture in 1898. The wills provided for four minor personal bequests ranging from $250 to $1,600. No provision was made for the four children. They filed suit on the ground that the two wills were drafted in 1902 and 1907, before the marriage of which they were born: Elena Luisa in 1916, Robert Luis in 1922, Marie in 1926, and Noram Iria in 1931. An Associated Press dispatch from San Juan said although little was known of Junghanns' life and background, it was reported he came to Puerto Rico in 1898 as a secret agent for the United States and remained in that capacity 3 years without the knowledge of the U.S. Army, then governing that country. Local authorities described him as an archaeologist of prominence who owned a large collection of Indian anthropological objects. Terms of the 1907 will, according to Cornell authorities, specified that the bequest was to go “towards establishment of a chain of tropical agriculture; for purchase of entomological specimens, books, pamphlets, etc.; fitting out of entomological expeditions, and the conservation and maintenance of the entomological collections; purchase of agricultural books, especially those bearing on tropical agriculture and the history of agriculture.” The 1902 will instructed the beneficiary to use the bequest “for the purpose of strengthening their library of anthropological and entomological works, or the income to be devoted toward collecting or research work in anthropology or entomology.”

(Alanson) Phelps Wyman (1870 – 1947) Born and raised in Manchester Center, Vermont, Wyman attended college at Cornell University, studying agriculture. After graduation in 1897, he worked in the field of landscape architecture in several east coast offices, including several years at Olmsted Brothers. In order to supplement his prior education, he spent two years from 1902-1904 at MIT studying related subjects. From 1904 to 1911, Wyman operated a consulting practice in Chicago and taught landscape architecture as Assistant Professor at the University of Illinois. Afterwards, he practiced as a landscape architect in Minneapolis. There, he served on the Minneapolis Park Board from 1916 to 1924 and on the Minneapolis Planning Commission from 1921 to 1924. He also continued his residential landscape work. In 1924, Wyman relocated to Milwaukee, Wisconsin—returning towards Chicago—and began service as the landscape architect to the local regional planning commission. After several years in the public sector, he returned to private practice for the remaining 23 years of his life. However, he retained his interest in city planning and worked as a private citizen to encourage the city to adopt a master plan. Wyman served as the landscape architect for the 1908 design of the Four Mounds Estate in Dubuque County, Iowa, which integrated existing Native American burial mounds into the estate. This project is now listed on the National Register of Historic Places. With regard to the design philosophy Wyman used at Four Mounds and elsewhere, some scholars have suggested that he may have subscribed to the “nativist” design philosophy of fellow University of Illinois faculty member Wilhelm Miller and of his fellow Chicago practitioner Jens Jensen. Wyman worked extensively on the development of parks. Serving as a consultant to groups promoting the creation of parks, he recommended restoring wildlife to new parks. One of his notable projects was a study of the suitability of the badlands of North Dakota as a national park. He also wrote extensively about parks in various publications, including the journal Parks and Recreation.

Necrology. '97 BS—PHELPS WYMAN of 759 North Milwaukee Street, Milwaukee, Wis., landscape architect, November 16, 1947. The Milwaukee Journal reported that he had left one-fifth of his $5,000 estate to the University "in return for the free tuition I enjoyed during my four years there." Wyman had been park commissioner and city planning commissioner of Minneapolis Minn.

NECROLOGY. PHELPS WYMAN. A BIOGRAPHICAL MINUTE. Phelps Wyman was born at Manchester Center, Vermont, on April 13, 1870. He received his early academic training at the Burr & Burton Seminary at Manchester Center. Later he attended Cornell University, where he was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture in the year 1897. No courses in landscape architecture were offered at that time, so Mr. Wyman sought apprenticeship in several eastern offices to train himself more thoroughly in his chosen profession. Three years were thus spent in the office of Olmsted Brothers, and shorter periods with Warren H. Manning, Charles A. Platt, J. W. Langton, and O. C. Simonds of Chicago. He then spent two years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (1902-1904), where he completed special courses in architecture, landscape design, and engineering. This was followed by a summer abroad. After his return home Mr. Wyman opened an office in Chicago, where he engaged in private practice. In addition, he spent part of his time teaching landscape architecture at the University of Illinois. This continued until 1910, when he opened an office in Minneapolis. There he continued the practice of landscape architecture until 1924. During that period he served on the Minneapolis Park Board (1916-1924), and was also a member of the Minneapolis Planning Commission (1921-1924). In 1924 he went to Milwaukee and assumed the duties of Landscape Architect of the Milwaukee County Regional Planning Department. He served in this capacity until 1926, when he resigned to open his own office again. He continued to engage in private practice in Milwaukee until the date of his death, November 16, 1947. Mr. Wyman's professional work covered a rather broad range of projects. Among these were many country estates and city places in Illinois, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. In the field of park design he left his stamp on the park systems of Ashland, Wisconsin Rapids, Beloit, Neenah, and Menasha, all cities in Wisconsin, and also on the park system of Huron, South Dakota. He did the plans for the State Capitol grounds at Pierre, South Dakota, and was in charge of the development of a number of institutional grounds in various places. In later years

Mr. Wyman's interest was directed toward planning in its broader phases. As a member of the Milwaukee City Club's Committee on City Planning, he devoted much effort and time toward inducing the Land Commission of the City of Milwaukee to prepare a master plan. He also constantly stressed the fact that the Milwaukee lake front, and in particular the portion directly east of the downtown area, had the greatest potential public value of any land in the city for recreational use. Much time was spent on these projects, for which he received no compensation other than the satisfaction of having accomplished something for the public. Mr. Wyman became a Member of the American Society of Landscape Architects in 1905, and a Fellow in 1912. He served on the Board of Trustees from 1919 to 1921. His membership in the Society thus extended almost from its beginning, and he was a potent force in its development and growth in the North Central States. His interest in the profession was clearly indicated by the fact that he willed his technical library to the University of Illinois so that the material that he had spent many in assembling might be available to future students of landscape architecture. In his professional practice, Mr. Wyman preferred to work alone, always giving the problems before him a great deal of personal effort and time. The influence of his early experience and contact with the Olmsted office and with O. C. Simonds was evident in his work. He had a fine sense of the eternal fitness of things, which manifested itself in the manner in which his designs were adapted to the topography with which he was working. Likewise he molded land forms with much discrimination. No detail of a job was too small to receive careful study. Phelps Wyman's art was a creative art. In its practice he would never compromise on principles that might reduce to mediocrity any work with which he was connected. A. L. B.

Obituaries. WILLIAM J. KROME '99. William Julius Krome, formerly designer with the Florida East Coast Railway, died on October 2 in Homestead, Fla., after a long illness. He was born in Edwardsville, Ill., fifty-three years ago, the son of the late Judge and Mrs. William H. Krome. His wife and three children survive him.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 32, No. 9, 21 Nov 1929, p. 129.

INTRODUCTION. When William Julius Krome was six or seven years old his father took him to St. Louis to hear and later to meet the great African explorer Stanley. Young Krome was so impressed that for years he cherished the idea of becoming an explorer and collected books on African exploration. Krome never explored Africa but in 1902-03 he made a rather remarkable exploration of the wilds of South Florida. Krome's grandfather, Charles William Krome, was born in Hanover, Germany, and was a law student at the time he was inducted into the German army for the required year of service. Before the year was up Bismarck extended the required service to two years and Krome stowed away to America rather than serve a second year. He then joined a wagon train going over the mountains and down the Ohio River to Louisville. The pioneer community had no need for a young lawyer but did need a cobbler, a trade which Krome had learned during his army service. He solicited orders for shoes, bought the supplies, and engaged less enterprising German cobblers to make them for him. He was soon a prosperous businessman. His son, William Henry Krome, moved to Edwardsville, Illinois, where he became a judge, and where his son, William Julius, was born February 14, 1876, the only boy in a family of seven children. William Julius had a classical education at Northwestern and DePauw, then studied engineering at Cornell but left in his senior year to do a survey for a railroad in Missouri. He never returned to school because he was not one to worry about degrees or signs of achievement. He went on to other railroad jobs in South Carolina and Georgia and in 1899 came to Florida to work for the Atlantic, Valdosta and Western Railway Company. In 1901 Krome found himself between jobs. He spent the winter in Jacksonville, and enjoyed exploring the St. Johns River in a small boat, fascinated with a country so sparsely populated. When he learned that the Florida East Coast Railway Company was planning to extend its railroad to Key West and needed someone to survey possible routes he applied for the job and was hired. Early in 1902 he made a trip down the east coast as far as Cutler recording all points of interest with his camera. He loved photography and recorded the progress of his work projects as well as the activities of his family and friends. When Krome arrived in South Florida the Florida East Coast was in the process of building a railroad between Miami and Homestead and Krome first worked on that project. There were two possible routes for the Key West Extension. The first was to the east and along the keys the other overland to Cape Sable and across shallow Florida Bay. Krome headed a crew to survey the latter route to see if it were feasible. In preparation for this survey he studied the notes of a United States surveyor named Jackson who had surveyed South Florida in 1848. Jackson has summarized his notes by saying, "The country south of Miami is rocky pine land intersected with marshy areas they call glades. It has no agricultural use. The Indians use it for hunting deer and it is sometimes referred to as the Indian Hunting Grounds. No one lives there. The rocky nature of the soil makes it unsuitable for agriculture but even if it could be farmed the great storms that sweep over the southern end of the peninsula in the fall would make farming impossible." From December 1902 until June 1903 Krome surveyed from his permanent camp south of Homestead (in the Royal Palm Park area) to Cape Sable and around by boat to Card Sound. He found Jackson's stakes and blazes so accurate that he gained great respect for his predecessor and named his permanent camp Camp Jackson. As a result of his six-month survey it was determined that the route along the keys was the better one. The next winter with many of the same crew Krome surveyed that route as far as Jewfish Creek. Krome wrote a report of his Cape Sable survey entitled "Railway Location in the Florida Everglades" which was printed in two issues of the Engineering Record, April 2 and 9, 1904, and reveals his careful planning and meticulous attention to details. Later he was to become chief engineer of the Key West Extension and successfully completed it. South Florida had won his heart; he settled here permanently, married Isabel Burns and remained in Homestead until his death in 1929. In his honor an important artery is named Krome Avenue. Jean C. W268 Joseph Ernest Hodgson Obituary. J. E. HODGSON '97. Joseph Ernest Hodgson died suddenly on October 26 at Gloversville, N. Y. He was a graduate of Sibley College in the class of 1897 and was a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. When he was in college he was on the track team and was a member of Mermaid. He was superintendent of the gas and electric company at Gloversville. The funeral was held at his father's home, 848 President Street, Brooklyn.

Joseph Ernest Hodgson, general manager of the Fulton County Gas & Electric Company, Gloversville, N. Y., died in that city on Oct. 26, 1913. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 27, 1873, and was a graduate of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn and of Cornell University. After leaving Cornell in 1897 he entered the employ of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and in 1902 joined the staff of the Westchester Lighting Company, Mount Vernon, N. Y., which at that time was under the direct control of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia. When in 1907 the Westchester corporation became affiliated with the interests controlling the Consolidated Gas Company, Mr. Hodgson joined the home engineering corps of the United Gas Improvement Company in Philadelphia and was subsequently detailed to St. Augustine, Fla. He remained for only a short time in that position, going to Gloversville, N. Y., as engineer of the electric division of the United Gas Improvement interests in Gloversville and Johnstown. His success was so marked that when the position of general manager of the Fulton County Gas & Electric Company became vacant he received the appointment. This position he held until his death.

WALKER, ERNEST, state horticulturist, was born November 12, 1862, at Brownstown, Jackson County, Ind.; son of Rev. Francis and Mary Elizabeth (Graham) Walker, the former who was a descendant of the Frys and Swans of colonial days, and was a Methodist minister; grandson of James and Eleanor (Turner) Walker, and of Ferdinand and Abbie Ayers (Day) Graham, of New Albany, Ind., the latter who was a descendant of Abenezer Byrum, jr., and Abigail Alden, great-granddaughter of John and Priscilla Alden. Ernest Walker received his primary education in the schools of Indiana; attended De Pauw university for a short time; in 1893 attended Harvard botany summer school; and entered Cornell university graduating in 1897. In 1897 he became assistant horticulturist and entomologist at Clemson college, S. C.; later advanced to the post of entomologist; was secretary of the natural history society of Clemson college; in 1900 went to the University of Arkansas as professor of horticulture, and entomologist and horticulturist of the experiment station; was first Arkansas state nursery inspector, 1903-05; was elected to the chair of horticulture, Alabama polytechnic institute, at Auburn, in October, 1913. He is a member of the Methodist church; of the Pomological society for horticultural science; the American association for the advancement of sciences; a member of the Indiana academy of science; the Indiana horticultural society; and the Arkansas horticultural society. He is joint author with Dr. L. H. Bailey, of "Garden Making," 1898; contributor to Bailey's "Cyclopedia of Agriculture"; and editor of various reports of societies with which he is connected. He worked out a remedy for rice smut in conjunction with Dr. A. P. Anderson, and during 1914-15, as Alabama state horticulturist he led in the organization for the extermination of citrus canker in Alabama. Married: on June 20, 1899, at Clemson college, to Mary Stanley, daughter of Prof. James Stanley and Elberta (Lewis) Newman, and a descendant of the Lewis, Carter, Moore and Harrison families of Virginia. Children: 1. Marion Newman; 2. Elbert Lewis; 3. Ernestine Ayers. Residence: Auburn.

THE LAZY CLUB By Jill Spangier '36 Forty years ago, the students in the botany department at Cornell saw the need for a club. Being up and coming young fellows they did not wait for some august body to meet, ponder, appoint committees, and finally get to banding together into a dignified organization. Instead these men started their own club, which consisted of a president and 'eleven immortals'. This select little group did not attach some high and mighty name to their organization, but merely called themselves the Lazy Club. Liberty- Hyde Bailey, and his students made up the club to promote interest and knowledge in vegetable crops, floriculture, and pomology. The meeting places were at first at various places, at Prof. Bailey's home, at the rooms of the members, and finally at its own clubrooms. The first clubhouse was located near the first greenhouses, the foundations of which are now under Hoy Field. Six hundred dollars, the gift of a friend of the Lazy Club, was used to build and equip the club rooms. There was one room of mystery in the building, that was Prof. Bailey's store room, and even the 'eleven immortals' spiritual power did not help them to see the contents of Prof. Bailey's workroom. Meetings were usually attended in full strength because of the custom of serving eats at each meeting. Doughnuts, grape juice, cider, and the fruits of the season found their way into the meeting place, and finally into the stomachs of the president and the eleven immortals. The original record of the club consisted of a mention of the first topic treated at the meeting and the signatures of the members present. The first talk to be recorded was on the subject of Begonias and was presented by E. G. Lodman. The record and minutes of this first meeting have been preserved by Prof. Bailey, and are in his possession at present. When Hoy Field was planned and leveled to make an athletic field, the Tower, famous all over the United States as the home of the Lazy Club, the oldest Cornell agricultural club, was destined to oblivion in spite of the efforts of its friends. Plans made for its re-establishment were never carried out. The rooms with its horticultural journals and atmosphere of relaxation were a familiar meeting place, and their loss was keenly felt. Of the 'eleven immortals' all but one has become important in botany, horticulture, and vegetable crops. These men were J. C. Blair, Harold Powell, M. G. Kaius, Wendell Paddock, E. G. Lodman, William Miller, H. C. Irish, A. P. Wyman, W. M. Munson, J. Keating, and Earnest Walker. The Lazy Club has been replaced by other organizations, the Vegetable Crops and the Floriculture Club, yet neither of these organizations have the same setup as had the famous old club.

ELLIS LEEDS ALDRICH—Bringing to Maine an experience of law practice in the State of New York, Ellis Leeds Aldrich is now one of the leading attorneys in this state. He is the son of Charles H. Aldrich and Josephine (McDonald) Aldrich of Riverhead, Long Island, New York. His father died in 1899. Ellis Leeds Aldrich was born in Brooklyn, New York, on June 12, 1874. He attended public school and the matriculated in Cornell University, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, in 1897. Two years later, from the same institution, he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws. That was in 1899. He was admitted to the bar in New York City in 1900 and commenced the practice of law with the firm of Baldwin and Slater, where he remained until 1903. He then opened an office of his own, practicing under his own name until 1923, when he came to Maine and entered the practice of law at Brunswick, where he has been since. Mr. Aldrich is a man of energetic public spirit and while conducting his law practice in New York City, he was a member of the Board of Education at Montclair, New Jersey, where he was also active in various Liberty Loan campaigns. Since his residence in Maine, he has continued his public service by being a member of the State Legislature and having appointments on committees in that body. He is a Maine enthusiast and a valuable addition to its list of patriotic citizens. His social and fraternal affiliations are the Brunswick Club, the Brunswick Golf Club, the Rotary Club, Blue Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, and he is a member of the Congregational church. In 1901, Ellis Leeds Aldrich married Jane E. Norton, daughter of Thomas Norton. They have two children: 1. Janet N. 2. Sherwood, a student at Bowdoin College.

LEWIS L. TATUM, KNOWN TO MANY ALUMNI, DEAD Lewis Leeds Tatum, E.E. '97, died at his home in Milwaukee, on February 7, from heart trouble. Born at Woodbury, N. J., fifty-eight years ago, his early education was received in Philadelphia, Pa. While a student at Cornell he was prominent as an athlete, having been a member of his class football team, a substitute on the '94 varsity crew, and rowed on the '95 American varsity crew, and on the record '96 varsity crew. He was a member of T.N.E., Sphinx Head, and Aleph Samach. In his freshman year he gained prominence by climbing the flag pole in front of the Armory and nailing the '97 flag at the top. After graduating in electrical engineering, he went to the Bull-ock Electric Company in Cincinnati, where he remained until the fall of 1906, when he joined the Cutler Hammer Manufacturing Company as assistant chief engineer. He served the Cutler Hammer Company in various capacities as assistant chief engineer; as manager of a subsidiary company, the Kinite Company, where he was responsible for the successful development of an alloy steel used in the casting of forming dies which resulted in great economies in the die-making industry; and general purchasing agent, which latter position he filled until two years before his death, when he was forced to retire from active business on account of ill health. At the time of his death, Mr. Tatum was a director of the Southern China Wood Oil Company, secretary and treasurer of Munnohannit Hunting Club, a member of the Milwaukee University Club, and a charter member of the Cornell Alumni Association of Milwaukee. For the past twenty-five years he had been very active in engineering circles in Milwaukee, having been one of the charter members of the Milwaukee Engineering Society, and a fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. As assistant chief engineer of the Cutler Hammer Company he was responsible for the employment of young engineers. He was instrumental in bringing many young Cornell men to the Middle West and helping to establish an interest in Cornell among the young men of Milwaukee. As one of the founders of the Cornell Alumni Association of Milwaukee, he was always active in its affairs. Tatum is survived by his wife, Mary, two brothers, Joseph W. of Haddonfield, N. J., David S. of Yonkers, N. Y., and a sister Mrs. Sarah Trautwine of Penns Grove, N. J. Funeral services were held February 10 from the Kenwood Methodist Church and burial was in the Valhalla Cemetery.

W277 & W766 Emmons Levi Williams

Comptroller to Retire E. L. Williams Designs After 47 Years' Service in Financial Department. At the meeting of the General Committee on Administration held last Saturday Emmons Levi Williams, comptroller of the University, tendered his resignation, to become effective on July 1, the end of the fiscal University year. In May, Mr. Williams will have been connected with the University forty-seven years. He was assistant treasurer from 1873 to 1879, and acting treasurer from 1879 to 1885, when he became treasurer. He served in that capacity from 1885 until 1914, when he was elected to the newly-created office of comptroller. He was secretary of the Board of Trustees from 1894 until 1914, when he became comptroller. He was succeeded by Charles D. Bostwick '92, who became treasurer of the University and secretary of the Board. Mr. Williams is prominent in banking circles in this city and has been identified with many organizations here. He is vice-president of the Ithaca Trust Company, vice-president of the Savings Bank, and a director of the First National Bank. He is a Mason and a member of St. Augustine Commandery, Knights Templar, and a member of the Protective Police. He is also a trustee of the City Hospital Association. He is a member of the Ithaca Country Club and the Town and Gown Club, and has served as president of both. He is also a member of the disbursement committee, of the War Chest Association and a member of the Ithaca Board of Commerce. Mr. Williams will be retired with a Carnegie pension, to which he is entitled by reason of his age—he was sixty-nine years old on January 10—and by the length and character of his service.

E. L. Williams Dies. First Comptroller of University Succumbs to Heart Disease After Long Illness. Emmons Levi Williams, for nearly fifty years connected with Cornell University as assistant treasurer, treasurer, and comptroller, and prominent in banking circles in Ithaca, died on June 24 at his home, of heart disease, after a long illness. He was 67 years of age and had retired from his position as comptroller of the University two years ago. Mr. Williams was one of the three surviving original directors of the Ithaca Trust Company, and a member of the Board of Trustees of the University, having been elected to the latter body to succeed the late Andrew D. White. Mr. Williams is survived by his wife and one sister, Mrs. D. W. Watson, of Rensselaerville, New York. Emmons L.

Williams was born at Binghamton on January 10, 1854, and received his education in the schools of that city. He was appointed assistant to the treasurer of Cornell University in May, 1872, and acting treasurer in September, 1879. On June 17, 1885 he was elected treasurer of the University, and held that office continuously until June 16, 1914, when he was elected to the newly-created office of comptroller. He was also secretary of the Board of Trustees from June, 1894, until November, 1914. A resolution passed by the Board of "Trustees two years ago, when Mr. Williams sent in his resignation as comptroller, expressed appreciation of his constant and unselfish service in the interests of the University. "The significant thing in Mr. Williams' work for this University is his devotion of a rare skill, the fruit of years of laborious study, to an unselfish service. Universities cannot buy service of this character from selfish persons," states the resolution. He was retired in June, 1919, with a Carnegie pension, to which he was entitled by reason of his age and the length and character of his service. Mr. Williams has for many years been identified with various organizations in Ithaca. He was vice-president of the Ithaca Trust Company, a vice president of the Ithaca Savings Bank, and a director of the First National Bank. He was a trustee of the City-Hospital Association in which he was deeply interested, and a member of the Board of Commerce. He also served during the war as a member of the disbursements committee of the War Chest. Mr. Williams was one of the founders of the Town and Gown Club, and for many years a member of the Ithaca Country Club of which he was president for two years. He declined re-election this year on account of his health. He was an active member of the Protective Police and for many years an officer of that body. Mr. Williams was also a Mason and a member of St. Augustine Commandery, Knights Templar. Prominent Ithaca business men joined the University community in mourning his passing.

Allman, B.Sc., M.A., was graduated in agriculture from Cornell and was later appointed an assistant professor at that University. He was perhaps the first to introduce a real school spirit at The National Farm School. He wrote many of their songs, which are still sung, helped to form glee and instrumental clubs, science, literary and dramatic societies. In those days there was enough to keep a young man busy from 6 in the morning until past midnight. Therefore, he had not the time to become restless nor dissatisfied. He reorganized much of the work along departmental lines, i.e., the most trusted students were made foremen of the several sub-divisions and responsible to him for the work allotted to them. On Friday evenings, after Chapel service, a meeting of these student foremen was held in his study. Plans for the coming week were informally discussed, complaints were heard and adjusted. These extra-curricular activities helped relieve the monotony of long winter evenings. Trips to Doylestown became less popular. There was too much going on at The National Farm School. Despite the small size of the student body, considerable amount of latent musical, literary and histrionic talent was available. The comradeship was splendid. The old potting shed, attached to the greenhouse, was in such a deplorable condition, that either a renovated building, or a new structure, was necessary. At this point, thru the generosity of Harry B. Hirsh, Vice President of the School, a beautiful show and work-room was erected upon the site of the old shed. It is today architecturally one of the gems of the Farm School, an inspiration to every serious young floriculturist who enters its portals. Professor Allman found the nurseries in very bad shape. Much time was spent in removing old and worthless trees, and again as much time was required to clean up. About $200.00, a large appropriation in those early days, was invested in young evergreens and deciduous hardy shrubs. Our sales at that time were almost nil, because we had nothing large enough to sell. These very plants now adorning the campus buildings and lawns are over 25 feet in height. Therefore, a very profitable investment. Some of the Japanese Maples, purchased as seedlings for 35c each, now bring as high as $40.00 per plant. A new greenhouse, very badly needed, was erected in memory of Mrs. Rose Krauskopf by her children. The students did the glazing and planting as well as any experts could have done. Student project gardens were instituted, each student renting a small plot of ground at 50c for the season, to be used according to his heart's desire for all kinds of growing plants. Cash prizes were awarded to the best gardens. This caused great interest, and similar projects were inaugurated in other departments. The war changed everything. "Food will win the war!" The project gardens were turned into a truck patch, and they did produce plenty of food. Three of the faculty were called to the colors. Those who remained had a hectic time sharing the extra burdens of

W278 Drue Nunez Allman

Chapter 5. AN INSTRUCTOR AND HIS EXPERIENCES.

EARLY in 1915 at the invitation of Dr. Krauskopf, my son, Drue Nunez Allman, a Princeton-Cornell man, accepted the position of professor of horticulture, succeeding Mr. A. M. Fancourt. The duties of the head of that department were much greater than at present, as several instructors have since divided the work. He inherited the following responsibilities:--The greenhouses--the vegetable gardens--the nursery--the lawns--the landscape department--the memorial tree care--emergency repairs to buildings--reception committee of one for visitors and guests of the School--class instructor in all horticultural subjects, also certain academic high school subjects. Drue instruction and supervision, so that this young horticulturist undertook the teaching of English, Algebra and History. There were no comfortable quarters for either faculty or students. Bathrooms were almost unknown. The heating system was not as effective as today. They had some severely cold winters at the Farm School. To break the ice in the bedroom pitcher during the early winter mornings was not unusual. Then, as now, there were no slack periods. Rather, it was a question of doing five or six important jobs at one time-and they got away with it. Students, raw material of all degrees of education, were not as carefully selected as at present. Nevertheless, many were good, wholesome chaps. Natural aptness and alertness ran from one extreme to the other, making teaching difficult, in comparison to the School of today, where almost 90 percent of the students are high school graduates. The depletion of classes, caused by student resignations, was much heavier than today. Requirements for admission now include examinations and investigations sufficiently stringent to exclude the unfit. In those old days much time was wasted on immature material. However, some mighty fine men were graduated, who have since been a pride to their Alma Mater. Life was hard and rugged; luxuries were either unknown or so little heard of, so as not to be missed. When nine o'clock came, the boys were ready for bed. At that time there were but three buildings on the campus. None of the then small faculty had cars, so they took their relaxation where they could find it at the School. This was some advantage, in that it established a closer and more personal bond between them. They lived too close to their work to become "institutionalized." This same condition applies to the School today, even tho the population is much larger. Some of the farm departments were exploited in order to show a larger cash income from crops. The Board strenuously opposed any such policy on the ground that the education and training of students should always have prime consideration. Professor Allman served the School for over four years, then returned to the Cornell faculty staff. He later established his own greenhouses under the name of the Allman Nurseries and is still vitally interested in the work of The National Farm School. As a trustee, he keeps an ever watchful eye on our greenhouses and nursery departments and has given employment to some of our graduates in his commercial nursery ranges. From time to time he gives illustrated lectures to the students on allied horticultural subjects.

a member of Delta Upsilon. During the war he served as instructor in the College of Agriculture and in the ground school of aviation. His father, his wife (Helen Spalding '16), two daughters, and a sister, Mrs. Carl F. Howe (Emma V. Phipps '19) survive him.

GUN FIRED BY ACCIDENT CAUSES DEATH OF GEORGE R. PHIPPS. Bond House Manager Is Believed to Have Discharged Weapon in Falling From Tree at East Aurora. Accidental discharge of a shotgun reclining against the trunk of the tree in which he was working Sunday was held to be the cause of the death of George R. Phipps, 38, of Girdle road, near East Aurora. Mr. Phipps, who was manager of the Buffalo branch of the Guaranty Company of New York, with offices in the Ellicott Square building, Buffalo, had been a resident of East Aurora for seven years. The shotgun, it is believed, had been placed against the tree by Mr. Phipps before he climbed a ladder resting against the top. The ladder, it is thought, slipped, throwing Mr. Phipps against the gun and causing its discharge. There were no witnesses. Death is believed to have been instantaneous. Mr. Phipps had planned to shoot crows which had done considerable damage to his estate and had been eating food left there for the pheasants. There was no house on the country estate although it had been planned to build there this summer. Mr. Phipps' home is in East Aurora. With his wife, Mr. Phipps left his East Aurora home Sunday afternoon to perform several tasks on the new estate. They spent the afternoon together and early in the evening Mrs. Phipps returned home to prepare dinner. It was then that the accident occurred. The report of a shotgun about 7 P. M. was heard by a neighbor. Little attention was paid to the report as crows and other pests are shot frequently. Mrs. Phipps returned to the estate for her husband and found the lights of the car burning and boots which he had worn while working, resting on the floor. Upon her failure to locate him, Mrs. Phipps sought aid. Neighbors were enlisted in the search and it is believed a part of about 50 trod about the Girdle road estate. His body was located about an hour after the search began. The shotgun which is believed to have caused the death of Mr. Phipps was found a few feet from the tree, evidently thrown by the recoil after it fired. The ladder also was found on the ground directly behind the tree. Neighbors believed Mr. Phipps lost his balance on the ladder after having cut away a dead branch near the tree-top. This is believed to have caused the ladder to swing out from the tree. The severed branch was found at its foot. It is said Mr. Phipps, who was a Cornell graduate, had been successful in business life and that his family life was happy. During the war Mr. Phipps served as a captain in charge of the ground school at Cornell university. Surviving him are his wife and two daughters, Pollee and Anne, who reside at 861 Chestnut Hill, East Aurora, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phipps, of 142 Dorchester road, Buffalo.

W294 & W398 Charles Edward Courtney

CUMBS TO APOPLEXY AFTER THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS OF ACTIVE AND EXTRAORDINARY SERVICE. Charles E.
Courtney, the most famous of American rowing coaches, and affectionately known to all Cornell men as "The Old Man" died at noon on July 17, following a stroke of apoplexy, at his Summer cottage, "The Castle," at Farley's Point, Cayuga Lake. He went out on the lake as usual in the morning to fish, but was seen about eleven o'clock

CHARLES E. COURTNEY.—[PHOTOGRAPHED BY ERNSBERGER & RAY.]

COURTNEY AND HANLAN.

We rarely meet with finer specimens of physical development than the two famous oarsmen whose portraits are given on this page, and whose race over the Lachine course near Montreal for the championship of America and a purse and stake of $11,000 has excited general interest. Both are young men of pluck, skill, and endurance, and each has a record to be proud of.

CHARLES E. COURTNEY was born at Union Springs, New York, in 1849. His height is six feet one-half inch, and his usual weight in condition is 168 to 170 pounds. At an early age COURTNEY knew what hard work was, and having served an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, he was rated a most excellent workman at his majority. Like a large proportion of the youth of his section, COURTNEY developed a fondness for rowing exercise, and while in his minority gained considerable local fame as a proficient oarsman. On leaving his own section to pull in amateur regattas, older and more experienced boating men found him a "tough customer." He was victor in seventy-three amateur races, and was never defeated. His professional career began in August,

EDWARD HANLAN.—[PHOTOGRAPHED BY J. BRUCE & CO.]

1877. In September of that year he won the championship of the United States. On the 15th of last August he was badly beaten by "Frenchy" JOHNSON, the colored oarsman, at the Silver Lake regatta, Plympton, Massachusetts. This was the first defeat ever sustained by COURTNEY.

EDWARD HANLAN is several years younger than COURTNEY, having been born at Toronto in 1855. He is of Irish descent, five feet eight inches in height, and weighs when in condition about 152 pounds. While still a boy he developed great fondness for rowing; but it was not until 1873 that he made his first appearance in a shell, contending for and winning the amateur championship of Toronto Bay. The record of his victories is too long to give here, and we can only mention his achievements during the present year. In May last he beat PLAISTED in a three-mile race at Toronto; in June defeated MORRIS, five miles, at Pittsburgh, in 37 m. 58 s., and afterward beat PLAISTED, KILEY, LETHER, and others in regattas at Brockville and Cape St. Vincent. HANLAN's return match with Ross in July last, on the Kennebecasis River, St. John, New Brunswick, in which the stakes were for $1000 a side, resulted in the decisive defeat of his antagonist.

pulling for the shore. On reaching the shore he left his boat and oars carelessly, as if in distress, and walked up to the cottage. When his wife found him he was losing consciousness, and when she returned with help, he was dead. The Old Man had never been his old self since he was hurt in 1915, at Highland Falls, in a sleeper on the way to Poughkeepsie. For seven weeks after his return to Ithaca he lay in the hospital. For many weeks after that he was a semi-invalid, but his indomitable will persisted over physical pain and mental suffering and he returned to coaching, going to Poughkeepsie again with the crews in 1916. There he was ill, too ill to do much coaching, and for a time it was feared that he would have to return home before the race. He doggedly stuck to it, however, until the race was over. Then he came home and announced his retirement. But in 1919, after acting as advisory coach for two years, he was able to return to active coaching and those intimate with him are under the impression that he was hoping to return to the job this fall. He had, however, been subject for some time to attacks of bleeding at the nose, and was well aware of how his end would probably come. Charles Edward Courtney was born at Union Springs on November 13, 1849. His early education was obtained at the Friends' Academy. He learned the carpenter's trade, but was always fond of rowing, and in his early teens began sculling. Professor Hewett, in his "History of Cornell University," quotes Mr. Courtney as follows: "From the time I was old enough to walk, I was always around the water. I could swim at five or six years of age, as soon as I had strength enough, and I was always crazy to go into the skiffs. Union Springs at that time was the most noted place in the State for pleasure and racing yachts. There was a great strife between the Springs and Aurora. Sometimes they got a boat that would beat ours and then our people would go down to Aurora and return the compliment. I can well remember how I used to run away from school to help the boys put black lead on the bottom of the boats and polish 'em up. Each of us had his favorite, and when they were all ready to go forth to race we could at least stand on the dock and cheer for them. I could row a boat when I was seven and go anywhere on the water, and we had races about every evening after school. When I was about twelve years old I made up my mind that I could build a boat of my own. I got hold of some hemlock boards for the sides and a two-inch plank for the bottom, but, boy-like cut the plank all around with an axe, canoe-shape and tried to fit it inside of the boards, when I ought to have nailed the plank right on the boards and then trimmed off enough all around the outside. Of course it was a poor job, and I took yellow clay and plastered it into the crevices, but the water would force it out in no time and then the boat went down like lead. In the summer of 1868, at the watersports regatta at Aurora, with a plain, rudely constructed canoe, young Courtney won his first race over two well known scullers, with the latest type of narrow boat, crossing the line half a mile ahead of his nearest competitor. His next race was on Onondaga Lake, at Syracuse, in 1873. He won by a quarter of a mile, and kept the prize, a gold watch, for more than twenty years. In the same year he rowed at Saratoga. There were twelve others rowing but Courtney was so far ahead at one time that a man in a boat alongside the course asked him to stop and have some lemonade; but instead he rowed all the harder. The hardest race that Courtney ever rowed, he often declared, was a double scull race at Saratoga, with Frank Yates, as partner. The race, over a two-mile course, was the fastest ever rowed in that kind of boat. The record of 12:16 still stands. The one incident in Courtney's early rowing career over which a cloud was thrown was his second race with Hanlan, a great sculler. Though blameless for what happened, the youthful sculler was held accountable by many. Hanlan had been carousing the day before the race and his friends, who had bet heavily on him, became frightened. They went to Courtney and offered him $6,000 if he would throw the race. He told them that if Hanlan won he would have row to do it. The next morning Courtney's shell was found cut in two and the public put the blame on the youth declaring that he had taken that method of throwing the race. He lived down the false accusation, but it was many years fore the public would believe that had not handed the race to Hanlan. In all he took part as an amateur in 89 single scull and 15 or 16 double scull races without losing a race. Including his professional career he entered in 134 races, of which he lost only seven. It was in 1883 that Mr. Courtney began coaching the Cornell crews but did not become a resident coach until 1888, when Cornell began putting an eight-oared boat on the water. Cornell's rowing record since Mr. Courtney became coach in 1883 has be impressive. Altogether his crews, varsity, fresh-man, four, and junior varsity have rowed 127 races exclusive of junior varsity races prior to 1914, when it became a recognized big race; and of the 127 Cornell has won 93. The varsity has won the regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association thirteen times, has taken second place six times, and third place four times. The ten defeats were administered, five by Syracuse, three by Penn, and two by Columbia. With the exception of the three years '98, '99, and '00 no crew has defeated Cornell in successive years. Cornell has won from Harvard's varsity nine times, and has lost to them three; has won four non-collegiate races; has lost one and won one foreign race; and has won twenty other collegiate varsity races, losing but four. The varsities coached by Mr. Courtney, then, have won forty-seven races and lost eighteen. The freshmen in the same period have won thirty-two races and lost eleven, which fifteen winners were at the regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, and seven losers. The four-oared race of the Intercollegiate Regatta, discontinued in 1913, went to Cornell ten times, to Syracuse three times, and to Penn twice. Cornell took second three times, third once, and fourth once. The junior varsity which replaced this race on the Intercollegiate Regatta's schedule has gone to Cornell all four times. In the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Cornell has won at least one race each year except two. In '95, she was second in the only race rowed. In 1900 she was third in all three races. Out of twenty-three regattas Cornell has seven "clean-sweeps" to her credit. Since 1907 she has won at least two of the three races at each regatta. Of sixty-four races rowed at the regattas of this association in twenty-three years, Cornell was first in forty-three, second in fourteen, third in six, and fifth in one, the 1910 freshman crew's race, this last being the only time she has been last in any race of the association. All records for the Poughkeepsie course are held by Cornell crews: varsity, four-mile, 18:53 1/5, made in 1901; freshman, two-mile, 9:07 3/5, made in 1909; four-oared, two mile, 10:01, made in 1909; and junior varsity, two-mile, 10:00 1/5, made in 1915. Mr. Courtney considered his three crews this season as among the best he had ever turned out and was hopeful that a clean sweep would be made. Many have contended that he erred when he chose the heavy boat for the varsity race; but it was the error of judgment in the boat which lost the race and not any lack of ability on the part of Courtney or the crew, or any lack of judgment on his part. Courtney was a strict disciplinarian, demanding always of his men that they should give all they had to their rowing. His training rules were adhered to without question, or the oarsman got out. Only last spring a fine oarsman was dropped from the squad for failure to live up to the training orders. Two stories of his strict methods have often been told. One involves his now celebrated "shortcake" crew of 1897. Shortly before the Poughkeepsie races the coach, in a way all his own, learned that his varsity crew had broken training to indulge in a shortcake treat. He promptly dropped the entire boat and substituted the second varsity eight, which won the race in good time. In 1907 Mr. Courtney was forced, because of dredging in the Inlet, to limit the number of oarsmen at the varsity boathouse to about twenty. The other crew men, numbering nearly one hundred, became disgruntled. The Old Man heard of it and dropped the entire hundred. Out of the twenty he turned out a fine crew. To Mr. Courtney is due the invention of the rolling seat, which he invented in his early rowing days. The original model was recovered a few years ago and is now kept at the Cornell boathouse. He also developed the famous Courtney stroke, which no other coach has been quite able to imitate, and which has been a decisive factor in Cornell's victories. Mr. Courtney himself described it in Professor Hewett's history as follows: "From the beginning of the stroke the backs of the men are kept straight as are also the arms until the body has its full swing; then the hands are brought quickly up to the body, the elbows being kept low and close to the sides. Instead of putting the oar into the water at right angles, it goes in at an angle of about forty-five degrees, turning after it is in the water. The slide is not started until the oarsman has passed the erect position and the oar is at right angles with the shell. Then it is shot out to its full length. The recovery is slow and deliberate to prevent checking the boat." Mr. Courtney is survived by his wife, a sister, two nieces, and four nephews. The funeral was held, by special request of Mrs. Courtney, from the house which had been given to him by a grateful Cornell and Ithaca group of admirers. It took place at four p. m. on July 20. The Rev. Alfred K. Bates, formerly minister of the First Presbyterian Church, officiated. Interment was made in Lake View Cemetery.

W301 Fred Brainard Corey

Class of '92, Fred Brainard Corey, Barberton, Ohio. Corey was a native of Homer, N. Y., and a graduate of its Academy. He took the Electrical Engineering course and after graduation went to the General Electric Company in Schenectady. Later he engaged in the engineering business at Barberton, Ohio. Corey has been interested in the literature of engineering and has written many articles for engineering magazines. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Corey was married to a Cornell woman, Caroline L. Heberd, '93. They have two children.

From: Class Book Thirty-Three Years, Cornell University Class of 1892, Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor Co., New Haven, CN, 1925, p. 69.

Fred Brainard Corey. Engineering, invention, salesmanship and sundry other occupations are united in the chronicle of Mr. Corey's professional work. Fred Brainard Corey was originally a New York man, born at Homer, September 28, 1869, taking up electrical engineering studies at Cornell University and graduating in 1892 with the degree of mechanical engineer. Immediately thereafter he went into the employ of the Elektron Manufacturing Company, of Springfield, Mass., makers of the once popular Perret electric motors and generators. Several months' intensive training in their office and factory departments fitted him to become the Eastern New England representative at Boston, and he thus acquired early a practical sales and engineering experience. He is now efficiency engineer of the Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company, making his home at Barberton, Ohio. But during the intervening years he was active in a wide range of endeavor, serving successively the A. B. See Electric Elevator Co., as electrical engineer, the Springfield Elevator & Pump Co. as secretary and superintendent, the General Electric Company as designing engineer, and the Union Switch & Signal Co. as engineer of inspection and tests. Mr. Corey's inherited instincts, coupled with his first studies in physics, bred a penchant for invention which has been cultivated to the extent of some seventy-eight United States patents (others pending) taken out on numerous electrical and mechanical devices, for the most part relating to electric and steam railway operation. Engineering subjects form the content of articles which he frequently contributes to general and technical publications, and he has delivered timely lectures of similar character before professional societies. Mr. Corey is a Fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers; and a long line of Colonial ancestry brings him into the Sons of the American Revolution.

W302 John Fillmore Hayford

Obituary. JOHN F. HAYFORD '89 Dr. John Fillmore Hayford, director of the College of Engineering at Northwestern University, and one of the leading engineers of the country, died at his home in Evanston, Ill., on March 10, following a stroke of apoplexy suffered in December. He was born at Rouse's Point, N. Y., on May 19, 1868, the son of Hiram and Mildred Fillmore Hayford. His early education was secured there, and he came to Cornell in 1885 as a student of civil engineering. He graduated in 1889 with the degree of C.E. He was a member of the track team and in the meet of the New York Intercollegiate Athletic Association in 1887, won the mile run. In his senior year, he was class athletic director and a member of the Athletic Council. He was also a member of the Christian Association. Following his graduation, he was appointed a computer in the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. In 1892-3 he was an assistant astronomer in charge of a field party for the United States and Mexican International Boundary Commission. The next year he returned to the geodetic survey work and in 1895 began a term of three years as an instructor in civil engineering at Cornell. In 1898 he returned again to geodetic work as an expert computer and geodesist and in 1900 became inspector of geodetic work and chief of the computing division in the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. He held this position until 1909 when he assumed the post at Northwestern University which he held at his death. He became particularly noted for his establishment of the theory of isostasy, which tends to establish that earthquakes are caused by movements of the earth's crust; for this he was awarded the Victoria Medal by the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain. Another great accomplishment was his computation of the distance between the poles as being 7,926.678 miles and the diameter of the earth as 7,899.964 miles. These measurements were but recently accepted by the International Geodetic and Physical Union at Madrid. He was a member of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics from 1915 to 1923; a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, the American Astronomical Society, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Western Society of Engineers; and a research associate of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. Dr. Hayford was the author of "Geodetic Astronomy" and also of numerous monographs and reports. He was married on October 11, 1894, at Charlotte, N. Y., to Miss Lucy Stone, sister of Professor Walter King Stone, who survives him.

For general purposes there is here given a rapid summary of the more important dates and events in the life of Dr. Hayford. Some of these are dealt with at greater length elsewhere in these memoirs. Born May 19, 1868, at Rouses Point, New York. Attended country schools, Rouses Point High School two years, Detroit High School two years. Entered Cornell University, College of Engineering, 1885. Graduated, degree Civil Engineer, 1889. Appointed Computer, U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, June 22, 1889. Served in Tidal Division until December 15, 1890. Transferred to Office of Standard Weights and Measures, and served there until July 20, 1891, when he went as recorder on the Holton, Indiana, base line for three months. Returning to the office of Standard Weights and Measures, he remained there until the end of December 1891, and was then transferred to the position of Aid in the field force of the Survey. Assistant Astronomer, U. S. and Mexican International Boundary Commission, February 1892 until January 1894. Returned to the Survey as Aid and was promoted to Assistant in 1894. Summer 1894 in Alaska on astronomical work in connection with boundary survey. Married Lucy Stone, October 11, 1894. September 1895 to April 1898, instructor Civil Engineering, Cornell University. July 9, 1898, appointed Expert Computer and Geodesist in the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. May 3, 1899, became Inspector of Geodetic Work. Appointed Assistant in the field force, 1899. Appointed Inspector of Geodetic Work and Chief of the Computing Division in 1900 and served in that capacity until October 1909. Delegate with O. H. Tittmann, representing the United States at the Budapest meeting of the International Geodetic Association, 1906, and also at the London and Cambridge meeting of 1909. Elected Director, College of Engineering, Northwestern University, October 1908, to take up the duties in September, 1909. Elected to National Academy of Sciences, April, 1911. Chairman, Commission of Engineers, Costa Rica-Panama Boundary Arbitration, October 1911 to November 1913. Appointed member National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 1915. Appointed member of Commission to study Panama Slides, November 18, 1915. Granted honorary degree Sc.D. from George Washington University in 1918. Special war work in Washington on Airplane and Navy instruments. Awarded Victoria Medal by the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain, 1924. Awarded Chanute Medal, Western Society of Engineers, 1925. Died at Evanston, Illinois, March 10, 1925... [excerpt]

Obituary. ★ELLIOT P. HINDS '96. The death of Captain Elliot Prindle Hinds, A.S., S.R.C., is reported in the casualty list published July 8. His death resulted from injuries received in an accident while flying over the French lines, in the performance of his duty, on June 24. Hinds received the degree of M.E. in 1896. He was one of the best tennis players in western New York, having held the championship of the city of Niagara Falls. He was president of the Hinds Paper Box Company of that city. Soon after the outbreak of the war, he entered the aviation service, training at Memphis, Tenn., and Rantoul, Ill. He sailed for France on December 3, 1917, and had established a notable record as an aviator. He was reported, unofficially, to have brought down several German planes. W307 Charles Abram Ellwood

Necrology. '96 PhB—CHARLES ABRAM ELLWOOD, internationally known sociologist and professor of sociology at Duke University from 1930 until his retirement in June, 1944, September 25, 1946, at his home, 129 Pinecrest Road, Durham, N. C. He was called to Duke from the University of Missouri, where he had taught for more than twenty-nine years, to organize and head a department of sociology. A past president of the American Sociological Society, of the International Institute of Sociology, and of the national society of Pi Gamma Mu, he was the author of twelve books, which have been translated and published in French, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Korean. They include Sociology and Modern Social Problems, An Introduction to Social Psychology, The Reconstruction of Religion, and A History of Social Philosophy. This year, Ellwood presented to Duke University a replica of the stone bench which stands in front of Goldwin Smith Hall.

CHARLES ABRAM ELLWOOD JANUARY 20, 1873 - SEPTEMBER 25, 1946. Charles A. Ellwood was the 14th President of the American Sociological Society (name later changed to Association). His Presidential Address, "Intolerance," was delivered at the organization's annual meeting in Chicago in 1924 and was later published in the Proceedings of the 1924 Annual Meeting. Upon his death in 1946, several obituaries for Dr. Ellwood were published, including one by Edgar T. Thompson (ASR 11:753-754) and one by Howard E. Jensen (AJS 52:362). Howard W. Odum's 1951 publication, American Sociology: The Story of Sociology in the United States through 1950 contained the following biography of Charles A. Ellwood (see pages 128-131): The fourteenth president of the American Sociological Society, Charles A. Ellwood, in 1924, might very well be selected as one of the three of the first presidents who had a thorough education in sociology, although he, too, had minored strongly in economics and had been influenced by Ely. In addition to starting with the dynamic Ross at Cornell, he also worked with W. F. Willcox and J. W. Jenks. But his real training was with Small, Henderson, Thomas, and Vincent at Chicago, from which point on he was a full-fledged sociologist. In his background in general, however, he conformed to the patterns of the early years of twentieth-century sociology. He was born in New York, January 20, 1873, and was graduated from Cornell University in 1896; yet thereafter he became an exponent of the Middle States, first with his studying at Chicago, then in his transitional efforts to get located at Nebraska, then finally at the University of Missouri where he became one of the leading American sociologists for thirty years, before building another department at Duke University for still another fifteen years. Like Small, Blackmar, Hayes, and Weatherly before him, he also studied in Europe and returned to receive his Ph.D. degree under Small at Chicago in 1899. Like them, he also received considerable momentum from certain economists, particularly Ely and Jenks, but, unlike his predecessors, he received his doctor's degree at the earlier age of twenty-six, and was the first of the presidents who came all the way up through university training in sociology. His experience was similar to that of others of his contemporaries in sociology, as well as in economics and political science, in that it was difficult to find a position in sociology in any university. He thus went directly as secretary of a charity organization society at Lincoln, Nebraska, where he could also lecture in sociology at the University of Nebraska, all for perhaps less than a thousand dollars a year. Then there was an offer of a professorship of sociology at the University of Missouri at $1500 which he accepted with his characteristic eagerness and to which he devoted himself powerfully for three decades. Ellwood was like his earlier contemporaries in that he devoted himself to much work, many contact and varied teaching, having taught in perhaps a baker's dozen institutions during the summer or on leave of absence from Missouri or Duke. Among others, he was visiting professor, largely in summers, at Columbia, Chicago, Colorado, Southern California, Utah, Wisconsin,

Harvard, Northwestern. In addition to his prominence in the American Sociological Society, he, like Hayes and Weatherly and Howard, was president of the State Conference of Charities and Corrections as was his colleague Howard Jenson after him. He traveled and studied in Czechoslovakia, France, Italy, Austria, Germany, England, and in other places beyond his own nation. Among the many other activities and honors, the following may be listed: Chairman of the Section on Social Psychology, International Congress of Arts and Sciences, St. Louis, 1904; Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; Corresponding member, Deutsche Gesellschaft für Sociologie; Honorary member, Masaryk Sociological Society of Czechoslovakia; Honorary member, Société de Sociologie de Genève; National President, Pi Gamma Mu, 1931—37; President, International Congress of Sociology, Brussels, 1935; President, International Institute of Sociology, 1935—36; member of National Education Association and director of the Department of Social Studies, 1922—24. In connection with publications, Ellwood was advisory editor of The American Journal of Sociology and an associate editor of the journal of Criminal Law and Criminology. He served on the editorial staffs of the journal of Educational Sociology, Sociology and Social Research (formerly journal of Applied Sociology), Social Science, and World Affairs Interpreter. He received the LL.D. degree from Bethany College in 1922. His main books included Public Relief and Private Charity in England, 1903; Sociology and Modern Social Problems, 1910; Sociology in Its Psychological Aspects, 1913; The Social Problem, 1915; Introduction to Social Psychology, 1917; The Reconstruction of Religion, 1922; Christianity and Social Science, 1923; The Psychology of Human Society, 1925; Cultural Evolution, 1927; Man's Social Destiny, 1929; Methods in Sociology, 1933; A History of Social Philosophy, 1938. In addition to these, Ellwood collaborated in a dozen other books, wrote approximately a hundred and fifty articles, and contributed nearly two score articles to encyclopedias and brochures. The aggregate sale of his books, he estimated, ran into more than a million copies, including foreign translations of several. Ellwood's presidential address was devoted to "Intolerance" and was published in the Papers and Proceedings of the Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the American Sociological Society, Volume IX, 1925. His address was an attempt to give sociological interpretation to certain trends that followed in the wake of World War I. It was, therefore, an American sociologist's reaction and was set in the national framework and would appear peculiarly appropriate in the light of much discussion of the same subject after World War II. Ellwood was concerned that intolerance seemed to be growing in every form of American life and he concluded that intolerance was a handicap to social progress. Intolerance breeds separation, misunderstanding, and hostility between groups, which may lead to civic disorder and revolution. Repression that suppresses intercommunication also breeds revolution. Intercommunication is the organ of adjustment for conscious social change. His remedy was to convert the people to a scientific attitude of mind. Howard Jensen, long-time colleague and successor of Ellwood at Duke, considers Barnes's estimate of Ellwood as authentic in that it had Ellwood's general approval. Barnes says on pages 855–56 of his Introduction to the History of Sociology, "one may say that his deep and abiding interest in social reform, the meliorative undercurrent in all his social philosophy, and his belief in the possibility of rational social progress through education in the social sciences were derived from his reading of Lester F. Ward and Auguste Comte and from the teachings of his mentor, Albion W. Small. His interest in, and command of, functional psychology and his application of it to sociology came mainly from his studies under Dewey and Angell. His later shift to an anthropocultural approach to social problems was due mainly to the influence of L. T. Hobhouse and R. R. Marett. In the reconstruction of his psychological sociology in the twenties, Ellwood was influenced not only by Marett and Hobhouse, but especially by C. H. Cooley. He was particularly impressed by Cooley's synthesis and restatement of his psychological sociology in his Social Process." Barnes sees, on pages 864–65, "in the development of Ellwood's sociological outlook...what has been a characteristic trend in contemporary sociology, namely, a recognition of the fact that psychological sociology is a branch of cultural sociology — that psychic forces are more of a cultural, than a biological, product. Ellwood's attitude toward culture has been evolutionary. In approaching cultural evolution his thought is in harmony with that of Comte, Ward, and Hobhouse, namely, that the course of cultural evolution can be brought under the control of the human mind and can be consciously directed in harmony with the teachings of social science. "Ellwood has succeeded Ward as the main protagonist in his generation of the idea that sociology should be a normative and ameliorative social philosophy, justified mainly by its aid in improving society and the well-being of mankind. He has fought valiantly against a sterile 'objectivism' in social science."

CHARLES HENRY RAMMELKAMP, 1874-1932. I. Boyhood and Youth. With an inheritance of sturdy uprightness from his German parents, who were making a place for themselves in the America of the first half of the 19th century, Charles Henry Rammelkamp began life on February 25, 1874, in a modest but favorable environment. His father, George Rammelkamp, a skilled cabinet maker, came from that part of Germany near the boundary of Holland where the population is Dutch in origin but of German nationality. He joined the "Forty-Niners" in the rush to California and found his share of gold. Returning to New York, he put it into the establishment of his business, a small furniture factory. Charles Rammelkamp lived in a German atmosphere. His father had a family of several sons by his first marriage to a German woman, and his own mother, the second wife, was Meta Krack, a girl from the same region in Germany from which her husband came. German was the language of the household all during his youth. In fact, his mother continued to write to her son until her death in 1928, in her quaint German script. All the dear delights of a German household, its domesticity, its jollity, its love of festivities and sociability, its affection and sentiment were his. For him birthdays and Christmas and Easter were high festivals, with many family customs to observe. So was his heart kept simple and warm... [excerpt]

CHARLES M. WIKOFF PASSES AT 81 YEARS, WAS CITIZEN OF BROAD CONTACTS. The death of Charles M. Wikoff, one of the more prominent farmers in the town of Richfield and in Otsego County, occurred at his home here on June 19, 1953, after a long period of declining health. He was 81 years old. The funeral was held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Methodist Church, the Reverend Howard F. Knapp, pastor, officiating with the assistance of the Reverend Louis R. Bruce, Sr. Interment was made in Lakeview Cemetery. Mr. Wikoff was born on the farm on which his passing occurred, September 23, 1871, a son of Garrett and Carolyn Ames Wikoff. He was graduated from Richfield Springs High School with the class of 1892, the fourth class to be graduated from that institution. In June 1896 he was a member of the first class to be graduated from Cornell University's law school, earning the bachelor of law degree. On June 21, 1905, he was united in marriage with Catherine Jennings of Naples, N.Y., teacher training class teacher here. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend William Caldwell, Methodist pastor. Farmer, Not Lawyer. Although admitted to the bar of New York State Mr. Wikoff never practiced law. It became necessary for him to conduct the home farm of over 200 acres on the west side of Canadarago Lake. This he did until serious illness came several weeks ago. He became one of Otsego County's outstanding farmers, not only in making farming pay for himself but in taking an active and leading part in initiating and effecting movements that advanced the farmers', particularly the dairymen's, interests. He helped organize and was president of the Otsego County Farm Bureau and of the Richfield Springs Dairymen's League Local; he was active in the G. L. F., in the grange and a member of Richfield Grange. Mr. Wikoff was a member of the Methodist Church in Richfield Springs and supported it loyally and royally. He was a trustee of the church and a member of its official board. In the broader field of the church he was a member of the Northern New York Conference. For 35 years he was a member of the board of education. Being particularly interested in public speaking he had given for several years prizes for public speaking contests. Though living outside the incorporated limits Mr. Wikoff was keenly interested in the advancement and promotion of this village and often gave of his time and his subsistence to advance its interests and meet its obligations. His was a broadly useful career, touching helpfully the religious life, the educational life and the civic life of the community. There survive, Mrs. Wikoff; a daughter, Mrs. Louis R. Bruce, Jr.; one brother, Earl Wikoff of Syracuse; and three grandchildren.

Eleanor Gould Packard, 87, Editor Who Oversaw the New Yorker's Prose, Dies. By Betsy Wade. Eleanor Gould Packard, whose questions, comments and admonitions on the proofs of thousands of articles for The New Yorker for 54 years defined for many the care (some writers said obsessiveness) taken in editing the magazine, died Sunday in Manhattan. She was 87. Her death was announced by her daughter, Susan Hathaway Packard. Miss Gould, as she was known to the staff, challenged the logic, syntax, grammar, flow, usage, punctuation and vocabulary of a legion of nonfiction writers: E. B. White, Roger Angell, Wolcott Gibbs, Ved Mehta, Pauline Kael, Philip Hamburger, John McPhee, Lillian Ross. Many at The New Yorker believed the precisely penciled Gould proofs sustained its suavity of style. David Remnick, the magazine's editor, once said: "I think if there is an indispensable person here, it's Eleanor Gould. The relationship to her is as intimate as it gets; she has been inside my sentences." Invoking Harold Ross, the magazine's founding editor, Mr. Hamburger said, "It is my impression that she brought to fruition an idea that Ross had, that everything should be looked at by a skeptical eye, not a cynical one, before it was presented to the public." Mr. Hamburger, who was interviewed several years before his death, sighed a little. "Such probity and intelligence," he said. Miss Gould's own view of her work was less glorified: "I just try to make things right." Her work was not easily encompassed in a job title, and the magazine never saw a need to give her one. She was not a fact-checker, though she did find errors. She was not a story editor, copy editor or proofreader. She did not enter the process until an article had been examined by lawyers and editors and was in galley proof, close to the last minute. She worked her way down both margins, penciling corrections and suggestions in a legible hand, always providing her rationale. "A miracle to watch," said Edith Iglauer, an editor who once worked with her. "The words danced across the page." As all editors know, showing such a thing to a tetchy or insecure writer might induce a tantrum. "Not every writer gets to see a Gould proof," Mr. Angell said while she was still on the job. "It's a challenge. You have to take a Gould proof seriously because she is a scrupulous reader, but you have to know what to ignore." If everything she recommended had been carried forward, he said, "it would be like the purest water - absolutely tasteless." Yet Mr. Remnick said on her death, "If it's true The New Yorker is known for the clarity of its prose, then Miss Gould had as much to do with establishing that as its more famous editors and writers." He said that she had been greatly missed since a stroke took her off the job in 1999, but that there were still editors on the staff she had helped to train. Miss Gould never used a computer and deadline pressure could sometimes render her handwritten work moot, especially during Tina Brown's chaotic six years as editor. Eleanor Gould was born Oct. 3, 1917, in Newark, N.Y., to Wilson Mosher Gould, a lawyer, and Eleanor Loveland Gould. The family moved to Ohio and Eleanor graduated from high school in East Palestine, Ohio, in 1934. She won a scholarship to Oberlin and graduated summa cum laude with a major in English in 1938. Aline Kilmer, a poet in New Jersey, became her mentor after years of correspondence Eleanor had initiated at 14. Kilmer taught her editing and helped her come to New York, and after several miserably paid editing jobs she applied to The New Yorker. There was a myth that she flyspecked an entire issue and enclosed it with her application. But she described an application of less hubris: she noted two mistakes in recent issues, including, good Lord, a "different than." She joined The New Yorker Nov. 5, 1945. Her marriage to Frederick A. Packard, also on the magazine's staff, came a year later, and the birth of their only child, Susan, a little more than a year after that. Her daughter and two grandsons survive. In 1952, the family moved to Central Park West and 101st Street, where Miss Gould remained as long as she worked. She took a bus to the office on West 43rd Street, carrying a small lunch in an old shoe bag. For amusement, Miss Gould, who belonged at one time to Mensa, an organization of the supersmart, would factor the four-digit bus identification numbers. In an interview in the summer of 1998, Miss Gould said she hoped to "complete a century of Packards" at The New Yorker. Her husband worked there for 45 years before he died in 1974. But for the stroke the year before, Miss Gould would have reached 55 years in 2000. She was proud of her status. She cited the pinnacle she reached in 1972: a separate credit in "The Elements of Style," the hugely popular text written by William Strunk Jr. and revived by E. B. White. The citation, which says, "The co-author, E. B. White, is most grateful to Eleanor Gould Packard for her assistance in preparation of this second edition," recognized her as the linguistic equivalent of the Pope's confessor. Interviewing Miss Gould for this obituary put the writer on the spot. Because she had been deaf since 1990, all questions had to be written; because of her status as a legendary editor, spelling counted. While asking about a Roger Angell statement, the interviewer at first wrote the name "Angel," then added the second l. Miss Gould observed, "I was going to say..." Always the arbiter, she added, with amusement, "I'll have to stage a faked death and come back to correct my obit."

HERMAN K. VEDDER.

W321 & W431 Herman Klock Vedder

Herman Klock Vedder (1866–1937) graduated from Cornell University and worked as a civil engineer, focussing [sic] mainly on bridges and hydraulics, before becoming Professor of Civil Engineering at M.A.C. in 1891, which at the time was a seat within the Department of Mathematics and Civil Engineering. During his tenure Vedder tirelessly sought to expand the program and was instrumental in separating civil engineering from mathematics with the creation of the Department of Civil Engineering in 1909, which he then headed until his retirement circa 1925. "During his service at M.A.C. he constructed a sewer system, directed numerous surveys, constructed bridges, designed systems of plumbing; for outside parties inspecting and building bridges, plotted city subdivisions [including the Oakwood plat], investigated the water power of streams; engineering for electric and steam railroads; planned railroad for Lansing manufactures; state examiner of plots 1907 to 1910." H. K. Vedder and his wife, née Kate Humphrey Dodd (1866–1923), raised two daughters. At one time he also served as president of the East Lansing school board.

W327 Harry Leonard Taylor

Following The Stars Of Other Years By Robert J. Kane '34, Director Of Athletics. 1.—From Diamond to Bench: Harry L. Taylor '88. THE FAMILIAR American saga, “farm boy makes good in city,” has never been more fluently portrayed than by Judge Harry Leonard Taylor, AB '88, LLB '93. A country bumpkin from nearby Halsey Valley, he attended Spencer Union School for two of his secondary-school years and Ithaca High School, the other two. No academic honors, he says, “except to pass all examinations in due course.” He was a good high-school baseball player, though. Taylor came into his own at Cornell and flourished in all endeavors there and thereafter. Phi Beta Kappa, star baseball player, a renowned, active, and popular student, he went on to become an outstanding professional baseball player and thence a leading Buffalo lawyer, county judge, Justice of the Supreme Court, and finally, Justice of the Appellate Division, Supreme Court of New York State. But let him tell his absorbing story” in his own succinct, judicial language: “I entered Cornell in the fall of 1884 because my parents wanted me to get a good education. Although there was a baseball team at Cornell from the day the first nine men enrolled, it did not amount to much until about the time I entered. There were some excellent players in school at that time: Harry Dimon, Bob Newberry, George Ruyter, Franklin Olin. In my Freshman year we did not lose a game and we ended the season with a glorious victory over Columbia, 10-4. I played third base the first year and was catcher the next three and again in 1893. There were no rules then. All you had to be was a bona-fide student and even that was not too important. Plays Professional Baseball “After graduation in June, 1888, I played professional baseball in the minors and taught at Media (Pa.) Prep School. In 1890, I went up to the majors, playing with Louisville, which was in the American Association. That year, Brooklyn won the National and Louisville, the American, and we played a World Series. After each team won three games, the seventh was a tie and then the weather got so cold we quit, so there was no champion. Louisville finished far down in 1891 and 1892. I don't recall my batting average for all the years, but I remember one year I had an even .300. I was the lead-off hitter each year I was at Louisville and played first base. After the 1890 season, the New York Giants attempted to 'buy' me, but the deal did not go through. "In the fall of 1892, I went back to Cornell and received my Law degree in June of 1893. I played for Cornell that spring and then went with Baltimore, which had acquired me from Louisville for the rest of the year. "On the advice and recommendation of (then) Professor Charles Evans Hughes, I took a position with a law firm in Buffalo and I have been here ever since. Governor Higgins appointed me County Judge of Erie County in December, 1906, to fill out an unexpired term and the following November I was duly elected to the office for a sixyear term. In the fall of 1913, I was elected to the Supreme Court and reelected in 1927. In 1924, Governor Alfred E. Smith designated me to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, where I served until December, 1936. And there the Constitution of the United States stopped me. I had reached retirement age. President White a Partisan "One of the things I shall always remember about playing baseball for Cornell was the Columbia game in Ithaca in 1885, played on the Quadrangle. Sullivan, the Columbia pitcher, hit our catcher, Hall, on the head with a pitched ball. Dear old President Andrew D. White darted from his seat on the sidelines, stopped the game, strode out on the field in high silk hat and with beard flying, and gave the Columbia pitcher a stiff lecture, then walked back to his seat and the game resumed. "I always liked the thrill and excitement of athletic competition and enjoyed particularly my playing days at Cornell. There were no coaches then and we worked things out together, and with winning there was a great sense of accomplishment. Cornell has meant much to me and still does. I was an alumni member of the Board of Trustees for ten years while I was on the bench." It was Taylor's custom for several years after graduation to come back to the Campus and help out in any way he could. At the Junior Smoker of March 12, 1898, he was master of ceremonies. The Sun reported that the principal speaker, Professor E. W. Huffcut, referring to his frequent visits, spoke of him as "Harry 'Loyal' Taylor, one of the graduates who has passed on to us that priceless treasure, true Cornell spirit." Meticulous Coach Judge Taylor, in good health at eighty-five, resides with his sister at the Hotel Lenox in Buffalo. With provident care, he asked to see the manuscript of this article. He demonstrated similar judge-like prudence at a much earlier age: In April, 1898, he came back for a week to help coach the baseball team and was on the bench for the Vermont game in which Cornell was beaten, 9-5. The captain of the team was the estimable Charles V. P. "Tar" Young '99, and a proud and headstrong one he was. With Cornell leading in the fourth inning, Captain Young on his own initiative sent in the substitute pitcher, Kelton E. ("Andy") White '01, for Joe Bole '00. White had a bad day, but Tar would not consent to his removal and the game was lost. After it was over, Harry Taylor immediately sought out the Sun reporter to disclaim responsibility for the substitution of White and insist that his protest be placed on the record. The Cornell Daily Sun of April 29, 1898, printed in its lead paragraph of the game write-up: "An unhappy substitution of White for Bole was made and the game was lost—it was unfortunate in having been done without the sanction and against the advice of the coaches." Another visiting alumni coach was Ed Young '94, Captain Tar's brother.

HARRY L. TAYLOR, JURIST 38 YEARS. RETIRED STATE SUPREME COURT MEMBER DIES AT 89—PLAYED BALL IN MAJOR LEAGUES. Buffalo, July 12 (AP)—Harry L. Taylor, retired State Supreme Court Justice and former major league baseball player, died today after a long illness. His age was 89. Mr. Taylor retired as an official referee in 1944 after thirty-eight years as a jurist. He had served as Erie county Judge for seven years until elected to the State Supreme Court in 1913. He was re-elected in 1927. Mr. Taylor was appointed to the Appellate Division by the late Gov. Alfred E. Smith in 1924. He continued to serve on the higher court until his retirement in 1936. He had practiced law privately for three years after he retired as official referee. He was born in Halsey Valley, Tioga County, and attended Spencer Union School and Ithaca High School. He was graduated from Cornell University in 1888 and broke into professional baseball in 1889 with Elmira in the old State League. Mr. Taylor reached the major leagues with Louisville in the old American Association in 1890 and played first base and the outfield. He batted .274 with Louisville in 1892 and was traded the following year to the old Baltimore Orioles in the National League, where he batted .294. During his baseball career Mr. Taylor attended Cornell Law School in the winter and received a law degree in 1893. He came to Buffalo and established his law practice in 1894. Mr. Taylor served at one time as president of the Buffalo Baseball Club. In 1906, he was president of the old Eastern League, a predecessor of the present International League. In recent years Mr. Taylor had made his home with a sister.

W328 William Herbert Sawyer

(VIII) William Herbert Sawyer, elder son of Laurentius T. and Cornelia A. (Tolman) Sawyer, was born October 13, 1863, on the old Sawyer homestead in the town of Watertown. In a competitive examination after he graduated from the Watertown high school, he won a scholarship at Cornell University. In 1884 he entered this institution and graduated in a course of science and letters in 1888. For about a year he was engaged in the grocery business at Elmira, New York, and then returned to the homestead, where he has since been successfully engaged in agriculture and dairying to the present time. He is a member of Watertown Grange, of which he was master two years, and of Watertown Lodge No. 49, Free and Accepted Masons. He also affiliates with the Burr's Mills Congregational church, and in politics has always advocated and sustained the principles of the Republican organization. He has held the office of justice of the peace since 1898, and his official career has proved satisfactory to his townsmen and conferred credit upon himself. Like his progenitors, Mr. Sawyer is a man of affairs. As a business man he has the esteem of all who have come in contact with him. As an officer he is respected for his efforts to adjust differences and the rectitude of his decisions, and for his regard for the public interests, as a member of the town board. As a citizen he is ever actuated by a desire for the betterment of society. As a son and husband he sustains the character of the Sawyers, and enjoys the affection and confidence of his family. Mr. Sawyer was married, June 16, 1887, to Miss Lillian Delphine Bowdish, daughter of Philander and Augusta Lucinda (Gorham) Bowdish. She was born September 4, 1862, in the town of Sherbin, Chenango county, New York. She is a woman of education and refinement, and occasionally prepares articles which are delivered before Watertown Grange, in which she is a valued member. She also contributes to newspapers in description of her travels, which work is appreciated by her many friends. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer is a pleasant one, replete with the comforts of life, and here hospitality is true and sincere, entertaining friends with that thoughtful care which is a part of their natures, inherited from worthy ancestors.

W329 Samuel Longfellow Etnyre

Samuel L. Etnyre Engineering in its various lines has become a marked necessity of our twentieth century civilization. The colleges have recognized this and have instituted thorough courses in these lines and can scarcely supply the demand for well equipped engineers. Prominent in this profession is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch—one who has served as city engineer in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Etnyre was born in Oregon, [Ogle Co.] Illinois, in 1866, and there received his preliminary education and was reared to manhood. Recognizing the trend of the times, he took up a course in civil engineering at Cornell University, from which he was graduated with honor in 1888. He located at Council Bluffs, where he has since followed his profession. In 1894 he was elected city engineer and has served in this capacity ever since, except the years 1896 and 1897. Mr. Etnyre has never made a sinecure of his office but has always fulfilled its duties with honor; He has a spirit that, while devoted to his resident community, is liberal enough to recognize and appreciate advancement and progress in any other part of the world. He was popular as a young man and in his more mature years has won the esteem and confidence of all with whom public or private life have brought him in contact. He is a member of the Masonic order, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Elks, and is active in the local ranks of the democratic party. An important event in his life took place in Council Bluffs on December 21, 1903, when was celebrated his marriage to Isabel Paterson, a daughter of William L. and Mary E. (Wallace) Paterson. One son has blessed this union, Samuel Rice Etnyre.

NOTED ENGINEER DEAD. James H. Edwards '88, Trustee Fifteen Years, Pioneered in Structural Steel Work. James Harvey Edwards '88, Trustee for fifteen years, died August 14. He was chief engineer of the American Bridge Company and was one of the notable figures in the development of structural steel engineering. He was born at Oxford, N. Y., June 19, 1864. His first training was in his father's foundry. At his graduation from Cornell, he wrote a thesis which critically analyzed the deficient bracing of the lenticular or Berlin parabolic truss then popular for highway bridges. In 1888 he went to work for the Berlin Iron Bridge Company as a structural draftsman. He was appointed chief engineer in 1897, and through his genius in design the company rapidly developed the steel-frame industrial building. In 1900 Mr. Edwards was appointed structural engineer of the newly-formed American Bridge Company which absorbed the Berlin company and in 1901 became assistant chief engineer. Three years ago he was made chief engineer. During the quarter-century he was with the company he was in charge of all building work. In 1916 he was placed in charge of the building program of all components of the United States Steel Corporation. He became interested in fusion welding and created new forms of structural design and detail suited to welding. The American Welding Society, in which he was a vice-president and head of its structural steel welding committee, a year ago awarded Mr. Edwards a medal. He was also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Iron and Steel Institute, and the American Railway Engineering Association. Speaking editorially, The Engineering News-Record said: Structural engineering has lost a man whom it can ill spare. For forty years James H. Edwards has been a leader in the development of steel structure; he played a large part in creating the steel mill building, and during the past decade he was the practical idealist who did more than any other man to bring fusion welding to recognition as a reality in building work. He labored quietly, unobtrusively, and in a kindly manner...In large measure, the life of J. H. Edwards reached the ideal which is every engineer's goal."

W334 Fred Byron Pitcher

Pitcher, Fred B., traces his ancestors through a long line to England. His father, Seymour H. Pitcher, was born in Lewis county, N. Y., and is still living. Fred B. was born in Adams, N. Y., April 29, 1867; he was educated in the common schools of his native village and after graduating from the Adams Collegiate Institute, pursued a complete course of studies in the Cornell University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1888, receiving the degree of B. S. Having determined to locate in the city of Watertown, he entered the office of ex-Judge J. C. McCartin and was admitted to the bar in 1890; he continued in the office of Judge McCartin for the following two years, and at the death of the judge assumed his business which he conducted until the spring of 1897, when he formed a copartnership with Charles H. Walts, ex-county judge of Jefferson county, which partnership still continues. Mr. Pitcher is not only a prominent member of the bar, but is also an active politician, being an enthusiastic Republican. He is also prominent in fraternal societies, being a member and officer in the various local Masonic bodies. He was for five years a member of the 39th Separate Company, N. G. N. Y. and is chairman of the Republican county committee and corporation counsel of the city of Watertown.

Obituary. FRED B. PITCHER '88. Fred Byron Pitcher died suddenly in his office in Watertown, N. Y., on September 2, following a second paralytic stroke. He was born in Adams, N. Y., in 1867 the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Pitcher and after attending the public schools in that village, he went to the Adams Collegiate Institute from which he came to Cornell in 1884 as a student in the science course. He was a member of the Civil Engineering Association. In 1888 he was graduated with the degree of B. S. Immediately after graduation, he entered the law offices of the late County Judge John C. McCartin in Watertown and studied law, being later admitted to the bar. When Judge McCartin died, he continued the practice for a time, then took in Judge Charles H. Walts as a partner. This partnership ended in 1907 when Judge Walts died and the next year the firm of Pitcher and O'Brien was formed of which he was the head at the time of his death. Throughout his life he was active in politics. From 1898 to 1901 he was city attorney in Watertown and from 1904 to 1910 was district attorney for Jefferson County. Later he served two terms as State Senator. He was a member of the American Bar Association, the New York State Bar Association, and the Jefferson County Bar Association. Besides his wife, he is survived by one son, Seymour, his mother, Mrs. S. H. Pitcher of Adams, and several nieces and nephews.

W339 Mario Garcia Menocal

PROMINENT CORNELLIANs. I. MARIO GARCIA MENOCAL, '88. Mario Garcia Menocal, '88, is the corming man of Cuba. The selection of General Menocal as chief of police of Havana has a significance which is understood and appreciated all over the island. His appointment by General Brooke not only was a recognition of Menocal's merit and executive ability, but was to a certain extent a reward for perhaps the most striking act of personal heroism performed in the Cuban war. It was in the spring of 1897

that the city of Guaymaro in Camaguey was besieged by Garcia's forces and captured after a stubborn resistance on the part of the enemy. Americans now know what kind of a fight Spaniards can make when placed behind entrenchments and fortifications. At Guaymaro, after the outer defences had been abandoned, a massive stone cathedral in the center of the place, heavily garrisoned by men who kept up a merciless fire from the long, narrow windows and protected arches, minarets and belfries, promised to be almost impregnable. While this citadel remained in the hands of the Spaniards the capture of Guaymaro was impossible. In this emergency Menocal came to the rescue. Under a heavy fire, encumbered with a torpedo of dynamite, he made his way to the church, from which came a perfect hailstorm of bullets. Watching his chance, little by little he neared the cathedral one last dash and he gained the shelter of the edifice itself, placed the bomb under the edge of the great stone wall, and in an instant was away again. From a protected point fifty yards distant he seized the rifle of a companion and sent a bullet into the dynamite. The explosion which followed tore out the entire end of the cathedral, whereupon the garrison hauled down the Spanish flag and surrendered to General Garcia, and Guaymaro became henceforth the city of Cuba Libre. For this deed Colonel Menocal was made a brigadier general. Up to the time of his appointment as chief of the Havana police General Menocal was stationed at Marianao, where the excellent influence which he exercised over the men in his command won the admiration of General Brooke and the entire staff of American officers in Havana. It is needless to say that he is loved in his native city, where his family have held a high social position for more than a century. When only sixteen, Mario Menocal was sent from Cuba to this country to be educated. After four years of preparatory work he entered Cornell in the course in Civil Engineering. Being a popular man and a good fellow, he received an election to Delta Kappa Epsilon, and in his last two years was elected to Bench and Board and the Mermaid. Withal he was a good student, and was graduated in the class of '88 with the degree of Civil Engineer. A little before the breaking out of the last revolution he returned to Havana, where General Martinez Campos ordered him to proceed as an engineer to Porto Principe to give color to the rumor that a railroad was to be constructed from the latter city to Santa Cruz on the south coast. This proposition was intended to pacify the people of that province and prevent them from joining the revolt. But no sooner did General Maximo Gomez cross the line from Oriente into Camaguey than Menocal dropped his quadrant, shouldered his rifle, and presented himself to the commander of the insurgent forces. General Gomez immediately placed him on his staff as a lieutenant, and soon promoted him to the rank of captain for bravery and ability displayed at the battles of Altigracia and Mulato,

Mario Garcia Menocal

which took place in the summer of '95, and afterwards made him a commandante or major. In such high esteem were Menocal's services held that he was elected assistant secretary of war by the Cuban Assembly which met in the following September. The young officer, however, preferred the more active duties of the field, and in the spring of 1896 he was transferred to the forces of General Calixto Garcia, who had just landed near Baracoa. "It was during the campaign in May of 1896, that I first met Mario Menocal, then a colonel near the Cauto River," writes a newspaper correspondent. "It seems good," he remarked, "to meet some one once more who has come to the field direct from New York. It is a great old town," he sighed. After a moment, which evidently recalled some pleasant recollection, he continued: "Tell me what is now on at the Broadway theaters." This within hearing of rifle volleys which the Spanish forces of Jiguani were firing at a party of Cuban cavalry suggested anything but the awful realities of war. The correspondent told him of the different plays then running, as well as he could recall them while mounted couriers momentarily brought reports of the success of the insurgent force which was engaged in driving away cattle from under the enemy's guns in the fortified suburbs of the town near by. Aside from the excellent work inaugurated in the police department by its new chief, Menocal is serving as a valuable object lesson to that large body of ill-informed and pessimistic Americans who not only doubt, but, with singular assurance, assert that all talk about the Cubans governing themselves for at least several years to come is idiotic. The Menocals have been conspicuous as leaders in every revolution against Spanish rule in Cuba since the people of that unfortunate country commenced to send their sons to the United States to be educated. The mother, sisters, and daughters of the Menocal family are quite as patriotic as the male members. General Menocal's mother sent her four sons, all she had, to battle for freedom, and when at Marianao she visited the general a few days ago, joy and pride were pictured in every lineament of her handsome face. "As chief of police," she said, "Mario can do much good. Of course I am proud of him he has fought for Cuba since the first battle-cry of liberty was sounded by Jose Marti. Were he not my son I would exact from him a renewal of his promise never to desist in his efforts until our island republic is firmly and honorably established under the protection of the United States." The new chief's uncle, Aniceto Menocal, is the engineering expert of Washington who was intrusted with the report on the Nicaragua Canal route. One of his cousins is the well-known surgeon and physician of Havana, Dr. Raimundo Menocal. Another is the distinguished artist, Armando Menocal, who painted that famous masterpiece of the Fortuny school which was exhibited at the World's Fair, "Columbus in Chains." The chains, however, were afterward painted out at the express request of the Spanish crown. General Menocal is making an efficient and satisfactory chief of police. Untiring energy, quickness in thought and action, perfect control of temper, and absolute fearlessness in the face of danger are his most prominent characteristics. Although under thirty, the past four years in the field have given him a wonderful experience in enforcing obedience and in controlling both large and small bodies of men. More than all, he has the respect, confidence and esteem and will receive the support of the better element of Havana. The corrupt know that they cannot buy him, and the criminal that they cannot trifle with him.

Mario Garcia Menocal, C.E., '88, is to be inaugurated President of the Republic of Cuba next Tuesday. From American college student to ruler of an island nation sounds like an interesting career, and that is what Menocal has had. He began as an engineer; joined the Cuban revolutionary army and was a major-general before he was thirty; was chief of police of Havana after the war, and inspector-general of public works, and for several years has been the manager of the 165,000-acre plantation of the Chaparra Sugar Company. The Menocals have been a family of rank in Havana for more than a century. The President-elect's uncle, Aniceto Menocal, was a civil engineer in the United States Navy and was the chief engineer of all the government surveys for establishing the practicability of Atlantic-Pacific canal routes. One of his cousins became distinguished as a surgeon, another as a painter. Mario Menocal came to this country and began the study of civil engineering at Cornell when he was sixteen years old. Foreign students in American universities often find the "student life" difficult to enter, but Menocal spoke English well and made friends easily. He was a member of the D. K. E. fraternity and in his upperclass years he was elected to Bench and Board and to Mermaid. He was a good student and a good engineer. When he graduated he went to work for the Nicaragua Canal Company. Two years afterward he returned to Cuba and for the next five years was employed there as an engineer, part of the time by the government. Then came the revolt of 1895. No sooner did Jose Marti land at Cabonico with Maximo Gomez and begin hostilities in the eastern end of the island than Menocal joined the rebel army and offered his services. He was made a lieutenant on General Gomez's staff. As the revolution went on his promotion in rank was rapid. There are stories of deeds of personal bravery told to account for these promotions. There is no reason to doubt the truth of the stories, but the probability is that Menocal was promoted chiefly because his character and training fitted him for high command. In September, 1895, the Cuban Assembly elected him assistant secretary of war, but he preferred to stay where the fighting was. "It was during the campaign in May of 1896 that I first met Mario Menocal, then a colonel, near the Cauto River," wrote an American newspaper correspondent. "It seems good," he said, "to meet some one who has come direct from New York. It's a great old town. What plays are on at the theatres now?" "This," remarked the correspondent, "within hearing of rifle volleys which the Spanish garrison of Jiguani were firing at the Cubans!" In 1898, when the Cuban revolution was merged in the Spanish-American war, Menocal was a major-general in the Cuban army of liberation, commanding the provinces of Matanzas and Havana. The American army officers had an opportunity to note that he was an efficient officer. He was selected by Governor-General Brooke to organize a police department for the city of Havana and the rural districts. Then he was appointed inspector-general of public works, and organized a lighthouse board for Cuba. During the last eleven years General Menocal has been the manager of the

Mario Garcia Menocal Stamp (1954)

Chaparra Sugar Company. That sounds commonplace, but in this case it was not. He had to handle thousands of men, to create a town in the wilderness, to build a harbor and a railroad. His creation is called "the Chaparra Republic" because it is so thoroughly organized a community. It has five thousand or more inhabitants, seven schools, a hospital, a theatre, churches, a department store, and a hotel. The estate has its own police, and the general manager's word is supreme.

Necrology. '88 CE—MARIO GARCIA MENOCAL, former president of Cuba, September 7, 1941, in Havana, Cuba, after a short illness. Entering Civil Engineering in 1884 from Maryland College of Agriculture, he returned to Cuba in 1891 as a railroad construction engineer. He served in the Cuban Army of Patriots in 1895, and fought in the War of Independence; was later chief of police and active in construction of sugar mills. Elected the third President of Cuba in 1913 on a conservative ticket, he was hailed as a liberator and was credited with bringing prosperity to the Island. Succeeded in 1921 by Alfredo Zayas, he plotted against Gerardo Machado in 1931; was imprisoned, and fled to the United States when released. From here he directed the campaign which brought about Machado's downfall in 1933. He opposed Batista until 1940, when he headed the Republican Democratic Party, part of a coalition which put Batista in the presidency, and was recently engaged in forming a coalition with the National Democratic Party. Aurelio Mario García Menocal y Deop (December 17, 1866, Jagüey Grande, Matanzas, Cuba – September 7, 1941 in Santiago de Cuba, Cuba) was President of Cuba, from 1913 to 1921. His terms as president saw Cuba's participation in World War I. García Menocal was thirteen when he was sent to boarding schools in the United States, first at the Chappaqua Mountain Institute in New York, and later at the Maryland Agricultural College. In 1884, he then went to Cornell University where he graduated in 1888 from the School of Engineering. While at Cornell University, he was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity (Delta Chi Chapter) As a young man he was involved in Cuba's fight for independence from Spain. When Cuba did receive independence following the Spanish-American War, García Menocal became a leading conservative politician. Mario García Menocal was elected President in 1912 and became known for his strong support of business and corporations. He was reelected in 1916, though the election was challenged by the liberals. In perhaps his most notable action, García Menocal authorized Cuba's declaration of war against Germany on April 7, 1917, entering World War I a day after the United States. This was believed by many to be an attempt to get the United States to give more support to his government. While in office, García Menocal hosted the 1920 Delta Kappa Epsilon National Convention, the first international fraternity conference outside the US, which took place in Cuba. Private trains were hired from New England to Florida where the invited men and their families could travel in comfort and style, and upon arrival in Cuba each man was gifted a gold-trimmed box of cigars. García Menocal's hospitality is still remembered in the fraternity to this day. After his presidency, García Menocal continued to be involved in politics, running for President again in 1924. He attempted a revolution in 1931, and went into exile in the United States when it failed. After less than five years he returned to Cuba and ran for President a final time in 1936. García Menocal was married to Mariana Seva y Rodríguez and they had three children, Mario (who married Hortensia Almagro), Raúl (who married Perlita Fowler) and Georgina García Menocal y Seva (who married Eugenio Sardina).

NOTED ECONOMIST AND FRIEND OF LABOR BURIED AT WESTERLO. Prof. Willard C. Fisher, 77, Had Been Candidate on Progressive Ticket for Governor of Connecticut. Secluded Westerlo in southern Albany County witnessed Wednesday the last act in the career of Prof. Willard C. Fisher, nationally famous economist and authority on labor problems. On that day, Professor Fisher was buried at Westerlo, his death having occurred last Sunday after five years in retirement among scenes of his childhood, forced by breaking health. He was twice mayor of Middleton, Conn., and ran for governor of that state on the Progressive ticket of 1912 under the banner of Theodore Roosevelt. After his early education in the Westerlo school, the youth entered Cornell where he graduatd [sic] in 1888 at 23 years of age. He was made a fellow in history and political economy at Harvard where he remained for two years. During 1891 and 1892, Professor Fisher was instructor in economics and finance at Brown University and then professor in economics and social science at Wesleyan until 1913. It was during this period that he served as mayor of Middletown and staged an active campaign for governor. Two years followed at Harvard as lecturer on economics and in 1916 he became professor of economics in the New York University School of Economics, Accounts and Finance. He continued there until 1926 when failing health forced his retirement to Westerlo where he joined a sister, Miss Emma Fisher, his only relatives [sic], to continue living in the old home town. At the peak of his active career in Middletown, Professor Fisher became known as the laboring man's friend and he received tremendous support from union labor in his various essays into the political field. On questions of labor and economics, Professor Fisher was in constant demand as an expert. He drafted the Connecticut Workmen's Compensation Act, viewed as a model of its kind. His life in retirement at Westerlo has resembled that of a recluse and there were relatively few who knew the little village had become the home of a man of his attainments, talents and record for achievement.

W345 Frank William Padgham

DEATH OF FRANK W. PADGHAM. Frank W. Padgham died of typhoid fever yesterday morning at the home of his father, ex-Supervisor Amos Padgham, No. 120 Shonnard street. Mr. padgham was well known and greatly respected, and leaves a large circle of sorrowing friends. He went through the city public schools with honor and after leaving the High School entered Cornell University in the mechanical engineering course, graduating in high rank in 1888. He then accepted a position with the C. W. Hunt company at West New Brighton, locomotive builders and engineers. While in their employ, and a little over a year ago, Mr. Padgham had an attack of fever but rallied, and after a short rest resumed his work. Last October a most flattering position was offered him with the National Transit company at Oil City, Pa. He at once became the assistant superintendent of the company, having under his direct care 250 miles of pipe line and the machinery in many pumping stations. He belonged to the American Society of Mechanics and was a member of the May Memorial church. Mr. Padgham was one of the charter members of the Syracuse Cycling club, and an enthusiastic worker during the early life of that successful organization. On removing from the city his name was placed on the honorary roll, where it will now remain. The club at their meeting last evening adopted resolutions upon the death speaking highly of the young man's character. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon, from either the house or May Memorial church, the place to be determined later.

—Mr. Amos Padgham, of Syracuse, N. Y., has sent to the Cornell Central Club Committee, who are engaged in raising funds for the erection of the Alumni Hall, the sum of $100 in memory of his son, Frank W. Padgham, a graduate of the University who died a year or so ago.

From: The Cornell Era, Vol. 24, No. 26, 7 May 1892, p. 313.

The following was presented: Syracuse, N. Y., June 6. 1892. To the Trustees Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y Gentlemen: I have the honor to propose the following as the conditions on which the Frank William Padgham Free Scholarship in Sibley College, Cornell University, is to be founded by me, in memory of my son, if satisfactory to your Board. (1.) The Trustees will authorize the foundation of a free scholarship in Sibley College of Cornell University, to be denominated either, The Frank William Padgham Scholarship, or The Frank William Padgham Free Scholarship. (2.) This scholarship to be assigned to the best competing candidate for entrance into the regular course of instruction in Sibley College, Cornell University, who shall have had preparatory education, in whole or in part, in the Public Schools of Syracuse, N. Y., or should there be no candidate for entrance to the Sibley College at any time when the scholarship may be vacant, any student who shall have previously entered from Syracuse, and qualified as above, shall on application to and in the discretion of the Faculty be eligible to the scholarship for the completion of his course. (3.) Should no applicant appear thus educated, the competition shall be open, under the customary rules, as prescribed by the Faculty, to any students from the State of New York, approved by the Faculty as eligible. (4.) The holder of this scholarship, if from Syracuse, as above, shall hold the scholarship, subject to the customary restrictions and requirements of the Faculty as respects conduct and good scholarship in his course, throughout the whole period of the course, should he so desire. A substitute, taking it as above provided, shall hold it for one year. Should the vacancy take place after the beginning of any year, it may be filled, under the above rules, at the beginning of the next succeeding term, and for the remainder of the year. (5.) The holder of the Frank William Padgham Free Scholarship will pursue the regular course in mechanical engineering in Sibley College, and will be excused from the payment of tuition or any other of the regular fees ordinarily demanded of students in that course. (6.) In other respects than those above prescribed, the regulations affecting scholarships generally, as now or hereafter framed by the Faculty of the College, shall apply to this case. (7.) The Superintendent of Public Schools and the Principal of the Syracuse High School to be notified of any vacancy. On receipt of your notice of formal acceptance of the above, I have authorized the Director of Sibley College to hand to the Treasurer of the University my cheque for the sum of $3,000, as the assumed money equivalent of this privilege. Very respectfully yours, Amos Padgham. Moved and carried, that the gift of Mr. Amos Padgham be grate fully accepted upon the terms and conditions set forth in the foregoing letter.

W347 Frank Gaylord Gilman

Obituary. FRANK G. GILMAN '88. Frank Gaylord Gilman, since 1904 head of the department of history in the Barringer High School, Newark, N. J., died of pneumonia on March 24, at his home, 612 Highland Avenue, Newark. Gilman was born at Sherburne, N. Y., in 1863, and prepared for college at Cazenovia Seminary. Entering Cornell in 1884 in the course in letters, he became one of the first members of Alpha Tau Omega, and was also a member of the Glee Club and the History and Political Science Association, sophomore and senior orator, and editor-in-chief of The Cornell Era, then a quarto weekly. After graduation he taught English and political science for three years at the Michigan Military Academy, Orchard Lake, then went to Barringer High School. During his early days at Newark he took a postgraduate course for four years in New York University. For some time he taught both economics and literature. He had lately taught literature in the Central Evening High School. In 1890 he married Miss Lena Gertrude Mercereau, of Union, N. Y., who survives him, together with two children, Gladys Ethelyn and Willard Mercereau. He had also a sister, Mrs. L. F. Davidson, of Sherburne. Professor Gilman was a leader in educational research and in the study of school administrative problems. He was a pioneer in the movement to introduce municipal civics into secondary schools, and a thorough and enthusiastic student and teacher of local history. He was one of the founders of the Forest Hill Literary Society and for several terms its president; at one time president of the Men's Club of the Forest Hill Presbyterian Church; and an active worker in the Association of English Teachers. In commenting on Gilman's work and influence, David B. Corson, acting superintendent of schools in Newark, said: "Professor Gilman was one of our most distinguished educators. His influence spreads over many years and was always good, always inspiring to young people. The course of municipal civics, which Professor Gilman introduced in Newark, was an educational contribution of great value. As a teacher he was one of our best."

W348 John Raleigh Mott

Necrology. '88 PhB—JOHN RALEIGH MOTT, 1946 winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for humanitarian work, at his winter home in Orlando, Fla., January 31, 1955. An evangelist and promoter of international understanding, he was for many years general secretary of the national council and international committee of the YMCA. He later became honorary life president of the World's Alliance of the YMCA and one of the five honorary presidents of the World Council of Churches, the only layman to hold that position. As student president of the Cornell University Christian Association (forerunner of CURW), he initiated a campaign for a building which brought a gift of $45,000 from Alfred S. Barnes for building Barnes Hall. Mott headed the American Christian Student Movement, the Student Volunteer Movement, and the World's Student Christian Federation. He was decorated by sixteen foreign governments and held the US Distinguished Service Medal; was the author of twenty-one books on religious and social subjects.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 57, No. 11, 1 Mar 1955, p. 375.

John Raleigh Mott (May 25, 1865-January 31, 1955) was born of pioneer stock in Livingston Manor, New York, the third child and only son among four children. His parents, John and Elmira (Dodge) Mott, moved to Post-

ville, Iowa, where his father became a lumber merchant and was elected the first mayor of the town. At sixteen, Mott enrolled at Upper Iowa University, a small Methodist preparatory school and college in Fayette. He was an enthusiastic student of history and literature there and a prizewinner in debating and oratory, but transferred to Cornell University in 1885. At this time he thought of his life's work as a choice between law and his father's lumber business, but he changed his mind upon hearing a lecture by J. Kynaston Studd on January 14, 1886. Three sentences in Studd's speech, he said, prompted his lifelong service of presenting Christ to students: "Seest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not. Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." In the summer of 1886, Mott represented Cornell University's Y.M.C.A. at the first international, interdenominational student Christian conference ever held. At that conference, which gathered 251 men from eighty-nine colleges and universities, one hundred men—including Mott—pledged themselves to work in foreign missions. From this, two years later, sprang the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions. During Mott's remaining two years at Cornell, as president of the Y.M.C.A. he increased the membership threefold and raised the money for a university Y.M.C.A. building. He was graduated in 1888, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, with a bachelor's degree in philosophy and history. In September of 1888 he began a service of twenty-seven years as national secretary of the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A. of the U.S.A. and Canada, a position requiring visits to colleges to address students concerning Christian activities. During this period, he was also chairman of the executive committee of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions, presiding officer of the World Missionary Conference in Edinburgh in 1910, chairman of the International Missionary Council. With Karl Fries of Sweden, he organized the World's Student Christian Federation in 1895 and as its general secretary went on a two-year world tour, during which he organized national student movements in India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, parts of Europe and the North East. In 1912 and 1913, he toured the Far East, holding twenty-one regional missionary conferences in India, China, Japan, and Korea. From 1915 to 1928, Mott was general-secretary of the International Committee of the Y.M.C.A. and from 1926 to 1937 president of the Y.M.C.A.'s World Committee. During World War I, when the Y.M.C.A. offered its services to President Wilson, Mott became general secretary of the National War Work Council, receiving the Distinguished Service Medal for his work. For the Y.M.C.A. he kept up international contacts as circumstances allowed and helped to conduct relief work for prisoners of war in various countries. He had already declined President Wilson's offer of the ambassadorship to China, but he served in 1916 as a member of the Mexican Commission, and in 1917 as a member of the Special Diplomatic Mission to Russia. The sum of Mott's work makes an impressive record: he wrote sixteen books in his chosen field; crossed the Atlantic over one hundred times and the Pacific fourteen times, averaging thirty-four days on the ocean per year for fifty years; delivered thousands of speeches; chaired innumerable conferences. Among the honorary awards which he received are: decorations from China, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Jerusalem, Poland, Portugal, Siam, Sweden, and the United States; six honorary degrees from the universities of Brown, Edinburgh, Princeton, Toronto, Yale, and Upper Iowa; and an honorary degree from the Russian Orthodox Church of Paris. Dr. Mott married Leila Ada White of Wooster, Ohio, in 1891; they had four children, two sons and two daughters. He died at his home in Orlando, Florida, at the age of eighty-nine.

Obituary. WILLARD W. ROWLEE '88 Professor Willard Winfield Rowlee died at his home, 11 East Avenue, on August 8, after an illness of several months. Professor Rowlee was born at Fulton, N. Y., on December 15, 1861, the son of George Washington and Sarah Distin Rowlee. Entering the University in 1884 in the course in letters, he graduated in course with the degree of B. L. In college he was a member of the Irving Literary Society, and later became a member of Kappa Sigma and Sigma Xi. From 1889 to 1893 ne was an instructor and graduate student in botany. In the latter year he took his degree of D.Sc. and was made an assistant professor; in 1906 he was promoted to a full professorship of botany. He was a member of the American Society of Naturalists, the Botanical Society of America, and the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, and a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He made many contributions to the literature of his subject. He traveled much and made collections in Central America and the West Indies. One of his most recent tasks was, in connection with the War, the investigation of balsa wood for use in airplanes. But the range of his interests extended far beyond the limits of a chair of science. He was a believer in athletics, wisely administered, and was a trustee of the Athletic Association, and Faculty adviser for football. He was long secretary of the Associate Alumni, chairman of the Commencement Committee and of the Committee on Grounds, and life secretary of his class. A lifelong Republican, he sat on the Board of Aldermen from 1898 to 1902. He was a member of the Protective Police and the Town and Gown Club. He served the University and the city quietly and unostentatiously in many ways. Professor Rowlee was married on December 22, 1887, to Miss May Howard. Three children were born to them, Elizabeth '17, now Mrs. Arthur T. Lobdell, of McCook, Nebraska, Silence '20, and Howard, now of Omaha, Nebr. Besides his wife and children he is survived by his step-father, Jasper Rowlee, of Fulton, a sister, Mrs. Lewis Ives, of Fulton, and two brothers, George, of Niles, Mich., and Delos, of Fulton.

W354 Charles Morton Emmons

Obituary. CHARLES M. EMMONS '88. Charles Morton Emmons, of Beaver Falls, Pa., died at the Beaver Valley General Hospital, New Brighton, Pa., on September 14. He was 46 years old and was a graduate of the college of civil engineering of Cornell University in the class of 1888. From 1888 to 1893 he was a draftsman for the Penn Bridge Company of Beaver Falls; inspector of the United States Engineer Corps, Buffalo District, 1893-97; United States Assistant Engineer in the same Corps, 1897-1901; engineer with the Penn Bridge Company, 1901-02; chief designer and in charge of estimating and designing for the same company until his death. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. He left a widow.

W355 James Patrick O'Toole

Obituary. JAMES P. O'TOOLE, '88, L.B. James Patrick

O'Toole was taken sick with pneumonia on January 11 and died in the afternoon of January 17. He was born on a farm near Waterville, December 12, 1864, and was educated in the district school and in the Waterville high school. As a pupil he was very bright and early showed considerable literary talent. It was here that he did his first newspaper work as correspondent for the Utica Saturday Globe. In the fall of 1883 he went abroad and entered the seminary of Basse Wavre, Belgium, but after a short time he visited Paris and Great Britain and then returned home. He returned to Waterville and entered business, but in the fall entered Cornell. In college he was prominent on the college papers, and after graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Literature Mr. O'Toole went to Utica and became a reporter on the Utica Observer. In politics he was a Democrat and in 1890 he was promoted to fill the place of editorial writer on the Utica Observer and this place he retained until his death. Mr. O'Toole was very popular in the wide circle of his friends, who mourn the loss of one of the brightest, most generous, and most friendly of their number, and prominent in Utica social life. He had long planned to take his parents and his sister to Utica to live, and he went to Waterville to help them dispose of some property so they could join him in Utica. It was there that he contracted the illness that led to his death.

W356 William Buzard Smith

Obituary. WILLIAM B. SMITH '88 William Buzard Smith died suddenly of heart trouble at the home of his brother in Windber, Pa., on March 3. He was born in North Lima, Ohio, on February 5, 1865, the son of Henry H. and Samantha Buzard Smith. After attending the public schools at Columbiana, Ohio, he went to Ohio State University in 1884 and remained one year. In 1885 he came to Cornell and graduated in 1888 with the degree of B.L. He was a member of Chi Phi, was editor of the Era in his junior year and business manager in his senior year, played on the lacrosse team, was secretary and treasurer of Bench and Board, class prophet in his senior year, and president of Mermaid. After leaving Cornell, he studied law under the late Judge Jacob Ambler in Salem, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1889. In 1903 he was admitted to practice in the United States courts. For four years he practiced in Denver, Colo.; in 1894 he removed to Philadelphia, Pa., to engage in the wholesale dry goods and notions business. In 1902 he entered the retail firm of H. H. Smith and Sons Company at Columbiana. In 1908 he went to Windber, Pa., as general manager of the Eureka Stores of Pennsylvania, the New River and Pocahontas Stores, and the Windber Pure Ice Company. During his lifetime he was active in civic matters in Windber and became known as a liberal giver to charitable work. He is survived by two brothers, George A. Smith '89, and H. E. Smith of Windber, and one sister, Mrs. S. S. Stewart of Columbiana, Ohio.

W357 David Neish Heller

Obituaries. DAVID NEISH HELLER '88, former Supreme Court justice and former mayor of Elmira, died at the Arnot-Ogden Hospital in Elmira on August 31, following an appendicitis operation. He was born on January 29, 1866, near Carr's Corners, N. Y., the son of Charles and Mary Neish Heller. He received the degree of B.L., followed by a year of graduate work in law. He was editor of the Sun and a member of Bench and Board. He was admitted to the Bar in 1890 and was that year named clerk of the Surrogate's Court of Chemung County, serving until 1893 when he became county clerk. From 1897 until 1904 he was a member of the law firm of Taylor, Heller, and O'Connor. In 1898 Mr. Heller was elected to the New York Assembly, of which he was the youngest member. In 1907 he was elected city judge of Elmira, serving for five four-year terms. He then served two terms as mayor. In 1929 Mr. Heller was appointed to the Supreme Court by Governor Roosevelt, to serve the unexpired term of Justice George McCann '86. After the expiration of his term he returned to private law practice.

W359 William Dexter Wilson

DEATH OF PROFESSOR WILLIAM DEXTER WILSON.

William Dexter Wilson, D.D., LL.D., L.H.D., emeritus professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy, and a member of the original faculty of Cornell University, died at Syracuse, N. Y., July 29. Dr. Wilson had not been actively connected with the University since he retired in 1886, after nearly twenty years' service as the head of the department of philosophy. During those years, too, he had served continuously as registrar of the University. Dr. Wilson was born February 23, 1816, at Stoddard, N. H. His early education was secured there and in the academy at Walpole, N. H., at which latter place he served as assistant teacher in mathematics. Entering the Divinity School at Harvard, in 1835, he graduated in '38, having studied widely, in addition to his theological studies, in Greek and Latin philosophical writers, and in modern European languages. He served a pastorate in the Unitarian denomination for two or three years, and took orders in the Episcopal church in 1842. He next served a parish at Sherburne for several years, and in 1850 was called to Geneva, now Hobart, College, as Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy. For eighteen years he filled this chair at Hobart, only leaving upon receiving a call in 1868 from President White, to the similar chair in the new university just opening at Ithaca. While at Hobart, the duties of the presidency of the institution often devolved for months at a time upon Dr. Wilson. It was his success in this office, as well as his prominence as a teacher, that led in the summer of 1872, to his receiving an informal offer of the presidency of a large state university in the Northwest. The cares and responsibilities of the position had no attraction for him, however, and his services were further reserved for Cornell. One who knew of his connection with the University writes of him: "Dr. Wilson's success as a teacher lay in his capacity to give instruction by means of lectures, and by his friendly converse with students. He was loved and respected by the students of Cornell, all of whom knew him in his long service there as registrar. To every student of Cornell from 1868 to 1886 his death is a personal loss." Dr. Wilson was made emeritus professor in 1886, and soon thereafter removed to Syracuse, where he became Dean of St. Andrew's Divinity School, which office he held until a year ago, when, finally, at the age of eighty-three, he retired from his long life of public service.

Dr. Wilson, while remembered at Cornell chiefly for his services in the Department of Philosophy and as Registrar, was throughout his life prominent as a leader in the Protestant Episcopal church. He wrote many books on religious and philosophical subjects. Some of the best known are the following: "The Church Identified" (1848), "Elementary Treatise on Logic" (1856), "Psychology, Comparative and Human" (1871), "Textbook on Logic" (1872), "Introduction to the Study of History of Philosophy" (1872), "Live Questions in Psychology and Metaphysics" (1877), "The Foundations of Religious Belief" (1883). The Paddock Lectures for 1883, delivered by Dr. Wilson at the General Theological Seminary, are among his best known theological works. In addition to publishing these books, Dr. Wilson contributed regularly to the Dial, the Christian Examiner, and the Church Review. He contributed several articles to Appleton's Cyclopaedia, and wrote the article on logic in Johnson's Cyclopaedia. The funeral of Dr. Wilson was held in Syracuse, at St. Mark's church, August 1. The officiating clergyman and the pall bearers were all men who had formerly been his pupils.

W362, W588 & W589 William Arnold Anthony

DEATH OF W. A. ANTHONY. Virtual Founder of the Department of Physics at Cornell. William Arnold Anthony, who was for fifteen years professor of physics at Cornell University, died on May 29 of heart disease at his home in New York city. He had been ill several months. Professor Anthony was born in Coventry, R. I., on November 17, 1835. After his graduation from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1860 he taught successively at the Providence Conference Seminary and the Delaware Literary Institute. In 1867 he was appointed professor of physics and chemistry in Antioch College, where he remained two years. He then taught physics for three years in the Iowa Agricultural College. He held the chair of physics at Cornell from 1872 till 1887, when he gave up teaching to practice his profession of electrical engineering. After a few years, however, he took up teaching again, and since 1893 he had been professor of physics in Cooper Union, New York. A sketch of Professor Anthony's life and of his services while he was at the head of the department of physics at Cornell was contributed to a recent number of the Sibley Journal of Engineering by Professor E. L. Nichols, '75, the present head of the department. Professor Nichols wrote in part: "When William A. Anthony one day in the winter of 1872-73 stood for the first time before a physics class at Cornell, something very like a miracle took place. To the undergraduate, physics had thus far been a mere dead name in the list of studies the moment he opened his mouth it became a live thing. To many of his pupils of those early days the recollection of Professor Anthony's lectures and demonstrations is among the most vivid and vital of all their college experience. It is hard to realize the changes that have occurred since Professor Anthony began his work at Cornell. Imagine an industrial civilization without dynamos or motors, storage batteries, electric lights, trolley cars, telephones or the wireless telegraph; think of physics without the diffraction grating of Rowland, the interferometer of Michelson or the bolometer of Langley. The liquefaction of the permanent gases was still unattained; X rays and radioactivity were yet not even a subject for dreams. Many applications of physics, and especially of electricity to industrial life, were, however, in process of development during these years and Professor Anthony, impelled by the passion to try things out for one's self in a practical way which characterizes the experimental physicist, rapidly gathered together a unique equipment. In these labors he was fortunate in the skillful and ingenious co-operation of one of his pupils, G. S. Moler, now professor in the department of physics, whose name is inseparably associated with all of this pioneer work. In 1875, Gramme brought out in Paris his form of dynamo machine, and no sooner had the description of it reached this country than Anthony and Moler undertook to build one. They made their own design, based upon Gramme's principle, but adapted to the special uses of the laboratory, and long before the first imported dynamos reached America this machine was successfully completed and in operation. With it, before the close of the year, arc lamps were installed on the campus and were put into regular service; and thus it came about that inhabitants of remote farms among the hills of Central New York saw the arc light shine out night after night years before the introduction of this means of illumination in Paris, London, Berlin, New York or any of the great cities of the world. The wiring of this lighting system is of considerable historical importance. Under ground cables were constructed of gas piping through which copper wires were drawn. These wires were so thoroughly insulated by means of a composition of tallow pumped into the pipes that when tested after having been buried more than twenty years they were found to be still in excellent condition. This Gramme machine, which served to light the campus by night, was used in a variety of other work during the day time. Lanterns for lecture room use were at that period supplied with the lime light for which oxygen and hydrogen gas had to be prepared by chemical means. Professors Anthony and Moler substituted an apparatus for the electrolytic generation of these gases. So far as I know it was the first of its kind. This generator for many years supplied oxygen and hydrogen for lanterns for use in the various departments of the University. The Gramme machine constructed in 1875, and which made these and many other interesting things possible, was exhibited at the Centennial Exhibition in 1876, where it attracted much attention as the first example of American dynamo construction, at the Electrical Exhibition of the Franklin Institute in 1884, at the Pan-American Exhibition and at the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904. At the Centennial it was a novelty, at St. Louis, an historical exhibit, the importance of which was recognized by the awarding of silver medals to the constructors. Now, after a third of a century, during which time it has been in constant use, this interesting machine is still in daily service as a motor and furnishes power to the student's shop in Rockefeller hall. Many more modern machines have since come and gone to the scrap heap, but this one still survives and during its long life has never needed repairs which could not be readily done in the workshop of the department. In the early 80's Professor Anthony, who was always warmly interested in the practical applications of physics, began to urge the establishment of a special course for electrical students. The result was the announcement of the course in Electrical Engineering in Sibley College at a time when no such courses were given either in Europe or America. Cornell's example was, however, speedily followed and within the next few years similar courses were announced by nearly all the technical schools of the country. During the first few years after the announcement of courses in instruction for Electrical Engineers the number of students was comparatively small and Professor Anthony was able to give personally the entire instruction offered in electrical subjects. Quality in the student body seems, however, to have compensated for lack of quantity, for we find among the handful of students of that period the names of Ernest Merritt, Harris J. Ryan, J. G. White and Benjamin W. Snow." Professor Anthony was a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, of which he had been president; the American Social Science Association, the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and the New York Botanical Society. He was the author, with Professor C. F. Brackett, of Princeton, of a Manual of Physics, and was the author of Lecture Notes on the Theory of Electrical Measurements. He had made many contributions to scientific periodicals. He was married in 1861 to Eliza Matilda Girven, who survives him, with one son, Charles C. Anthony, '85, of Philadelphia.

WILLIAM ARNOLD ANTHONY (NOVEMBER 17, 1835 – MAY 29, 1908) WAS A U.S. PHYSICIST. Anthony was born in Coventry, Rhode Island. He was educated at the Yale Scientific School (today Sheffield Scientific School) and graduated in 1860. Between 1857 and 1860 he was director of a grade school in Crompton, Rhode Island. From 1860 to 1861 he taught natural sciences at the Providence Conference Seminary, East Greenwich, Rhode Island, followed by a teaching position in Franklin, New York until 1867. That year he became professor of physics and chemistry at the Antioch College, where he stayed until 1870. After a short time teaching at Iowa Agricultural College, he became professor of physics at the freshly founded Cornell University, where he held a position for fifteen years (1872–1887). While at Cornell, he introduced and taught the school's electrical engineering course, one of the first in the United States. He was a consulting electrician in Manchester, Connecticut, from 1887 to 1893. From 1893 until his death, he taught in the new day school of engineering at Cooper Union. He was the president of the AIEE from 1890-1, and a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Though primarily a teacher, Anthony invested some time in research and development. Between 1857 and 1861 he constructed two types of turbines, increasing their efficiency up to 87% by using blades based on a mathematical model derived from fluid dynamics. In 1857 he build an electrodynamic machine with a power output of 25 amps at 250 volts, as well as a galvanometer which could measure between 0.1 and 250 amps. His published papers include contributions read before these societies, and other numerous scientific articles which have appeared in the American Journal of Science, Journal of the Franklin Institute, the Popular Science Monthly, and several electrical journals. He is joint author with C. F. Brackett of an Elementary Textbook on Physics (New York, 1885), and he contributed a chapter to E. A. Thompson's Roentgen Rays and Phenomena of the Anode and Cathode (New York, 1896).

W363 & W435 Robert Henry Thurston

DEATH OF DR. ROBERT H. THURSTON. Occurred at His Home on Sunday Evening—Stricken with Heart Failure on His Sixty-fourth Birthday. Dr. Robert Henry Thurston, Director of Sibley College, died at his home on East avenue Sunday afternoon at 6 o'clock. Heart failure was the cause, and death came without the slightest warning. The circumstances surrounding the death were particularly sad. It was Dr. Thurston's sixty-fourth birthday and Mrs. Thurston had arranged an informal birthday dinner to which had been invited former President Andrew D. White, Dean Huffcut of the College of Law, Joseph C. Hendrix of the Board of Trustees and Professor Hewett. It was while waiting for his guests that death stole upon him. About the middle of the afternoon Dr. Thurston walked to the Heights, to the home of Professor Ryan to invite to his birthday dinner Mr. Erderi, an eminent English scientist who had just arrived in Ithaca. He returned from his walk, dressed for dinner and at about 5:30 walked down to Huestis street to arrange some final detail in connection with the dinner. Upon his return he went to the drawing room and sat with Mrs. Thurston. She left the room for a few moments and upon returning found his head fallen to one side as though he were dozing or sleeping. She attempted to arouse him and failing, summoned assistance. Restoratives were administered but without avail. Physicians were summoned but they found that death had apparently been instantaneous. Professor Thurston's position indicated that life had ebbed gently away without pain. He sat back comfortably in his chair with a calm and peaceful expression upon his countenance. Dr. Thurston is survived by his wife and three daughters Mrs. Victor Coffin of Madison, Wisconsin, Miss Olive Thurston and Miss Leonora Thurston of Ithaca. Robert Henry Thurston was born in Providence, R. I., on October 25th, 1839, and was the son of Robert L. and Harriet Taylor Thurston. He was graduated from Brown University in 1859 with the degree of bachelor of philosophy and at once became a designing engineer in the employ of the firm of Thurston, Green & Company of Providence. At the outbreak of the Civil War he entered the United States Naval Engineer Corps and served with distinction in the fleets of Dupont and Dahlgren until the close of the war. In 1863 he was made engineer-in-charge of the Chippewa and in the following year was commissioned first assistant in charge of the iron-clad, Dictator. At the close of the war Dr. Thurston was appointed professor of natural philosophy in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and filled that position from January 1, 1866, to June 1871, when he became professor of engineering in Stevens Institute of Technology. In 1885 he resigned from the faculty of Stevens Institute to become director of Sibley College, then about to be organized. He organized the departments of that college, and for eighteen years has given his best thought and effort to the elevating and improving of their curricula. In the period of his administration, Dr. Thurston has made Sibley College one of the greatest school of engineering in the world and has seen the registration in that College increase from sixty men in 1885, to almost a thousand in 1903. Dr. Thurston has been employed on many government commissions, such as the United States scientific commission to the Vienna International Exhibition (1873) to Paris (1889) the United States commission to investigate the cause of boiler explosions (1875) and the United States commission to test iron, steel and other metals (1875-88). He was a member of the leading scientific societies on both sides of the Atlantic including the Loyal Legion of the United States; the United States Naval Institute the Royal Institute of Great Britain, and the Institute of Engineers of Scotland. A private funeral service will be held at Dr. Thurston's late home on East avenue at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The services will be conducted by Reverend Charles Babcock and will be attended by the relatives and intimate friends of the deceased. Public services will be held in Sibley Auditorium at 3:30 and will be conducted by Reverend Charles Mellen Tyler. The honorary bearers, the active bearers selected from the senior class of Sibley College, the Trustees of the University, the faculty of Sibley College and representatives of the faculties of the other colleges of the University, together with the undergraduate body, will attend. The hearse will be accompanied by the clergymen and the pall bearers. Two groups of honorary bearers will follow. The first group will be composed of President J. G. Schurman, former president Andrew D. White, Hon. H. W. Sibley, Dean Crane, Dean Huffcut, Professor Law and Professor Hewett. The second group will be composed of Professors Morris, Durand, Carpenter, Ryan, Cleves, Hibbard and Jones and former Professor Barr. The faculty of Sibley College will come next followed by the senior class of Sibley College and the general undergraduate body of the University. During the ceremony the body will lie in state attended by a guard of honor selected from the senior class of Sibley College. After the services are concluded a cortege will accompany the hearse to the Lehigh Valley station. The burial will take place at Providence on Thursday morning. When seen on Sunday evening former president Andrew D. White, who called Dr. Thurston to the directorship of Sibley College, said: "Professor Thurston was called to the directorship of Sibley College in 1885. Up to that time everything had been tantative there had been in that department excellent professors and thoroughly good instructors, but a "College of Mechanic Arts" was in those days, an entirely new thing. What the demands upon it were to be, no one could say it was all an experiment. There were differences of opinion as regarded both the theory of such an institution and the practice which it was to adopt. There was much uncertainty and even discouragement in the Board of Trustees regarding it when, discussing the matter with Professor Thurston, then of the Stevens Institute at Hoboken, I found he was willing to come to us and accept the whole responsibility of Sibley College provided the proper power and support were given him. He was immediately called to the position and his first meeting with the Trustees greatly encouraged us all. Mr. Hiram Sibley, who had already shown himself very generous to the college, made increasing donations men eminent in mechanical engineering throughout the country began to take an interest in it a large number of the foremost of them came and delivered lectures the student body grew steadily and rapidly the faculty was increased in numbers to meet this new demand and the prosperity which thus began has been continued from that day to this. While giving full honor to his associates, it is not too much to say that this wonderful result, which we now see, has been due, mainly, to Director Thurston's power of organization, his knowledge of the whole field to be covered, his skill as a teacher, and a certain power which he developed in a remarkable degree to prevent or to allay all friction and difficulties between departments or individuals. In addition to these qualities should be mentioned the high standing in his profession which enabled him to enlist its leaders in the work of Sibley College, and his amazing ability in work, which was a perpetual surprise to all who knew him." Mr. White spoke of his own association with Professor Thurston at one of the recent International Expositions at Paris and said that Professor Thurston's leadership among men was just as evident there as it was upon the Cornell Campus that his personal qualities endeared him to a very wide circle of friends at home and abroad. A visit from him seemed always to throw a new and more pleasing light into any house which he entered or over any company which he joined even temporarily. "He was one of the men whom every body was glad to see. His knowledge of the great fields in which he was interested was extensive, accurate, and imparted in a most interesting manner he had a vivacity which was always pleasing but it did not in the slightest degree impair his sobriety of judgment he was a vigorous and thoughtful writer yet his words flowed from his pen easily and rapidly. Slight and delicate as was his physical build one always felt in discussing questions pertaining to his profession that he was a master. There was a simple dignity about him which, coupled as it was with earnestness and force in utterance, made him a power for good in any audience before which he appeared or in any body of which he was a member. The loss to his friends is great, indeed and the loss to the University is exceedingly severe. Were it not that he has left so many men behind him whom he has trained or greatly influenced, the outlook for Sibley College would be discouraging. Fortunately, the nearly twenty years which he passed there enabled him so to indoctrinate successive generations of instructors and students that we may well hope that he will, in a sense, survive himself and that his teaching and example will continue to hold the institution in the main line of his ideas and in a course toward the goal which he has set." Appreciation by Dr. Schurman. The first impression made by Dr. Thurston upon a stranger—an impression which further acquaintance kept fresh and vivid—was that of alert and irrepressible energy. It was expressed alike in his erect bearing, his quick step, his rapid speech. As Mr. Sage, the lamented Chairman of our Board of Trustees, used to say he "had power to let." There was power in the man not only equal to all his work, but ready to throw itself into new undertakings. He was a center of restless and untiring energy. The work he accomplished was a constant wonder to others. He wrote books and magazine articles, taught his classes in thermodynamics, administered the multitudinous affairs of Sibley College, saw students and gave them advice, kept in communication not only with alumni but with leaders of the industrial world, and all apparently without effort but with a plenitude of result that is "writ large" in the history of Cornell University. Dr. Thurston's success is due in part to hereditary, in part to acquired excellences. His energy and ability were the gifts of nature his industry, his patient perseverance, his devotion to the duties of his calling were his own moral achievements. And no man in any University was ever more thoroughly consecrated to the elevation and advancement of his own department than Dr. Thurston was to that of Sibley College. His service was single-eyed, his devotion whole-souled. And for the result, circum-spice, Dr. Thurston must be ranked among the fathers of technical education. Insisting upon the dignity of engineering as a profession, - he worked out a curriculum which, while it includes practical training, consists mainly of extensive and thorough courses in pure and applied science. He felt just pride in the thought that a Sibley graduate had a more prolonged course of study, and entered upon it at a more advanced stage in his education, than the lawyer, the doctor, and the minister though theirs were known as the "learned professions." His gift of organization was as admirable as his abounding energy. Sibley College is the embodiment of his ideas—for we gave free scope to his genius in all directions—and that organization has in all quarters of the globe received the highest compliment—the compliment not only of superlative praise, but of substantial imitation. As a man Dr. Thurston was characterized by strength and decision of character in combination with ready sympathy and kindness, sunny cheerfulness, and unquenchable hopefulness. The students who came to know him held him in affectionate esteem. His colleagues in the University will long miss the radiant warmth of his friendship. "To our purposes he lives no more." But it is eminently fitting that a worthy memorial of him should be erected at this University, to whose present standing he made such a noteworthy contribution. His last letter to me—written on October 20th—was on the subject of a large and costly new hall or laboratory for Sibley College, now greatly overcrowded. I propose that the old students, alumni, and friends of Sibley College and of the University undertake the erection of this memorial to our much lamented friend. The building should be called Thurston Hall. And as a site I suggest the plot due north of the site of Rockefeller Hall and east of the present Sibley Block—the plot, namely, now occupied by the houses of Professor Comstock and the two adjoining houses already owned by the University. From: Charles Ashmead Schaeffer, Wikipedia.org.

Schaeffer, Charles Ashmead (August 14, 1843–September 23, 1898) –president of the State University of Iowa—was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. He received his B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1861 and immediately enlisted in the First Pennsylvania Battery, serving for two years. From 1863 to 1865 he was a student at Harvard University’s Lawrence Scientific School. For two years he was instructor in chemistry at Union College. He then went to the University of Gottingen, where he received his Ph.D. in 1868. For another year he was a student at the Berlin School of Mines, and then spent six months of study in Paris. Upon his return to the United States in 1870, Schaeffer became professor of general and analytical chemistry and mineralogy at Cornell University. While a member of the Cornell faculty, he also served as vice president and dean of the university. In 1887 the Board of Regents chose Schaeffer as president of the State University of Iowa to succeed Josiah L. Pickard. He was inaugurated as president on June 22, 1887, and served until his death. His tenure came at a time of trouble caused by the dismissal of four faculty members and the reorganization of the faculty by the Board of Regents. During his 11 years as president, he surmounted the early obstacles and led the university through one of its greatest decades of development. During his tenure (1887-1898), student enrollment grew from 571 to 1,334 and the number of faculty from 49 to 102; the curriculum expanded from 113 courses to 137; the library collections grew from 18,000 volumes to 42,000; and the budget increased from $95,254 to $146,800. Schaeffer emphasized greater use of laboratories and established them in the medical and psychology departments. He authorized 16 expeditions for biological research, and encouraged the production of research monographs, such as those produced by the Departments of History, Natural History, and Psychology. He gave more prominence to the fields of social sciences, natural sciences, modern languages, and engineering. He initiated the Department of Pedagogy to help prepare better high school teachers. He placed more emphasis on physical education, and helped create a well-equipped gymnasium. Under President Schaeffer, the first extension work was done, and the first summer sessions were offered. New buildings constructed or begun with public funds during Schaeffer’s tenure include the Chemistry Building, the Dental Building, the Homeopathic Medical Hospital, and the University Medical Hospital, and the building of Close Hall by private subscription was authorized. The value of the physical facilities at the university increased from $208,000 to more than $625,000 during his tenure. One of his most important achievements was the passage by the legislature at his urging of a designated levy of one-tenth mill for building purposes on the university campus. Although the legislation was later repealed, it was due to Schaeffer that it passed at all, and it was renewed for more than 15 years, creating a stable fund for capital construction that was safe from interference from the vagaries of the legislative sessions and political maneuvering. At the time of his death, Schaeffer had plans for a new library and a gymnasium. He had also selected the Des Moines architects Proudfoot and Bird to design the neoclassical classroom and office buildings that now flank Old Capitol. Construction of Collegiate Hall commenced in 1897. The building was completed and opened on January 2, 1902, after his death, the first of the four buildings that, with Old Capitol, would eventually become the Pentacrest. At that time, the building was named the Hall of Liberal Arts, but in 1934 it was renamed Schaeffer Hall in his honor. Schaeffer was known throughout the United States, and in 1893 he was appointed by the U.S. Commissioner of Education to serve as a vice president of the World’s Congress Auxiliary of the World’s Columbian Exposition in Chicago. He chaired the Committee on Programme and was a member of the Committee on Higher Education. He secured the speakers for the sessions held during July and August 1893. With the support of Charles C. Bonney, president of the World’s Congress Auxiliary, Schaeffer won a brief skirmish with D. C. Gilman, president of Johns Hopkins University, over who was in charge of the program. Schaeffer was a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the New York Academy of Science, the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR), and the Old Capitol Club. He was a vestryman of Trinity Episcopal Church, a director of the Citizens’ Savings and Trust Company, and a trustee of Griswold College and St. Katharine’s Hall. At the time of his unexpected death in Iowa City in 1898, the members of the Board of Regents adopted a resolution expressing their conviction that the state had suffered a deplorable and irreparable loss. Schaeffer changed the course of the State University of Iowa, bringing the departments, the courses, the faculty, and the physical facilities to a point of leadership among the public universities in the United States. His creed as an administrator was that an able and specialized faculty was the one necessary part of a university; all else was accessory. Schaeffer's papers are in the University Archives, Special Collections, University of Iowa Libraries, Iowa City.

PROFESSOR FUERTES DIES. WELL-KNOWN DIRECTOR OF THE COLLEGE OF CIVIL ENGINEERING PASSES AWAY—SHOCK TO THE UNIVERSITY. The entire University was saddened Friday by the news that Professor E. A. Fuertes, the former dean and director of the college of civil engineering had died at his home in East avenue. He had been seriously ill only three days and the news of his death came as a shock to students and professors alike who were sobered by the sense of the loss of a friend and highly respected teacher. Only last Monday Professor Fuertes went to Syracuse on a business trip. On his return he appeared in as good health as usual but he contracted a severe cold which rapidly developed into what was called la grippe. Professor Fuertes for years had been the victim of Bright's disease and his already enfeebled constitution was not able to withstand the attacks of the new disease. After lingering near death for an entire day he passed away peacefully at 5:30 o'clock Friday morning. At his bedside when the end came were nearly all the surviving members of his family who are: Mrs. Fuertes, James Hillhouse Fuertes of New York, a well known civil engineer, Louis Agassiz Fuertes, '97, the noted bird artist of this city, Estevan J. Fuertes of Cayuga, Mrs. Edward Hitchcock, jr., and Miss Katherine Fuertes of this city. Few of the members of the Faculty were better known than was Professor Fuertes. To the students in his own department he especially endeared himself while among the graduates of the great college which he built up he was held in the highest esteem and to the many scores of alumni who owe their success in life primarily to his long and tireless efforts the news of his death will be sad, indeed. Those who were associated with him in his work were deeply affected when they learned of their loss. Professor Church, who for many years had known him intimately expressed the sentiment of the others when he said that Professor Fuertes had won the regard and affection of all with whom he had worked in the common cause of building up the college of civil engineering. "His death touches us all very deeply," he added. "As a man he was always faithful to his work, and as an administrator of the college he had a strick [sic] devotion to its best interests. Professor Fuertes had travelled widely in Europe and North and South America, and he brought to his work at Cornell an experience which had given him a clear insight into the needs of the college. "His associates in the world of civil engineering have repeatedly shown him honor in electing him to high offices in the society of civil engineers. His brusque manner covered a warm and generous heart. It will never be known the struggling students he had quietly aided, nor the silent deeds of kindness and help by which he has won the gratitude of the poverty-stricken of the city." An excellent sketch of Professor Fuertes' life by H. N. Ogden, '89, was given in the Alumni News of November 12, on the occasion of his resignation from the position of director of the college of civil engineering after 30 years of service. In addition we might briefly mention here again a few of the more important facts in regard to his career. Estevon Antonio Fuertes was born in San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 10, 1838, the son of Estevan and Demetria (Charbonnier). He was given an academic education and received the degrees of Ph. D. and C. E. before entering upon his work as an engineer. He at once was appointed to responsible government positions and was made director of the public works of the western district of the island in the year 1862. In 1863 he came to the United States and was first assistant engineer and later engineer for the Croton aqueduct board in New York city. In 1870-1, he was the engineer in chief of the United States expedition to Nicaragua and Tehuantepec to enquire into the feasibility of an isthmian ship canal. Later as a consulting engineer in New York he became identified with numerous extensive engineering enterprises in this country and South Amerca [sic]. In 1873 he was called to Cornell to become the dean of the department of engineering and at once pushed his college to the front. The success of his administration is shown by the present standing of the college and the records of his graduates. More than one-half of the graduates of the college now hold positions of unusual responsibility and they have done a great deal to elevate the profession in this country. In addition to this University work, Dean Fuertes engaged in much outside work, calculated to contribute to engineering knowledge. For example for 16 years until the government took charge of the work he personally directed and recorded metereological conditions, realizing their application to engineering problems, and for this purpose he contributed valuable apparatus and paid for clerical service from his own pocket. His resignation as director and dean of the College of Civil Engineering was announced November 7. Two years ago, under the strain of administrative duties, an organic trouble developed, which for the entire spring term kept him away from the college for the most part in a New York hospital. Shortly after his return it was evident his strength was not equal to the administrative demands of the college and its many-sided interests, and he resigned. Even at his resignation, he declined to sever his connection with the University and was appointed professor of astronomy in charge of the A. C. Barnes observatory. He was preparing to enter his new work enthusiastically when seized with the final illness. An excellent estimation of the loss which Cornell sustains in the death of Professor Fuertes can be gathered from the following from the pen of Dr. R. H. Thurston of Sibley College, who knew him and his work well: A man is very rarely greaved [sic] in the view of his acquaintances, seldom of his generation. His usually commonplace everyday life is too constantly before them and his greatest achievements require a certain perspective; yet we may, if we look for them, readily discover and often may appreciate the noblest works. Those of our colleague will be recognized by professional, if not by non-professional, contemporaries and will be later discovered to be essential elements of the history both of his profession and of modern education. He introduced modern methods, scientific and technical, into the public works of his native island. He was a pioneer in the reduction of the elementary facts of topography and geodesy, relating to the vast problem of making a ship-canal across the great barrier between the two oceans, to rule and measure and did much more than had most explorers to make that tremendous task possible of accomplishment. He exerted all the powerful influences of exact knowledge, correct professional practice and honest dealing in favor of righteous and wholesome administration of public office at a time when the Tweed regime was in full swing. He surrendered all expectation of a successful professional life, and of competency in old age, and for thirty years worked and studied and met difficulties and disappointments and hopes deferred without once leaving the path which he had definitely marked out as leading toward his goal—the firm foundation of a professional school that should stand high as a model in combining the science and the art of engineering in its curriculum and as affording the ambitious and competent novice entrance into his intended profession as well prepared as the learning and best practice of the time should permit. He risked his health and professional career in the sweltering climate of the West Indies and a future colony of the United States was advantaged by his art. He risked his life amidst mountains and chasms and unexplored forests and plains between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and his adopted country is today profiting by his work. He risked life as well as reputation and professional career, in the endeavor to sustain an honest patriotism against the aggressions of unpatriotic and dishonest officials and of selfish and dishonest men in civil life, both classes seeking profit at the expense of the honest citizen. Finally he surrendered life and for tune that the young men entering his profession might profit by his sacrifice, that the profession and the country and the world might be gainers by the most complete possible union/of science with art, that Cornell University might be aided in the endeavor to carry into effect Ezra Cornell's noblest aspirations and that its College of Civil Engineering might illustrate most perfectly the ideals' of the Founder and himself, and stand forever as a model of best educational method and of most splendid accomplishment. He gave his whole life for the country of his adoption, for the advantage of his profession and died in the promotion of the best interests of the University and of his own greatest work, its College of Civil Engineering. The mere statement of the facts constitute his highest possible eulogy. His greatest monument is erected on the Campus of Cornell. His memory will endear in the hearts of his pupils and his later beneficiaries of coming generations, of his family and near friends who witnessed his labors, his disappointments and his successes, of all his professional colleagues who admired his work from afar but who, better than can any others, thoroughly understood and appreciated the greatest works of that aspiring soul. Funeral Held. Impressive Service Over Remains of the Late Professor E. A. Fuertes—Sad Procession to Chapel. The last sad rites were performed Monday afternoon over the body of Professor E. A. Fuertes, professor of astronomy and former dean and director of the College of Civil Engineering. A short private service for the immediate family of the deceased was conducted at his late home at 2:30 o'clock by Professor Charles Babcock. At the conclusion of this ceremony the remains were taken to Sage chapel, where the public funeral was held. The chapel was filled with a great assemblage which had gathered to pay a final tribute to the man who stood for so much in the history and development of the University. The colleagues of Professor Fuertes in the faculty, many townsmen who had been numbered among his friends, and students who knew him either as a personal instructor or as the head of one of the great colleges of the University had all gathered for the funeral. The students of his own College of Civil Engineering had assembled at Lincoln hall and marched over to the chapel, where they occupied a large block of seats on the north side. The marshals of the procession were H. F. Badger, jr., D. F. Fulton, R. E. Marvin and J. S. Slater, of the senior class; L. R. Ellis and Haines Gridley, of the junior class; H. W. Pitzman and Milo Cleveland from the sophomores; and J. H. Sheble and H. C. Francis of the class of 1906. The bearers were; Professor G. C. Caldwell, Professor B. G. Wilder, Professor L. A. Wait, Professor J. M. Hart, Professor C. L. Crandall and Professor I. P. Church. The honorary bearers were: President J. G. Schurman, the Hon. S. D. Haliday, R. B.

Williams, G. R. Williams, Dean T. F. Crane and Dean R. H. Thurston. As the procession entered the chapel and passed slowly up the aisle, a hush fell on, the assemblage. Professor Charles Mellen Tyler read passages from the Episcopal service, while Mr. Daland played a low funeral march on the organ. When the casket had been placed in the open space in front of the apse, Dr. Tyler read a brief service, at the conclusion of which those who desired were given an opportunity to review the remains. When the audience had dispersed, the remains were borne to Lakeview for interment. The ceremony at the chapel though very brief, by its very brevity and simplicity lent additional impressiveness to the occasion. All University exercises were suspended at noon for the day.

Necrology. 78 BCE—DR. CHARLES DAVID MARX, December 31, 1939, in Palo Alto, Calif. After graduation he received the CE degree from Karlsruhe Polytechnicum, Germany, in 1881, then returned to the University as assistant professor of Civil Engineering from 1884-90. After teaching a year at the University of Wisconsin, he was asked by the late David Starr Jordan, MSA '72., first president of Stanford University, to join the original Stanford faculty; in 1923 he was made professor emeritus of civil engineering. He was a consultant in the engineering work on the Golden Gate Bridge, Boulder Dam, the experimental arch dam near Fresno, Calif., and other large projects, and a member of the advisory committee of the RFC. Entered Cornell in 1876. Sigma Xi; Sigma Delta Xi. Late wife, the former Harriet E. Grotecloss '84; brother, Dr. Guido H. Marx '93; sister, Mrs. Charles W. Curtis (Stephanie Marx) '88.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 42, No. 15, 18 Jan 1940, p. 202.

Charles D. Marx received his early education in the schools Toledo and Amsterdam. He was a student at the Karlsruhe realgymnasium during 1871-1876 and was graduated C.E., at Cornell university in 1878. He then returned to Germany and in 1881 graduated at the Karlsruhe polytechnicum, receiving a diploma as an engineer, having in the meantime served as instructor in civil engineering at that institution. During 1881-82 he was employed as a leveler, transitman and draftsman on the proposed extension of the Genesee River Niagara Falls division of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western Railroad, and then served for two years as the U.S. assistant engineer on the Missouri and Mississippi river improvement projects. He was assistant professor of civil engineering at Cornell University during 1884-90, acting also as chief inspector of public improvements in Rochester, N.Y., and during vacations as principal assistant engineer to Emil Kuichling (q.v.) on the design of additions to the sewer system of that city. In 1890 he went to University of Wisconsin as professor of civil engineering and in the fall of the following year became head of the department of civil engineering at Stanford university, continuing at that position until 1923 when he retired with the position professor emeritus. One of the first ten appointed to the original Stanford faculty, he was vice president of the university from 1917. During 1925-26 he supervised for the Engineering Foundation the building of the Stevenson creek arch dam near Fresno, California. This dam, located in a deep canyon of the Sierras, was a purely experimental structure, erected to determine the strength and weakness of arch construction, a problem which has puzzled engineers for centuries. He was a member of the board of consulting engineers of the San Gabriel flood control board (Los Angeles county), 1927, of the consulting board to the East Bay municipal district to investigate the causes of the partial failure of the Lafayette dam, 1928-29, and a member of the Hoover-Young commission which finally determined the location of the Golden Gate bridge. In 1932, he was appointed chairman of the engineers advisory board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in which capacity he passed on the Golden Gate bridge, Mississippi river bridge at New Orleans, Colorado river aqueduct of the Metropolitan water district of southern California and other projects throughout the country.

W367, W383, W735 Charles Lee Crandall

DEATH OF TWO MEMBERS OF THE FACULTY. Charles Lee Crandall '72, emeritus professor of railway engineering and geodesy in Cornell University, died at his-home in Ithaca on August 25 after a week's illness of pneumonia. Professor Crandall's adult life had been spent in the service of this University. He was enrolled as a student of civil engineering when Cornell opened its doors in 1868, and he had been a member of the faculty since 1874. He was born at Bridgewater, N. Y., on July 20, 1850, a son of Peter B. and Eunice C. (Priest) Crandall. When he entered Cornell in 1868 the family removed to Ithaca. Before he had completed his junior year he was appointed city engineer of Ithaca, a post which he held for twenty years. For two years after his graduation he was employed in railway engineering. In 1874 he was appointed instructor in civil engineering, and after regular promotion he became, in 1895, professor of railway engineering and geodesy. For four years, 1902-06, he was in charge of the College of Civil Engineering. He was the author of Tables for Computation of Railway and Other Earthwork (four editions), Notes on Descriptive Geometry, Notes on Shades, Shadows and Perspective, The Transition Curve, and Text-Book on Geodesy and Least Squares, and joint author of a Field Book for Railroad Surveying and a book on Railroad Construction. He married Miss Myra G. Robbins of Bridgewater in 1878, and she survives him, with an adopted daughter, Miss Emma Bowers '97. To tell of Professor Crandall's years of teaching is to fall far short of relating all his service to the University. When he retired from teaching, in June, 1915, the University Faculty expressed its sense of his worth in these words: "What is probably Professor Crandall's greatest usefulness is the result of his high, unselfish character. His whole life has been given to the devoted service of his associates and of his students. Graduates of the College of Civil Engineering have no memories that do not include a feeling of affection and thankfulness to Professor Crandall. Of kindly disposition and practical sound sense, sympathetic in his intercourse with students, quiet and modest in manner, but with strong convictions as to truth and justice in any matter brought before him, and always ready to sacrifice personal interests in following the dictates of duty, Professor Crandall has won the warm esteem of all who have come within the circle of his influence during these two score years of service at Cornell." Professor Crandall retained a warm, an almost parental interest in the graduates of the College of Civil Engineering. Through a correspondence bureau which he conducted for years he obtained professional employment for many of these men. He kept the alumni records of the college, which were a model of accuracy and completeness. The Cornell Society of Civil Engineers gave a dinner in his honor at New York City in January, 1916, and established the Charles Lee Crandall Prize in the College of Civil Engineering.

Charles Lee Crandall — August 25, 1917. The Professor of Engineering, Professor Jacoby, presented the following resolutions, which were adopted by rising vote: The sudden death of Professor Emeritus Charles Lee Crandall on August 25, 1917, came as a shock to all of his colleagues as well as to his friends among alumni and townspeople. His colleagues had cherished the hope that he would remain with them for a decade or more. Since his retirement from active university service in June, 1915, he was continuously engaged in a variety of pursuits. He revised several of his books, continued active work on the Committee on Iron and Steel Structures of the American Railway Engineering Association and served as a member of the Board of Public Works of the City of Ithaca, since January, 1915. The Faculty expresses its deep sense of personal loss and extends its warmest sympathy to the bereaved family. Resolutions relating to his character and service were adopted by the University Faculty at the time of his retirement. It may be appropriate, however, to add a hearty endorsement of the following editorial note published in Engineering News-Record, September 27, under the title "Professor Crandall—A Successful Teacher": "The lot of the professor of engineering is not always a happy one. Compensation is low, recognition is often belated. The main reward must come from a sense of duty well performed and the affection of a long line of students. Success of the more material sort came to Professor Crandall of Cornell University,—but the crowning professional success, the affectionate regard of forty engineering classes, was his in exceptional measure. Kindliness and sympathy were the lodestones by which he attracted the young men, and forever kept them as friends; but to these traits he added a sureness of technical knowledge that made him in after years a professional mentor as well. His work and the place he holds in the memory of his boys should be an inspiration to every teacher. He showed how great a success can be made in the teaching profession." Committee: S. G. George, E. E. Haskell, Henry S. Jacoby, Chairman.

From: Office of the Dean of the University Faculty, Records, p. 918, October 10, 1917.

The Professor of Applied Mechanics, Professor Church, on behalf of the committee (Professors Church, chairman, Burr, A. W. Smith) appointed by the President to prepare resolutions on the retirement of Professor C. L. Crandall from active service, presented the following resolutions, which were adopted by rising vote: "At the close of the present academic year, after more than forty- one years of continuous service on the teaching staff of Cornell University, our colleague, Professor Charles Lee Crandall, retires from his active duties. The University Faculty desires to record its regret at this severance of his old relations with us, and its appreciation of his work and his influence. A member of the first four-year class graduating from Cornell, he was appointed in 1874 an Instructor in Civil Engineering, in 1875 an Assistant Professor; and thus he was from the outset one of the earnest workers of those pioneer days of our University. During that early period his work as a teacher had to cover several of the technical subjects of the civil engineering curriculum; but, as years went by and the increasing resources of the University made possible a larger number of teachers, Professor Crandall was enabled to concentrate his energies on the subjects of his choice. He became Associate Professor of Civil Engineering in 1891, and in 1895 was appointed Professor of Railway Engineering and Geodesy. During the college year 1892-93, Professor Fuertes, Director of the College of Civil Engineering, being absent in Europe, Professor Crandall was the Acting Director of the college; and he again served in that capacity after the death of Professor Fuertes, from 1903 till the appointment of the present Dean, Professor Haskell, in 1906. In these two critical periods of the history of the College, Professor Crandall's services in directing its affairs were invaluable. But these heavy duties by no means sum up Professor Crandall's activities. Besides being the author of important text-books in the fields of his work as a teacher, he has done valuable experimental and literary work for two of our national engineering societies of which he is an honored member, and he has never wholly abandoned the practice of engineering, by which he has not only kept in touch with the practical field of his profession, but has opened the door to many services, both civic and technical, to the people of the city of Ithaca. A special debt of gratitude is due him from the alumni of the College of Civil Engineering for his constant and effective service in securing them professional positions through a correspondence bureau which during many years he has conducted for this purpose. But what is probably Professor Crandall's greatest usefulness is the result of his high, unselfish character. His whole life has been given to the devoted service of his associates and of his students. Graduates of the College of Civil Engineering have no memories of Cornell that do not include a feeling of affection and thankfulness to Professor Crandall. Of kindly disposition and practical sound sense, sympathetic in his intercourse with students, quiet and modest in manner, but with strong convictions as to truth and justice in any matter brought before him, and always ready to sacrifice personal interests in following the dictates of duty, Professor Crandall has won the warm esteem of all who have come within the circle of his influence during these two score years of service at Cornell. The University Faculty extends to him the assurance of its highest gratitude, with the earnest hope that the future holds in store for him many years of activity and happiness."

W368 & W493 Irving Porter Church

PROFESSOR CHURCH DIES. EMERITUS PROFESSOR OF CIVIL ENGINEERING SERVED CORNELL FORTY YEARS—NOTED AUTHOR. Irving Porter Church, emeritus professor of civil engineering, died on May 8, after an illness of about two years. Professor Church was born in Ansonia, Connecticut in 1851 the son of Dr. Samuel P. Church and Elizabeth Sterling Church. His early education was in the schools there and later in Newburgh, N. Y. whence he came to Cornell. Three years after his graduation 1873 he was appointed assistant professor of civil engineering. In 1891 he became associate professor and in 1891 full professor. Upon his retirement in 1916 he was made emeritus professor. In 1881 Professor Church married Elizabeth P. Holley of Niagara Falls, N. Y. who died about 1900. Two daughters, [sic] Edith of Ithaca, and Elsie Church Atkinson of Wellesley, Mass, survive him. Although of an unusually retiring nature, Professor Church endeared himself to many generations of students, and was not only recognized as an expert in civil engineering, but has been called "the father of mechanics." This appellation [sic] he received because of his book, "The Mechanics of Engineering," published first in three volumes and later as one work in 1890. This book is said to have revolutionized the subject of mechanics, and is still used as an authority. Shortly after his retirement, in tribute to him as teacher and friend, the alumni of the College of Civil Engineering presented to the University a portrait of Professor Church, by the artist J. Campbell Phillips of New York, and the sum of $2500 in Liberty bonds, to form the Irving P. Church Fund, the income of which is used to purchase books for the library of the College. In presenting the portrait, William D. Kelley '80 expressed the affection of the old students for Professor Church and their sense of his great services to the college and to engineering science during so many years. A still greater tribute to Professor Church came in 1929 when he was awarded the Benjamin G. Lamme gold medal "for accomplishment in technical teaching and actual advancement of the art of technical training." This medal is given to itstanding [sic] men by the Soicety [sic] for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

IRVING PORTER CHURCH PROFESSOR OF APPLIED MECHANICS AND HYDRAULICS — MAY 8, 1931. In the death of Professor Irving Porter Church, Cornell University has lost one of her most distinguished graduates and most valued teachers. His whole career was spent in the service of his Alma Mater. Graduated in 1873, a member of the instructing staff since 1876, he gave to Cornell the benefit of his exceptional training as a mathematician and of his rare qualities as a teacher. When he retired in 1916 he had taught here forty years, first as assistant and associate professor of Civil Engineering and later as professor of Applied Mechanics and Hydraulics. He enriched the literature of his profession by works of lasting merit in which his keen analytical mind, his matchless gifts of exposition are strikingly illustrated. His pupils have attained eminence in every field of engineering. The alumni of the College of Civil Engineering expressed their appreciation of his services shortly after his retirement when they presented to the University a portrait of their teacher and the Irving P. Church Fund to purchase books for the library of the College. Another high honor came to him in 1919 when he was awarded the Benjamin G. Lammé gold medal "for accomplishment in technical teaching and actual advancement of the art of technical training." This medal, given by the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, was a tribute of the whole profession to the man who had been called "the father of mechanics" on account of his epoch-making book The Mechanics of Engineering. The essential doctrine of this book as well as of his teachings was that all good design must be based on the principles of mechanics. His students were unanimous in praising his qualities as a teacher; clarity of presentation, rigor of demonstration, unlimited patience, unfailing courtesy were outstanding characteristics. They remember with especial gratitude that he spared neither his time nor his labor in helping them individually to understand difficult questions and to solve what seemed to them insoluble problems. Their respect for the teacher was equaled only by their admiration and affection for the man whose quiet manner and self-effacing modesty won the hearts of all who knew him. Science was only one aspect of his versatile personality. Nothing in the realm of literature and art was indifferent to him. He read good books. He displayed a peculiar and persistent interest in modern languages. Although he made only one short trip abroad he spoke well and understood both French and German. He loved and practiced the arts. Painting was one of the favorite diversions of his later years, and his home was filled with his copies of great masterpieces. He was very fond of music. He played the violin. Until the very last he found solace in listening to melodies that had always enchanted him. This unassuming and retiring man whose life was so full of work and who seemed absorbed in his many avocations found time to interest himself in the activities of the city. No good cause, no work of community interest or of social service appealed to him in vain. He gave generously and cheerfully. His acts of kindness to humble folk, his interest in deserving students, his love of children are remembered by all who knew him. His last illness had kept him confined to his home for two years, without depriving him of the companionship of his family and his friends. Those who called on him found him always resigned, serene, and smiling. To the end he was deeply interested in everything that concerned the University. He ever remained the gentle, friendly, and human soul that his colleagues and pupils will ever mourn and remember.

W371 Ezra Cornell IV

Almost every day during the school year, a tall, well-built young man passes in front of the famous statue of Ezra Cornell on the Arts Quad. Few people detect any resemblance between him and the university's founder, but this Agriculture college senior will soon continue a 104-year-old family tradition of service to Cornell. He is Ezra Cornell IV '70. Cornell, who is known to his friends as "E.G.," will officially join the university's Board of Trustees when he turns 21 on November 17. Under the provisions of the Cornell charter, the oldest lineal male descendant of Ezra Cornell serves a life term on the board. Cornell was named to the board in 1960 following the death of his father, William Ezra '40, who was the life trustee at the time. Ezra Cornell IV, the great-great-grandson of the founder, will be the first undergraduate to serve on Cornell's board. He is not, however, the first undergraduate to sit on a university board of trustees, since Princeton recently appointed undergraduates to its governing body. Despite his name and future post, Cornell is generally unknown on campus. As a result of his distinct aversion to personal publicity (the only other article written about him besides this was an Associated Press story printed in 1960), he has been able to lead a life similar to other undergraduates. Now that he will be a trustee, he fears things will be different. "I don't think I'm a public figure," he told the Alumni News. "I would not like to see my name tossed about on campus as a political football. I have a very strong interest in the university and what it should do, what it should be. Like everybody else right now, I question the university's role," Cornell said. Nevertheless, Cornell was unwilling to discuss his opinions on the many problems which have confronted the university in recent years: "I won't tell because I'm not prepared." Although he was not in the public view, Cornell played a significant part in some of the behind-the-scenes discussions following the takeover of the Straight. Along with two officers of the Inter fraternity Council, Cornell advised President Perkins on possible courses of action following the Faculty's initial vote to affirm the decision made by the Student-Faculty Board on Student Conduct. Along with the two IFC officials, he suggested something similar to what became the Barton Hall teach-in. "I think it helped," Cornell said. "It was the first cold water in the hot coffee cup." While Cornell thought Mr. Perkins "handled the situation well considering the crisis situation," he thought the administration "missed the boat" in their reaction to the affair. He did not suggest any recommendations he would have liked to have seen implemented at the time. The administration, Cornell believes, expects him to represent the undergraduate viewpoint on the board. He does not pretend to talk for all the undergraduates, but he thinks his views will parallel those of many students. Cornell realizes many students may question his justification for being a member of the board. He answers, "The justification is in the Charter—I would express the Cornell philosophy, the original intent of the university. I am going to represent Cornell at Cornell." He feels family obligations will be influencing him while he is a member of the board. Cornell said he is "very proud" of his family heritage, but "it's not a preoccupation." It took him a few minutes, for instance, to recall whether he is the great-great-great or the great-great grandson of the original Ezra Cornell. "It's not something I think necessary to keep at the tip of my tongue," he said. Incidentally, Ezra Cornell III '27 is not a member of the immediate family of the new trustee. The two are cousins. Like many other Cornellians returning home for the summer vacation, Cornell was confronted with questions and comments by relatives and friends. He found "it took my mother and myself a month to adjust." His summer job is one of the more unusual positions held by Cornellians making "honest coin" during the summer months. Cornell is in charge of liquidating machinery from a former shipyard in Hoboken, New Jersey, where his relatives and associates plan to build a refinery. Besides familiarizing himself with the latest going prices for winches and hoists, he put in long days contending with potential buyers, unreliable watchmen, vandals, pranksters and thieves. Despite some of the problems, Cornell said he enjoyed the job. "I'm very interested in the business world and the stock market," he noted. Not unnaturally, he has considered finance or law as possible careers. Cornell is a lifetime resident of Bloomfield, New Jersey, a quiet residential town which is not far from Newark. A graduate of the Bloomfield public schools and the Morristown School, a small New Jersey preparatory academy, Cornell is one of two children. His sister entered this fall as a freshman in Arts and Sciences. "It will be interesting for me to have her up there," Cornell said. Like many other undergraduates, Cornell is a member of one of the university's still numerous fraternities—he belongs to the prestigious Sigma Phi fraternity. While he is not a member of any athletic teams, Cornell likes all outdoor sports. Besides his interest in the outdoors, Cornell spends a great deal of time with his family. "I'm very involved with the family—it's quite an activity," he said. When Cornell was first named to the board in 1960 following his father's death, he said "They (his elementary school classmates) keep saying 'Bow to the king.' All the razzing is funny, though." Nine years later, just a few months before he officially becomes a member of the Board, Cornell said, "I don't know exactly what's best for the university on the issues which will be confronting us in the fall, I believe I can contribute to the formation of some new answers." "Razzing" about his new answers, however, is not likely to be funny.

Ezra Cornell (BS '70 Cornell) is life trustee on the Board of Trustees as the eldest lineal descendant of the founder of Cornell University. He became a trustee in 1969 at age 21. Mr. Cornell is chairman of the Trustee-Community Communications Committee and a member of the Alumni Affairs and Development, Buildings and Properties, and Governmental Relations Committees. He also serves on the Trustee Task Force on Residential Communities and on the committee that oversees the Cornell Business and Technology Park. In the past he has served on the Audit and Executive Committees. He is a former member of the Advisory Councils for the Colleges of Agriculture and Life Sciences and Human Ecology. He has been general area chairman of the Cornell University Fund, and a house advisor to Sigma Phi fraternity. He is the campus trustee delegate to the New York State Council of Governing Boards, Commission on Independent Colleges and Universities. Mr. Cornell is vice president and resident manager of Smith Barney in Ithaca and a director of the Guthrie Medical Center.

International Notes. THE SULGRAVE INSTITUTION of the United States and Great Britain, with its American headquarters at 233 Broadway, New York City, is pushing its organization generally throughout the world. The purposes of the institution are, broadly, to foster friendship and to prevent misunderstanding between English-speaking peoples, but eventually to broaden the scope of the work to include all nations of good-will. It aims to spread information of the arts and practices of peaceful intercourse; to bring together into a closer community of interests those societies, associations, and general organizations, together with all individuals, that are engaged in any work which tends toward the understanding of the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic point of view, culture, laws, and related institutions. Its permanent program includes maintenance in England of Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of George Washington; the exchange of ministers and college instructors, the interchange of working newspaper men, the exchange of scholars among secondary schools, the establishment of Sulgrave Institution lectureships, and the circulation of publications, including The Sulgrave Review. The executive chairman of the American branch is John A. Stewart and the secretary is Andrew B. Humphrey. The officers are conducting a campaign for funds and members.

or not your son James W. is too young for college from the standpoint of his general development is a question I of course cannot answer, but he seems to have little difficulty in attaining relatively good grades. His marks for the first term were as follows, the figures after each subject representing the hours: Math 5 – C (A is excellent; D passes), Chem 6 – C, Drawing 3 – 82, Surveying 3 – 77, Intro. Lect. 1 – 73. When next you come to Ithaca I hope you will call to see me. Meanwhile, let me know if there is any service I may be able to render. Sometime I'd like to meet the boy. Have him call in if there's any point on which I might help. Sincerely yours, Foster M. Coffin.

NEWS Founder Dies FOUNDER of the ALUMNI NEWS and its first managing editor, Herbert Blanchard Lee '99, died July 5, 1946, at his summer home in Elma. A member for twenty years of the law firm of Lyon, Lee & Lyon, 43 Cedar Street, New York City, he was earlier assistant district attorney of Erie County. He enlisted as a private in World War I and was promoted to lieutenant colonel, Coast Artillery. Lee won the Woodford Prize in oratory in 1899, was business manager of The Sun and a member of The Cornellian board and Glee Club; he was a member of Kappa Alpha and Quill and Dagger. His account of the founding of the NEWS we published November 16, 1939. "My thought," he wrote, "was for a complete alumni paper, informative, stimulating, persuasive in its appeal for a closer tie-up of alumni with the University.... "After considerable effort, I found an editor, Mr. Clark S. Northup [’93] of the English Department; a fine capable fellow who reacted enthusiastically to my plan. He was a great help and a perfect ‘hawk’ in correcting copy. No one ever complained of the English used in those first editions!” After discussing the trials and hardships of the NEW’s infancy, Lee concluded that it had been well worth the effort: “Working for Cornell was a tonic and those creative efforts, while hard, were joyous, satisfying fun.”

SS Vestris. The SS Vestris was a steamship, built in 1912. She was owned by Lamport & Holt and used in their New York to River Plate service. She is best known for her sinking, with a loss of over 100 lives. The Vestris disaster occurred on 12 November 1928 when the Vestris developed a severe starboard list, was abandoned, and sank approximately 200 miles off Hampton Roads, Virginia.

Estimates of the death toll vary from between 110-127. Time magazine and the New York Times reported that from the complement of 128 passengers and 198 crew on board, 111 people lost their lives. The sinking of the Vestris is notable for the loss of life, particularly of women and children, after the vessel was abandoned. The sinking attracted significant press coverage at the time. It has been stated that the sinking and subsequent inquiries had an impact on the second International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) 1929.

W382 Calvin Tomkins

Obituary. Calvin Tomkins '79. Calvin Tomkins, who was dock commissioner of New York during the administration of Mayor Gaynor, died in the New York Hospital on March 13. He had never fully recovered from an attack of pleurisy suffered at the Democratic National Convention last June. He was born in East Orange, N. J., on January 26, 1858, a descendant of Micah Tomkins, one of the original settlers of Newark, and was graduated from Cornell in 1879 with the degree of B. S. He was a member of Zeta Psi, the Philaethean Literary Society, the Gymnasium Association, and a Review editor. Since his graduation he had been associated with several New York companies engaged in the manufacture of building materials, and at the time of his death held the presidency of the Tomkins Cove Stone Company, the Bonner Brick Company, the Newark Plaster Company, and the Albert Manufacturing Company. In addition to his general and technical studies here, Mr. Tomkins had visited Europe three times on trips of special inquiry and inspection of advanced methods there used, before he was appointed dock commissioner by Mayor Gaynor in 1910. During his term of office he devised a system of port development which included the West Side and South Brooklyn, and was active in the improvement of terminals and the enlargement of transit facilities. Because of friction with the Board of Estimate, he was removed from office in April, 1913. In 1918, he served on the Railroad Administration's Inland Waterways Advisory Committee, appointed to investigate the use of the canals to relieve railroad transportation. He had also served as a director of the Battery Park National Bank and president of the Municipal Art League of New York, and was one of the delegates appointed by Governor Dix to represent the State of New York at the fourth convention of the Deeper Waterways Association. He was a member of the Society of the War of 1812 and the Reform, University, Cornell, and Atlantic Yacht Clubs. Mr.
Tomkins married, December 4, 1889, Miss Kittie Neeley, of Stony Point, N. Y. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Frederick and Calvin Tomkins, jr., and a daughter, Miss Catherine Tomkins.

W383 Archibald Byron Lueder

Obituary. Archie B. Lueder '99 Notice has been received of the death of Archie Byron Lueder on August 2, 1920. Lueder was born on August 26, 1876, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.
B. Lueder, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He prepared at Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, Pa., entering Cornell in 1895, and receiving the degree of C. E. in 1899. He was a member of Rod and Bob. In his freshman and sophomore years he was a member of the 1899 track and football teams; during his last three years in college he was a member of the varsity track and football teams. After his graduation, he practiced civil engineering in New York for some time; then he became associated with the Merrill-Ruckgaber Company, of Cumberland, Md. In 1915, he became superintendent of the Snare and Triest Company, going to Coquimbo, Chile, where he was engaged in building ship piers. In 1917 he went to Wichita, Kansas, as general superintendent of construction with the Phoenix Construction Company, with which company he was associated at the time of his death. In January, 1919, the company granted him a leave of absence to develop the oil properties of the Texas fields.

W383 Henry Sylvester Jacoby

The Faculty. Jacoby and Sumner Die. THE UNIVERSITY'S oldest emeritus professor, Henry S. Jacoby, Bridge Engineering, died August 1, 1955. He was ninety-eight years old last April 8. Since his retirement in 1922, he had lived in Washington, D.C., until a few years ago. Professor Jacoby was one of the pioneers who developed the College of Civil Engineering. He was a member of its Faculty and later of the College of Engineering for thirty-one years, the last twenty-one years of which he was head of the Department of Bridge Engineering. His portrait, given by Civil Engineering alumni, hangs in Lincoln Hall. He often boasted that his two generations of "boys" had created some of the world's finest bridges. One of these, Glenn B. Woodruff '10, designed the Golden Gate Bridge between San Francisco and Oakland, Cal., and was a consultant in the preliminary planning for the $100,000,000 four-mile-long bridge now being built from Michigan to Canada over the Straits of Mackinac. The oldest graduate of Lehigh University, Professor Jacoby taught civil engineering there four years before he came to Cornell in 1890. Lehigh awarded him the honorary Doctor of Engineering in 1941. He was a founder of Tau Beta Pi, past-president of the American Society for Engineering Education, a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, member of Sigma Xi, and an honorary member of the American Society of Sciences and of the Washington Society of Civil Engineers. He was the author of numerous textbooks and articles in engineering journals. Professor Jacoby is survived by a son, Freeman S. Jacoby '10, of 185 West Court Street, Doylestown, Pa. He was also the father of the late Hurlbut S. Jacoby '08 and John V. Jacoby '10. Mrs. Jacoby died in 1940.

W383 William Martin Torrance

Obituary. William M. Torrance '95 William Mai tin Torrance died on May 18 at Charleston, S. C. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Clay Torrance, of Gowanda, N. Y., who sent a number of their children to Cornell. He was the second to graduate, his brother, Stiles A., having preceded him. Torrance entered the University in 1890, receiving the degree of C. E. in 1895; he was a member of the Cornell Christian Association, the Civil Engineers' Association, and the Chess Club, it was necessary for him to work his way through college in large part; in his earlier student days, he attended to furnaces, mowed lawns, and did many kinds of odd jobs, but later he sold drafting instruments to engineering students. As the agent of T. A. Altendorf, of Philadelphia, he sold more instruments than any other student agent in any educational institution. In his senior year, he not only paid all his own expenses, but was able to save something to aid his sister Lucy to go to Cornell. She entered in 1895, and in 1899 was graduated with the degree of Ph. B. She died on September 8 of the same year. In engineering practice he was noted for his originality in design and his freedom from bondage to precedent. When employed by the Illinois Central Railroad, he made a large number of comparative designs for bridge abutments to show the great economy of several forms which were radically different from the usual ones. His design of an arched abutment is now regarded as a modern standard type. This tendency on his part is said to have aroused jealousy occasionally on the part of higher officials who wanted their own plans carried out without being shown that economy demanded something else. When the McAdoo tunnels, known as tubes, were built under the Hudson River, he was in charge of reinforced concrete design. At the shore where the tubes branch up and down the river it became necessary to build short sections as pneumatic caissons. Conditions were such that steel could not be secured within a year after the designs were finished. Mr. Torrance requested permission to design the caissons in reinforced concrete. It was granted. The designs were submitted to other consulting engineers for examination, and were approved. He was then appointed constructing engineer to carry out his own designs. Five caissons [sic] were built, and Mr. Torrance thus saved about half a million dollars, and over a half-year in time. His success in this work led later to his appointment as a designing expert on the caissons for one of the Brooklyn drydocks of the U. S. Navy Yard, on which other plans had failed. His designs led to the successful construction of the drydock. Mr. Torrance was one of the earliest parture [sic] from precedent. He has served reinforced-concrete arch bridge with, cantilever ends, but the conservatism of municipal authorities postponed their introduction for years, because their design was regarded as too radical a departure from precedent. He has served not only as chief engineer and consulting engineer, but as a contractor, For the original designs mentioned above, and other successful achievements, he was elected an alumnus member of Tau Beta Pi, and of Sigma XL, by the chapters at Cornell. He was a frequent contributor to engineering periodicals. During the war, he served as a captain in the Engineer Reserve Corps, and was on duty at Camp Mutchen, N.

J., Camp Meade, and Camp Lee. After the armistice he became assistant engineer with the Alphons Custodis Chimney Construction Company, of New York, and at the time of his death was with the Carson Construction Company, of Savannah, Ga. He leaves three brothers, Stiles A., A.B. '94, who married Flora E. Chapman '93; Chester C., C.E. '99, M.C.E. '00; and Robert S., C.E. '16. The ALUMNI NEWS is indebted to Professor Henry S. W383 Ezra Bailey Whitman

Whitman Elected. Alumni Trustee Named To Position Vacant by Death of Charles E. Treman '89. Ezra Bailey Whitman '01, Baltimore, Md., Alumni Trustee since 1921, was elected by the Trustees January 31 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles E. Treman '89. Mr. Whitman's term was to expire in June, but he will now continue in office until 1933. First chosen by the alumni in 1911 for a five-year term, Mr. Whitman was reelected in 1916. A consulting engineer, Whitman took his civil engineering degree in 1901, and after studying medicine a year, he became, in 1902, a member of the engineering firm of Williams and Whitman in New York. From 1906 to 1911, he was division engineer on design and construction of the Baltimore sewage disposal plant and chief engineer of the Baltimore Water Department from 1911 to 1914. For two years, he was a member of the firm of Grenier and Whitman, and in 1916, he joined the firm of Norton, Bird and Whitman, now Whitman, Requardt and Smith, with which he is still associated. He was a member and chairman of the Public Service Commission of Maryland from 1911 to 1927, member of the engineering board of review of Chicago in the lake level controversy, in 1924-25, and chairman of the efficiency and economy commission to reorganize the city government of Baltimore. During the War, he served with the rank of major in the Construction Division of the Army. He is president of the Bonded Mortgage Company and a director of the Baltimore Trust Company and of the Boston Sand and Gravel Company. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Waterworks Association, the New England Waterworks Association, the American Public Health Association, Sigma Xi, Tau Beta Pi, and Delta Upsilon.

W383 Clyde Potts

New Jersey Mayor Put Under Arrest — Clyde Potts of Morristown, N.J., Charged in Buffalo City Probe — Buffalo, N.Y., June 28—(AP)—Clyde Potts, a sanitary engineer now serving his seventh term as myor [sic] of Morristown, N.J., tonight joined the long list of men under arrest in the buffalo city investigation. The New Jersey executive was charged with perjury, first degree. Potts and three others were arrested and pleaded not guilty today, 24 hours after being indicted by the Extraordinary Grand Jury investigating Buffalo affairs. The charge against Potts pertained to testimony given to the Grand Jury last March. Potts was charged of testifying falsely that he had not met Henry W. Killeen, personal friend and adviser of Buffalo's former mayor, George J. Zimmermann, between September 11 and November 13, 1935. Another charge was that Potts testified falsely that he had nothing to do with a visit made to Washington by one Daniel White at the time that Interior Secretary Ickes declined to approve the appointment of Potts as an engineer on Buffalo's $15,000,000 sewer job. The indictment described Daniel White as an "agent" of Zimmermann. Potts came [sic] to Buffalo this morning and surrendered at police headquarters. Bail was fixed at $7,500. In addition to Potts, the following were arrested and pleaded not guilty under the indictments today: John W. Marlinski, former city streets director charged with second degree perjury. William H. Fern, former patrolman, accused of second degree grand larceny. The indictment charges that he accepted payments from several individuals seeking civil service jobs, and assured them of appointment. Former Councilman Andrew P. Meaney, charged with presenting a false claim to a public officer. More than 30 have been arrested since last November in city and county investigations.

Department of Public Works. Water Purveyor's Office, No. 150 Nassau Street. Feb. 8 1898. David Fletcher Hoy, Registrar of Cornell University: Dear friend: I met a Cornell man last night who informed me that I was in the "lost" column. My brother and I are living at 71 West 104, in the only city in the world. We are both connected with the Department of Highways, in the capacity of civil engineers. I imagine that Elmer Zarbell must be among the lost, if so I can tell you definitely where he is to be found: his address is: Columbus, Miss. Office of Chief Engineer of the Hanover Construction Co. Just about a year ago, I was given a promotion as topographer on a rail road locating party at Blocton [?] Fla. I went there to join my part and the first person I met was Zarbell; we rented together for four months until I left to accept a Civil Service Appointment in this city. I might mention that that section of Fla where I was, is the toughest section in the United States; a moonshine district, where a man's life does not amount to much. I understand that William Newell Hisey's address is not known. He was one of my best friends at college and we corresponded until about two years ago; he was living then at Los Angeles, Cal. Very sincerely yours, Julio M. Steinacher, 71 West 104.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Peekskill, N. Y., June 7th, 1911. Mr. David Hoy, Ithaca, N. Y. Dear Dave:-- I am in great need of a ten year book. I have a great deal of traveling to do all over the country and pass a great many lonely evenings, and I know that just where-ever I happen to be there are some old tried, true and trusted chums of Cornell days, but not knowing who they are and just where to find them I have to spend my evenings all alone. I shall be very much obliged to you in the trouble I give you in sending me this ten year book. I have no idea the expense for same, but will send you check promptly upon receipt of same. You will be surprised that I have jumped from Civil Engineering to Life Insurance. I have not yet decided in my mind why I have done so, how-ever I like this business very much indeed and have a satisfactory position with the Company. With best wishes to you and your brother, I remain as ever, Very sincerely yours, Julio Steinacher. Address #695 St Nicholas Ave., New York City, N. Y.

W383 Alanson Buck Skinner

Necrology. ALANSON SKINNER BY M. R. HARRINGTON.

THE Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, New York, has recently suffered a severe loss in the death of an important member of its scientific staff, Alanson B. Skinner, ethnologist, lecturer, and writer on American Indian subjects. He was killed in an automobile accident in North Dakota August 17, 1925, while on a collecting trip for the Museum, among the Sioux Indians. Alanson Buck Skinner was born in Buffalo, New York, September 7, 1885, the son of Rachel Amelia Sumner Skinner and Frank Woodward Skinner, C. E. He was educated for his profession at Columbia University and at Harvard, becoming connected with the American Museum of Natural History in New York about 1907. With this institution he remained until 1915, when he joined the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation. Here he stayed until 1920, when he accepted the position of Curator of Anthropology in the Public Museum of the City of Milwaukee, but in 1924 he returned to the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, remaining a member of its staff until his death. While Mr. Skinner studied and wrote on American archeology, particularly of New York State, he will be best remembered as an ethnologist. The Menomini tribe of Wisconsin was his specialty and was treated exhaustively in his works, but he also published many valuable books and pamphlets on other tribes such as the Sauk, the Potawatomi, the Iowa, the Cree, the Plains Ojibway, the Saulteaux, the Eastern-Dakota, and even an account of the Bribri of Costa Rica. Skinner was a great reader, and his truly wonderful memory enabled him to make the best possible use of what he read. His general knowledge of the American field, in both archeology and ethnology, was unusually wide; and probably no one alive today has so thorough and detailed a knowledge of the Central Algonkian tribes and the Southern Siouan peoples who resembled them in culture. On the other hand, physical anthropology and linguistics had no special appeal for Skinner; he concentrated his forces on such subjects as material culture, social organization, mythology, and religion. His great success in field work among the tribes lay not alone in his extensive knowledge of his subject, and his background of education and technical training, but also in his love for the American Indian as a race, his admiration for their little-known ideals and achievements, his sympathetic understanding of their problems, their point of view, their outlook on life. Although without Indian ancestry of his own, it was his pride that Wyandot blood flows in the veins of his wife and of his daughter. The Indians understood and appreciated all this; they loved him in return, and would give to him freely what they might withhold from others. And the Menomini formally adopted him under the Thunder-clan name of Sekosa, or "Little Weasel," which clung to him to the end, although after his marriage to the present Mrs. Skinner he received the Wyandot Deer-clan name of Tro-nyetase, or "Round the Sky." Skinner was a valued member of various scientific societies, including the American Anthropological Association and the Wisconsin Archeological Society, an active member of the Explorers' Club, a life member of the American Museum of Natural History, a Mason, and a Shriner. His bubbling humor, his courage, his cheerful, buoyant, radiant personality, rising above the sorrows and bereavements that darkened his private life, made friends for him everywhere friends, red and white, who will find in his death an irreparable loss. His parents, his wife, Dorothy Preston Skinner, and a little daughter, Esther Mary, aged four, survive him.

W383 George Devin

Obituary. George Devin '73. George Devin, a Civil War veteran and known for many years as a construction engineer, died at the National Home for Soldiers at Los Angeles, Calif., on May 28 last. He was born at Decatur, Ill., on February 27, 1848, but later moved to Iowa and went into the Civil War as a member of an Iowa regiment. After the War he went to Des Moines to live and from there came to Cornell in 1871 as a student of civil engineering. In 1873 he was graduated with the degree of B. C. E. After leaving the University, he entered construction work and in 1878 became manager of the Pittsburgh Bridge Company. From then until a few years ago he was engaged in construction work almost continuously. He gave it up soon after his wife died. On July 25, 1876, he was married to Emma R. Lowry of New Brighton, Pa. She died several years ago and soon after, he went to the Soldiers' Home to live. He was buried at the Home on June 1 with full military honors.

Hastings Man Dies Suddenly At His Home. Robert A. Pendergrass Succumbs Late Wednesday Evening; Survived By Wife, Four Children — Robert A. Pendergrass, 57, of Calumet Avenue. Hastings, died suddenly at his home Wednesday night shortly after eleven o'clock. He attended a lecture in Hastings in the earlier part of the evening with Mrs. Pendergrass and was in good health and spirits until while driving home he began to feel badly. He placed his car in the garage, however, without assistance, and shortly after entering the house, died. The medical report states that a cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of death. Mr. Pendergrass was a graduate of Cornell University where his son John, who has just returned for Christmas, is a student. Since his graduation, Mr. Pendergrass has been with the Bethlehem Steel Subsidiary, the Mac Clintic Marshall firm of Construction engineers, of which he was a vice-president at the time of his death. He was also playing an important part in the proposed construction of the new Hudson River bridge. Mr. Pendergrass was born May 11, 1876, in Troy, New York. He and his family moved from Kinwid, near Philadelphia, Pa., four years ago to Hastings, where they have resided ever since. Arrangements have been made by the Edwards Funeral Home for services to take place at the Pendergrass home at ten o'clock Saturday morning. The Reverend A. Meredith Mac Coll of the Dobbs Ferry Presbyterian Church will officiate. Burial will follow at Saratoga, N. Y. Mr. Pendergrass is survived by his wife and four children, two daughters Mary, who attends Oberlin College, and returned home last week for Christmas, and Helen Pendergrass, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke, and two sons, John and James Pendergrass.

W410 Charles Albert McAllister

Obituaries. CAPTAIN CHARLES ALBERT MCALLISTER '87, president of the American Bureau of Shipping, and a leader in the campaign for an outstanding American merchant marine, died at his home in New York on January 6, of a heart attack. He was born in Dorchester, N. J., on May 29, 1867, of Scottish parents. He received the degree of M.E. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta. He served more than thirty years in the Coast Guard Service. When he retired in 1919 to become vice-president of the American Bureau of Shipping, he held the post of engineer-in-chief. He became president of the Bureau in 1926. In the campaign to obtain Federal aid for the builders of merchant tonnage through construction loans and mail contacts, Captain McAllister played a major part. He recently urged that the government should appropriate $125,000,000 for the construction of 100 fast modern freight ships to replace antiquated ships and provide employment in American shipyards. In 1929 he served as an American delegate to the International Council on Safety of Life at Sea. He served as chairman of the Fuel Conservation Committee, was vice-president of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers. He was the author of The Professor on Shipboard, and of McAndrew's Floating School. His wife, Mrs. Adelaide K. McAllister, and a daughter, Miss Adelaide K. McAllister, survive him.

W412 Harris Joseph Ryan

Obituaries. PROFESSOR HARRIS J. RYAN '87, former head of the Department of Electrical Engineering at Cornell University, died July 5 at Palo Alto, California, at the age of 68. He was an emeritus professor of Stanford University. Professor Ryan was prominent in many branches of electrical engineering, but was best known as a pioneer and world authority in the study of high voltages. Born in Powell Valley, Pa., he received his early education in Baltimore City College and Lebanon Valley College. He entered Cornell in 1883, the year of the establishment of the course in electrical engineering, and graduated four years later in 1887. For the two years following, he was associated with J. G. White, '85 Ph.D., and D. C. Jackson, '86 G., whom he had known as graduate students at Cornell, in general engineering practice in the Middle West under the firm name of the Western Engineering Company. In 1889 he returned to Cornell as an instructor in physics. The following year he was made assistant professor of electrical engineering, and in 1895 at the age of twenty-nine he was made full professor with complete charge of the Electrical Engineering Department. He remained at Cornell in that capacity until he was placed in charge of the electrical engineering branch at Stanford University. Professor Ryan devoted his time largely to the study of problems that have proved to be of great practical and economic value to the electrical industry. The first of his many contributions to attract widespread attention was an experimental study of the alternating transformer, carried on during his first year as instructor at Cornell. This paper, written when he was only twenty-three years old, has become a classic in its field. While at Cornell he also took up the intensive investigation of high voltages, which he continued throughout his career. The transformer, the porcelain insulator, present-day solutions of the corona problem in high-voltage transmission, all owe much to him and he has had great influence on recent theories of air breakdown at high potentials.

W413 William Swan Elliott

Obituary. WILLIAM SWAN ELLIOTT '87 died February 22 at his home on Woodland Road, Pittsburgh, Pa., at the age of 71. He entered the course in Electrical Engineering in 1885 from Wellsville, O., and graduated with the ME(EE) degree in '87. He entered the employ of the Sprague Electric and Railway Motor Company, then for two years from 1890 he was department manager for Edison Electric Company in Chicago, Ill., and for three years sales manager of the Stirling Boiler Company. Since 1905 he had been president of the Elliott Company, of Ridgeway, Pa., manufacturers of electric, steam and hydraulic power plant apparatus. His son, George F. Elliott '17, was associated with him there, as were Milton E. Thompson '90 as consulting engineer and Harry E. Erb '28 as service manager. Mr. Elliott was also president of the Kerr Turbine Company, Liberty Manufacturing Company, and vice-president of the Lagonda Manufacturing Company. He had made many inventions, especially in the field of deaeration, and was a member of the Cornell and American Societies of Engineers and of the AAAS.

W414 Jesse James Hopkins

Demise of a Sibley Graduate. Classmates and friends of Mr. Jesse Hopkins, '88, will be saddened by the intelligence of his death which occurred at Springfield, Ill., very suddenly on the 11th of September. He had accepted an important position at that place and had been one month at work. The cause of his death was presumably heart disease for he was afflicted with that trouble while attending the University. Mr. Hopkins was an estimable young man in every way and his death cut short what promised to be an uncommon career in his profession.

at the home of his father in Forest Park, Ithaca, Tuesday afternoon, May 13. His death resulted from tuberculosis, from which he had been suffering for a number of years. The deceased was a grandson and namesake of the founder of the University, and is said to have inherited in a marked degree the strong characteristics of his grandfather. He was born in Ithaca in 1864, and received his education in the public schools of the city and at the University. After graduation he took up the practice of electrical engineering, and was meeting with a degree of success which gave promise of a brilliant future when he was suddenly stricken with the disease which eventually caused his death. He was obliged to give up his professional work and devoted himself to the raising of fancy poultry. In this he was singularly successful and his exhibits at the poultry shows soon won him a wide reputation. He also took a prominent part in the business interests of Ithaca, holding among his various positions, the presidency of the Cornell Incubator company, and a directorship in the Ithaca Street Railroad company.

Death of B. L. Oviatt, '87. B. L. Oviatt, '87, was killed in the Hamilton, Ont. railway disaster of last week Monday. The sad truth was not learned until Wednesday, two days after the accident, when the dead man's brother F. C. Oviatt of Chicago, examined the relics taken from those bodies charred beyond recognition. A peculiarly shaped ring, a steel measuring tape, and a bunch of keys were recognized as having belonged to B. L. Oviatt. He had been in Chicago on business and had left there on the Wabash road Saturday afternoon. While at Cornell Mr. Oviatt was a student in the Medical Preparatory course. He graduated in 1887, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science. Since that time he had been a student in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons.

W424 Albert James Himes

Obituary. Albert J. Himes '87 For the following sketch of Mr. Himes the ALUMNI NEWS is indebted to the Cornell Club of Cleveland: Albert J. Himes, C. E. '87, died at Cleveland, Ohio, on November 3, 1919. He was born at Oswego, New York, on November 14, 1864. After graduating from the Oswego High School he entered Cornell with the class of '87 and graduated in civil engineering with honors. His first work was with the late George S. Morrison on bridges at Rulo and Nebraska City over the Missouri River. He was then engineer on the Fall Brook Railway and on the Beech Creek Railway south from Lyons, N. Y. He was next city engineer of Corning, New York, in 1891. In 1894 he began work on the New York State Canals. As the $9,000,000 improvement was then soon undertaken, he resigned in 1897 to avoid countenancing what he believed to be wrong-doing. This act was thoroughly characteristic of the man. He was next employed by the War Department, U. S. A., in charge of a considerable part of the ship canal under the Board of Engineers on Deep Waterways. Following a short period of time in general practice, he entered the service of the N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R. in 1901 as bridge engineer. He became in turn assistant chief engineer, engineer grade elimination, and valuation engineer, which last position he held at the time of his demise. The interest he felt in his Alma Mater was most keen and unselfish. On May 18, 1906, there was held on his personal initiative a meeting of twenty alumni who then organized the Cleveland Cornell Association. He was chosen treasurer. This is now conceded to be the most active and useful of our associations. His ideal for it at the time was service for Cornell. That spirit endures in it. In 1913 he became a member of the Advisory Board of Editors of The Cornell Civil Engineer where he served three years. His endeavors to secure a successor to Dean Fuertes were given early and in an untiring manner. He was president and member of the Board of Directors of the Associate Alumni in 1912-13. He was a member of a committee in 1916 to raise the "Charles Lee Crandall Prize Fund." In 1917 he was active locally in raising the "Prof. Church Testimonial Fund." He took an active part in the selection and election of Alumni Trustees, especially those from among the C. E. Alumni and to represent that college. He urged that but one be so chosen at a time. He was a member of the Cornell Association of Civil Engineers from its inception. Among his many strong characteristics were absolute honesty, aggressive endeavor as a reformer, and unyielding resolution to do the right as he saw it. He was of a serious mind. He never rested. He was worn out before his time. But he did good work and more work than most of us in a full lifetime. His strength was failing for several years. He died of pernicious enemia [sic]. He married Grace J. Hyatt of Ithaca, who survives him. He left a daughter, Miss Bertha Himes, a son, Albert Perry Himes, C. E. '16, and a son, Raymond Himes, a student in Case School of Applied Science. His burial was at Oswego, New York.

Obituaries. JOHN JACOB BERGER, '87. The death of John Jacob Berger occurred at the residence of Gen. Alonzo Alden, 2,506 Fifth Avenue, in Troy, N. Y., October 24, 1899. Mr. Berger had been a sufferer for the last two years, and while his demise was not unexpected it will be deeply felt. Mr. Berger was born at East Millstone, N. J., in 1865 and went to Troy when seventeen years of age. He entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, pursuing a course in civil engineering, and was graduated in 1886, after four years of brilliant scholastic achievements. He had at the time of his graduation the highest in percentage of any that had ever been graduated from the institute in civil engineering. Mr. Berger took a postgraduate course at the University, remaining one year and receiving the degree of mechanical engineer. He then took a practical course of training at Lynn, Mass., and entered the field of his profession an expert. He had been engaged in electrical work in this section, having done the work in many large buildings both in Troy and Albany. While at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute he became a charter member of the Zeta Sigma fraternity, and he also organized a branch of the Young Men's-Christian Association work. He was quiet and unassuming, yet a warm friend and welcome associate. His life held out many inducements for a successful career. His wife, who was Miss Lottie Peck of Lansingburgh, and one son survive. Mr. Berger was the son of Rev. Dr. Martin L. Berger of Cleveland, Ohio, and had resided with Mr. and Mrs. Alden since going to Troy.

W427 Herbert Marlow Lovell

The Death of Herbert M. Lovell. More Particulars About Thursday's Accident in Elmira. The Elmira Star-Gazette last night devoted nearly a page to the tragic death in that city yesterday morning of Herbert M. Lovell, the leading features of which were told in these columns yesterday. In addition to the portrait of Mr. Lovell there is a picture of the Robinson building with the window indicated from which he fell. There is a picture of the open window as it was found, the photograph being taken from the inside and showing the snow brushed away by the passage of his body over the window sill. It was said that snow was drifted high on the window sill of the other windows in the office. The marks of Mr. Lovell's hands in the snow on the window sill were seen, where apparently he had supported himself while leaning out looking for the street car. It seems that no one actually saw him fall from the window or saw the passage of his body through the air. It was snowing hard at the time and the heads of everyone walking in the street were bent low to avoid the snow. Several on the walk near the scene of the accident heard the crash and saw Mr. Lovell's body on the walk and then saw it disappear as the walk gave way below it. The coroner in his post mortem found fractures of the legs, the left hip, ribs on the left side and another at the base of the skull. Mr. Lovell had his hat and coat on when found and his office pipe was found close beside him, showing that evidently he was smoking at the time he was looking out of the window. His daughter, Miss Dorothy Lovell, walked with him part of the way down town that morning and then separated from him as she went to Elmira college, where she is a student, and he continued his walk to the office. She is, there, the last of the family to have seen Mr. Lovell alive. Biographical. The Elmira Star-Gazette contains the following biographical sketch and tribute to the deceased as a man and a citizen: Herbert Marlow Lovell was born at Marathon, Cortland county, in 1858, and was a son of Ransom Marlow and Dorcas E. Meacham Lovell. He was educated in the Marathon Union school, the Cortland Normal school, the Michigan Normal school and Cornell University, where he received the degree of A. B. in 1887. He was married in 1883 at Dryden to Miss Lillian Louise Truesdale. A daughter, Dorothy Talcott, was born to them. Mr. Lovell came to Elmira when he was appointed as the principal of the E. F. A. in 1887, in which position he continued until 1895. During the latter part of his work as the principal of the school Mr. Lovell took up the study of law, passed the legal examinations and was admitted to the State Bar association in 1893. He assumed the practice of law immediately after leaving his duties at the Academy and became a member of the law firm of Lovell, Bogart & Gardner, with offices on the fourth floor of the Robinson building. Mr. Lovell served as the secretary of the Chemung Fire Insurance company. In his political life he was a member of the Republican county committee from 1898 to 1901; the senatorial committee for the Fortieth senatorial district from 1902 to 1906. He also was the city attorney for the term of 1900 and 1901. In 1915 Mr. Lovell was appointed the local referee in bankruptcy cases, in connection with the United States District Court. Decedent was a member of the New York State Bar association, the American Society of International Law, the Empire State society, Newton Battlefield Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, Century club and Country clubs. Mr. Lovell was a member of the Trinity Episcopal church in the parishes of Millport and other nearby towns. ...Mr. Lovell is survived by his widow, a daughter, Dorothy, at home, his aged mother, Mrs. R. M. Lovell, of Cortland, who is a guest at the home of her son in this city, a sister, Mrs. William Bennett of Cortland and four brothers, George Lovell and Buell Lovell of Marathon; Earl Lovell of Mount Clair, N.J., and Ron M. Lovell of this city. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

W428 Edward Hedden

Cornell Alumni Notes. '87, C. E.—Edward Hedden is with the United States Reclamation Service at Caldwell, Idaho.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 9, No. 34, 29 May 1907, p. 416.

Hon. Edward Hedden, as United States surveyor general for the state of Idaho, occupies a position of importance, the duties of which he discharges with ability, faithfulness and tact. He now makes his home in Boise but formerly resided in Caldwell, Idaho. He was born on a farm in Tompkins county, New York, November 12, 1864, and was an only child, his parents being Aaron C. and Agnes Estella (Terry) Hedden, both descendants of old New York families, members of which participated in the Revolutionary war. One of the great-grandfathers of our subject on the paternal side was a captain in that conflict, serving on the Colonial side. Mr. and Mrs. Aaron C. Hedden have now passed away, the mother dying in Rochester, Minnesota, when her son Edward was but three years of age. The family had removed from New York state to Rochester in 1865, there settling amid pioneer conditions. The father subsequently married Martha A. Ganoung and to that union were born a son and a daughter: Ray G., of Caldwell, Idaho; and Mrs. Emma Agnes Penny, of Yonkers, New York. Aaron C. Hedden later in life took up his abode in Idaho and died in Caldwell a few years ago at the age of seventy-three, being survived by his widow, who now resides in New York state. After his mother's death Edward Hedden and his father returned to Tompkins county, New York, where the son was reared on a farm. He acquired his primary education in the public schools and subsequently took up civil engineering, being graduated from the department of civil engineering of Cornell University in 1887. He at once entered upon his profession, which he continued to follow from 1887 to the time of his appointment as surveyor general of Idaho by President Wilson in 1916. For many years he was engaged in railway construction supervision in the service of the Northern Pacific, the Burlington and the Union Pacific. He came to Idaho in 1891 in the interests of the Union Pacific Railroad and located at Caldwell. During his residence there he served for three terms as surveyor of Canyon county and was city engineer of Caldwell for some time. During this period he was also engaged in private engineering work, being particularly connected with irrigation projects. He was chief engineer of construction on the Farmers Union ditch in Ada and Canyon counties and was employed in a similar capacity on other irrigation work. For four years he was construction engineer for the reclamation service of the government in Idaho. His presidential appointment as surveyor general of the state came to him on the 29th of August, 1916, his new duties making necessary his removal to Boise. On the 5th of May, 1897, in Caldwell, Idaho, Mr. Hedden was united in marriage to Kittie Lee Callaway, a native of that city and a daughter of the late Hon. Abner Early Callaway, who as one of the famous '49ers went from Missouri to California and came to Idaho from the Golden state during early pioneer days in this district. He was an honored veteran of the Mexican war and was prominent and powerful in democratic circles, serving for several terms in the legislature. Mr. Hedden is prominent in the Masons, having attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite, and is also a Shriner. He is a past master of Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 39, A. F. & A. M., at Caldwell, Idaho. His faith in the future of the state is indicated by investments which he has made in agricultural property and he now owns a valuable eighty-acre ranch near Caldwell, devoted to the raising of alfalfa, and there he spends his vacation periods, in fact he finds his chief recreation in farming, taking a great interest in that occupation, and when upon his farm participates in the actual work, assisting the hay hands, thus finding recuperation and the necessary stimulation for the arduous duties which fall to his lot in his official position, he is very conscientious in the performance of his work, which is of the utmost importance to the state and its inhabitants, and he is well liked by all who have come in contact with him in private or official life because of his pleasant and genial ways.

Edward Hedden Succumbs At Nampa Hospital. NAMP (AP) - Edward Hedden, 77, prominent Idaho engineer and a resident of the state since 1891, died today at a Nampa hospital. Hedden was best known as surveyor-general of Idaho from 1917 to 1926 after his appointment by President Woodrow Wilson, and as the project engineer of the Lake Lowell reclamation project near Caldwell and Nampa. He was a resident of Caldwell from 1891 until 1905 when he moved to Rupert. He later returned to Caldwell and in 1917 was transferred to Boise. Since 1926 he has been a resident of Nampa. He had served as Canyon county surveyor and was city engineer at Nampa prior to his retirement a few years ago. He is survived by his wife, the former Kitty Lee Callaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Callaway, Idaho pioneers. A daughter and a sister also survive. The body is at the Robinson funeral home in Nampa, where arrangements are pending.

W429 Emmett Elsworth Hart

Obituary. Emmett E. Hart '87 Emmett Ellsworth Hart died in Cleveland, Ohio, on December 4, after having been in poor health for several months. He was born at Little Valley, N. Y., on September 18, 1861, the son of Austine and Dorleski Manley Hart. He received his early education there, then came to Cornell in 1883 as a student of civil engineering. In 1887 he graduated with the degree of C. E. The same year he entered the service of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and continued with the company as draftsman, assistant engineer, and division engineer until 1897. The next two years he was employed by the Government on deep waterway surveys and in 1899 he entered the employ of the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis Railroad as division engineer of its Eastern Division. A few months later he was made engineer of the entire line of the company and in 1906 became chief engineer. He held that position until February 1, 1924, when he was made consulting engineer. He was married in April, 1891, to Miss Rachel Joy Sprague and they had two children. He was a member of the American Railway Engineering Association and of Tau Beta Pi.

Sibley Memorial Tablets. At either entrance to the new Sibley building which is crowned with the great dome, there has been erected a large bronze tablet, of which a photograph half-tone appears in this issue of THE ALUMNI NEWS. The tablet at the west entrance, is a memorial of Hiram Sibley, donor of the original buildings of Sibley College at the eastern entrance is a similar tablet in honor of Hiram W.

Sibley, son of the college's great benefactor, who himself has given liberally of his fortune to add to the buildings and equipment of the college. The most notable feature about the tablets is that they were designed by a member of the Sibley College faculty, and that the casting was done in the foundry of the college, by Cornell men. Hitherto it has been customary for the University to have similar tablets made in foundries elsewhere, but it was deemed fitting that tablets in memorial of the men whose generosity made Sibley College possible, should be altogether a product of that institution. The drawings and the plaster of Paris casts were, therefore, made by Hiram S. Gutsellof the Sibley College faculty, and then turned over to James Vanderhoef, head of the foundry department. Twelve hundred pounds of metal was used for the tablets. Each was made in five pieces: The base, the main tablet, the mantle, the dome, and the ornamental piece surmounting the dome. The memorial to Hiram Sibley weighs 320 pounds the other, 260 pounds. The castings was carried on with much difficulty, because of the size of the metal handled and the limited equipment of the foundry, together with the inexperience of most of Mr. Vanderhoef's assistants in work. Director Thurston says, concerning the tablets, that he considers them distinctly the best piece of work ever done in the foundry department of Sibley college, and that they were hardly equaled by anything of similar size on the Campus.

Warren-VanDerhoef. Miss Evalena Warren and James E. VanDerhoef were married at noon today in the parsonage of the Second Baptist Church by Rev. Edward L. James, pastor of the church. Following the wedding ceremony, the couple was tendered a dinner by Rev. and Mrs. James. Mrs. VanDerhoef is the founder and the head of the Auburn Conservatory of Music, which was established five years ago when she came to this city from the Ithaca Conservatory of Music where she was an instructor of the violin and the piano. Mr. VanDerhoef has been for many years a professor in the manual art department of Cornell University. Following a wedding trip to Rushford, N. Y., the former home of Mrs. VanDerhoef, the couple will make their home at 31 William Street in this city.

From a photograph he carved a clay model, from which he made a plaster cast and then a plaster model. This was carefully packed and shipped to the Gorham Co. in Providence, R.I., who made a sand mould and poured a new plaque in Benedict nickel. This one is more securely anchored than the original. Washington, D. C. Retired in 1935, he had been for nearly twenty-five years adviser on marine matters to the Quartermaster General. He entered the service of the War Department as supervising marine engineer and marine adviser, administering the ships of the Army Transport Service and harbor boats. During the World War he was a major in the Quartermaster Corps, assistant to the general in charge of Army Embarkation, and later held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, QMC, in the Reserve Corps. A graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology, he was an instructor and assistant professor in Sibley College from 1885-88, and with William A. Day '86 was a founder of Sigma Xi, world scientific honor society. Later he received the PhD at George Washington University, and there taught engineering. He spoke during the Sigma Xi semi-centennial program in Ithaca in June, 1936.

W433 Frederick Eugene Turneure

DEAN FREDERICK EUGENE TURNEAURE. Professor F. E.

Turneure who has served as Acting Dean of the College of Engineering since the death of Dean Johnson in June 1902, was elected Dean of this College at the winter meeting of the Board of Regents on January nineteenth. Frederick Eugene Turneure was born July 30, 1866, on a farm near Freeport, Illinois, and his early life was that of the average farmer boy. He attended the country schools, and while there took up the study of Algebra and Geometry in addition to the studies usually offered in the country school. He attended the Freeport, Illinois, high school a portion of two years, during the sessions of '82 to '84 and as far as attendance at school is concerned, this completed his preparatory training. He taught in a country school one winter, and by the fall of 1885 he was ready to enter college. Having decided on the profession of Civil Engineering as his life work, he took the entrance examinations and was registered as a student in the College of Civil Engineering of Cornell University. This was soon after the establishment of certain undergraduate scholarships which were awarded annually by competitive examination, for proficiency in the mathematics required for entrance. The mathematical study which he had begun in the country schools and continued during one year of high school, and later by self help, enabled the then freshman Turneure to win this scholarship, which paid two hundred dollars per year during his entire college course. He graduated from Cornell with the degree of C. E. in the class of 1889, and immediately entered the service of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. He remained with this company for about a year, being engaged in general railway engineering work, and then joined the engineering staff of the Chesapeake [sic] and Ohio Railroad, on location surveys in Virginia and West Virginia, continuing in this line of work until the fall of 1890. At this time an offer of a fellowship in civil engineering was received from his Alma Mater, Cornell University, which was declined with some hesitancy [sic] in favor of an offer of a position as instructor in civil engineering at Washington University, St. Louis. The decision turned out to be a fortunate one, however, for at Washington he was brought into close association with the late Dean Johnson, who was then Professor of Civil Engineering at that institution. It was while Professor Turneure was at Washington University that the greater portion of "Modern Framed Structures" was written. This work was the joint production of Messrs. Johnson, Turneure and C. W. Bryan, the latter then being engineer for the Edge Moor Bridge Company. This treatise on the design of framed structures is now in the eighth edition and is a recognized standard all over the world, a translation having recently been made in the Japanese language. In the fall of 1892 Professor Turneure came to the University of Wisconsin to take the newly created chair of Bridge and Sanitary Engineering which he has held until his recent election as Dean. He was on leave of absence during the year of '95-'96 when he made an extensive tour of England, Germany and France with the special object of studying the foreign methods of sanitation and bridge design. In 1901, in conjunction with Dr. H. L. Russell, Professor of Bacteriology in the College of Agriculture of the University, he published a work on "Public Water Supply," which is a work of great value as the subject is dealt with from the standpoint of both the hydraulic engineer and the bacteriologist. In 1897 Professor Turneure conducted an extensive series of experiments on the stresses in bridge members due to moving train loads, the results of which were first published in the Transactions of the American Society of Civil Engineers and attracted wide attention. The results obtained contributed largely to more exact methods of design, and have been made use of in the preparation of specifications. Professor Turneure was City Engineer of the City of Madison during the two years 1900 and 1901 and while serving in this capacity he designed two engineering works of vital importance to the city, the first of these being the present [sic] septic sewage disposal plant which successfully solved this troublesome question. The second was the installation of a system of auxiliary pumps in the artesian wells from which the city's water supply is drawn, this demonstrating a method by which an abundant supply of wholesome water may be obtained for many decades to come. Dean Turneure is a member of the following engineering and scientific societies: Associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers; Western Society of Engineers; Society for the Testing of Materials; American Railway and Maintenance [sic] of Way Association; American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is president of the Science Club of the University during the current year. Dean Turneure has always taken an active interest in the city's welfare, believing this to be his duty toward the students, as well as a duty to be expected from every citizen. After retiring from the office of city engineer which he held as a non-partisan, he was elected a member of the Common Council as a representative of the fifth ward, an office he holds at the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Giles Turneure, parents of the Dean, now make their home in Madison, having moved here in 1901. Dean Turneure was married in 1891, to Miss Mary D. Stewart, of Anchor, Illinois, and they have one child, a son, Stewart, now four years of age. Mrs. Turneure is also a graduate of Cornell of the class of 1890, and unites in her character a strong personality with a winning manner. She is an able assistant to her husband in all his work. When Dean Turneure began his duties as Professor of Bridge and Sanitary Engineering in 1892, the faculty of the college consisted of nine members including the instructors and there were but 197 students in the whole college, little more than half as many as there are in the present freshman class. The change from a small department of the University [sic] to a separate college was just beginning, and aside from the then small shops, all there was of it including laboratories was quartered in a portion of the north end of Science Hall. The year and a half during which Dean Turneure served as Acting Dean was a time of great prosperity and substantial growth for the College, and showed his marked capability for executive work. His close identification with the College during its years of rapid development has made him thoroughly familiar with its workings, and needs for the future, and his selection as Dean a particularly fortunate one for the needs of the College.

Obituary. REAR ADMIRAL FRANK HARVEY BAILEY, U. S. N. In these days of constant progress in engineering the death of a man who has retired from active service for nearly a decade is apt to pass without sufficient notice of the good work he has done unless some friend who was a junior associate during his active career contributes a few memoranda as a tribute of respect and affection. The writer's personal acquaintance with Admiral Bailey covered almost forty years, and included a short cruise and an extended tour of duty in the Bureau of Engineering, during which times the association was constant and intimate. Admiral Bailey was one of the most modest of men, with the natural result that his great ability and lovable character are only known to those who were thrown with him intimately. He gave his whole attention to his work and none to exploiting what he had done, so that the general public hardly knew him at all. He was born in Cranesville, Pa., in June, 1851, but moved to Gowanda, New York, in 1866. He took a course in Scio College, Scio, Ohio, and then, in 1873, entered the Naval Academy as a cadet engineer in the third class of those who took the two-year course. His remarkable ability and aptitude for engineering showed from the beginning and he graduated in June, 1875, at the head of a class which contained a number of very able men. From that time until his retirement in 1913 he performed the usual alternation of duty at sea or on shore, making a record which was always distinguished for the highest efficiency. He was Professor of Marine Engineering in Cornell University by detail from the Navy from 1885 to 1888, where he enjoyed the respect of the faculty and students for his attainments in his own branch of the profession and his general proficiency as an engineer. From 1891 to 1896 he was on duty in the Bureau of Engineering, most of the time as Chief Designer, and it was during this period, and a later similar assignment, that his very best work was done for the Navy. Admiral Bailey was a born engineer and his mind worked like a beautiful piece of machinery in perfect condition. Every problem that came up for solution was given careful and thorough study, and when he had finished, the work was done and satisfied everybody as the best solution that could be made. He possessed in the highest degree that splendid common sense which another brilliant engineer once stated to be nine-tenths of good engineering. One of the most notable instances of this trait was his rehabilitation of the air pump engines of some nine or ten of the early ships of the new Navy. A description in detail of his analysis and solution of this problem would be very interesting, but perhaps out of place here. Suffice it to say that he made a complete success and secured entirely satisfactory operation, while all the other designers failed to improve the original condition which was a constant source of worry. Many other instances might be given to show the clearness with which his mind handled these problems, but this one was a simple and very striking illustration. Admiral Bailey was one of the most lovable of men on account of his remarkable evenness of temper and uniform kindly sympathy. It seemed impossible for any amount of nagging to arouse his anger. He only smiled and turned the incident aside as one of the unpleasant things of life which have to be borne, but which the wise man does not permit to disturb his serenity. It is safe to say that he had no enemies and that all of us who were privileged to enjoy his friendship will always count it as one of the precious possessions of our lives. He was devoted to the Navy and took a particular interest in its efficiency as a whole, not content to see his own branch doing good work, but anxious that the whole great organization as the marine arm of the military power should work harmoniously, and be pervaded by a spirit of enthusiasm in all its officers. His study of conditions as they then were led him to suggest as early as 1890 the amalgamation of the line and engineer corps which finally came about in 1899. The writer remembers well numerous occasions on which Bailey discussed this point with him in all its bearings. It is interesting in this connection to note that another talented officer of great ability who has recently retired after a distinguished career as one of the best strategists in the service also discussed this same subject with the writer about 1896 and suggested amalgamation from the standpoint of a line officer. Thus it happened when the late Admiral Evans proposed the amalgamation to the Personnel Board of which the writer was a member, the latter was in a position to say that he had discussed this with some of the ablest officers in both the line and engineer corps and knew that they were favorable to it. The idea, as is known to students of the subject, dated back as far as the time when Secretary Gideon Wells suggested the same thing in 1865, but the service was not then ready for it. As President Roosevelt (then Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Chairman of the Personnel Board in 1897) so well expressed it: "We are not making a revolution; we are merely recognizing and giving shape to an evolution, which has come slowly but surely and naturally, and we propose to re-organize the Navy along the lines indicated by the course of the evolution itself." Admiral Bailey took part in the two wars which occurred during his mature life. He was Chief Engineer of the Raleigh at the Battle of Manila, which was the first naval battle of any importance in which our vessels had engaged since the Civil War.

Cornell in the War. A List of Cornell Soldier Boys. Through

The writer was on duty in the Navy Department at that time and a few days after the battle received a letter from Admiral Bailey written from Hong Kong in the early part of April, 1898. In this letter he said: "It looks very much as if we would have to lick the Spaniards at Manila, but we are not worrying about it and believe that we shall have a comparatively easy time." During the World War he was recalled from the retired list and assigned to duty in the Design Division of the Bureau of Engineering, where his ripe experience and splendid judgment enabled him to render valuable service. Thus our friend has made his record and passes on as one of that body of fine and faithful men who have ever maintained the high reputation of the Navy by performing faithfully and efficiently every duty as it came along without thought of special reward or as to whether it might make them famous. Many names will occur to all who are familiar with the history of the service as worthy of inclusion in this faithful band. The record of their lives is an inspiration to the younger men in whose keeping is the reputation of the Navy today; and it is a great satisfaction to all of us who love the service to feel that the same high standard of devotion to duty which animated our departed friend and the others like him permeates the service today and assures the maintenance of the highest efficiency. W437 Buena Ventura Rufus Flint

Rufus Flint (b. circa 1865) was a professor of English and mathematics, University of Nicaragua, conducting early Central American biodiversity studies while enrolled at Cornell University. He took his degree in mechanical engineering from Cornell's Sibley College of Engineering in 1887. In August 1887, Professor Robert Henry Thurston, director of the Sibley College of Engineering at Cornell University, presented Rufus Flint's three year study of Nicaragua hardwoods to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The impetus behind the Cornell research conducted by Flint was to assess the viability of exploiting Central American timber stands when the Northwest American forest resources were exhausted. As Appleton's Cyclopedia record, the study, "... proved that in that country there exist most valuable varieties of wood. The present impending wood famine may, the speaker said, be averted by the use of tropical timber." Flint was the son of an American physician, Earl Flint. His mother was native to the Nicaraos nation. Dr. Flint arrived in Nicaragua from New England about 1850. He lived mainly in the cities of Granada and Rivas, Nicaragua, until his death in the late 1890s. In the 1870s, Earl Flint became an antiquities collector for the Smithsonian Institute. About 1878, he began working for the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology at Harvard University about 1878, sending collections and letters to the museum until 1899. Rufus Flint donated land to build the sanctuary for the "Christo Negro", or Black Christ, of La Conquista, Carazo, Nicaragua. La Conquista was named for the Spanish colonial response to an indigenous rebellion against imperial authority. His son, also named Rufus Flint, was the inaugural coach of the Nicaraguan soccer team, Railroad Star, in 1924. And in 1927, Rufus Flint, Jr. served as head of Nicaragua's National Football League. While at Cornell, he was tapped into the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity in 1885.

W440 Felix Adler

An Early Liberal, Dr. Adler, Friend of Andrew D. White, Was Not "Banished from Cornell," as Some Have Maintained. THE DEATH, some weeks ago, of Dr. Felix Adler, the eminent founder of the Ethical Culture Society, prompted the appearance of many obituaries which included the information that Dr. Adler had been "banished from Cornell University in 1876 for his radical ideas." The general impression created by the press was that Dr. Adler had been expelled from Cornell for the heterodoxy of his theology. This impression is certainly inconsistent with memory of Andrew D. White's liberalism and with his reputation as a staunch proponent of tolerance. Researches undertaken by some local historians reveal that the press notices that appeared on Dr. Adler's death are utterly unfair to Cornell and to President White. Dr. Adler was not "banished" from Cornell. His relations with the University were always most amicable, and the most pleasant relations persisted between Dr. Adler and the University long after he had ceased to be a member of the instructing staff. While it is true that during Dr. Adler's incumbency of a special lectureship at the young institution during 1874-77, he was the subject of vicious attacks by the Ithaca Democrat (a paper which was opposed to the foundation of the University in Ithaca, which had relentlessly prosecuted the "godless Cornell" theme, and which never overlooked an opportunity to condemn the activities on East Hill) these attacks were never echoed by any member of the University staff. Indeed, University sentiment supported Dr. Adler in his efforts to give a course in religious history without perverting his researches with personal theology. Dr. Adler came to Cornell in 1874, soon after he had completed the European studies which laid the foundation of his ethical philosophy. He came to Cornell not as a member of the faculty, but as a non-resident lecturer—one of the distinguished group of scholars who lent their academic prestige to the struggling little institution in the wilderness. It had been one of the purposes of Mr. Cornell and President White to establish at Cornell a professorship in Hebrew and Oriental literature, a professorship which could secure to Cornell students the advantages of a dispassionate and scientific treatment of the culture from which sprang the prevailing religion of the country. But the meagre resources of the University did not permit the immediate establishment of this chair. “A number of gentlemen in New York, headed by a distinguished Israelite, wellknown for his public spirit” came to the aid of this cause. In March, 1874, Mr. Joseph Seligmann (the “distinguished Israelite”) offered to endow a professorship of Hebrew and Oriental literature and history in the University for three years, on condition that he should nominate the incumbent. “The offer was accepted, the appointment being rather in the nature of a lectureship, the duties of which required residence at the University while a course of lectures was given. It was expected that this appointment would fill an important deficiency in the University curriculum, as scientific instruction in Hebrew was desired. Dr. Felix Adler, who was nominated to this chair, was a graduate of Columbia College and of the University of Heidelberg, a man of fresh scholarship and of pronounced opinions on the history of religion, philosophy, and ethics. Dr. Adler possessed great ability as a lecturer. He was an independent thinker and possessed the power of clear and eloquent statement.* Dr. Adler’s lectures were attended enthusiastically, and met with complete approbation in the University community. Only in the city of Ithaca were there disapproving murmurs. The Ithaca Democrat found that the heterodoxy of Dr. Adler’s beliefs furnished a convenient excuse for attacking the University which was so obnoxious to the editors of the paper. Dr. Adler ignored these attacks, and continued his lectures, with the support of the entire University community. When the three-year term for which Dr. Adler’s services had been engaged came to a close in 1876, he left Ithaca, followed only by the regrets of the University community that he could not become permanently identified with the institution for which he had done so much. President White was in Europe at the time of Dr. Adler’s departure, but he wrote quite warmly about the great value of Dr. Adler’s services as a lecturer. In reply to some attacks on Dr. Adler which followed his incumbency of a Cornell non-resident lectureship, he wrote that Dr. Adler had his “respect for his devotion to study, and his faithfulness to his convictions.” Dr. Adler enjoyed at all times during his lectureship the sympathy and support of President White and of every University authority. There never was any intention to oust him because many of the things he said from the lecture-platform were not consonant with prevailing convictions. Indeed, the attacks upon Dr. Adler were made the signal for a counterattack against those interests which had condemned the establishment of an institution which was “not under the control of any Synod, Council, Convention, Consistory, or Convocation—of any one denomination or combination of denominations.” Such men as Louis Agassiz, James Russell Lowell, George William Curtis, James Anthony Froude, and Bayard Taylor were criticized just as severely as was Dr. Adler. Even Goldwin Smith, when he lent his invaluable aid to the revolutionary little college in central New York, was characterized as “dangerous.” Dr. Adler certainly enjoyed distinguished company as a target for the attacks of the bigoted, and he was defended with all these others as a man who could rise above narrow prejudice. Writing from Castellamare di Stabia, Italy, in April, 1877, when the attacks upon Dr. Adler were at their height, President White addressed himself to the alumni and undergraduates of Cornell, in a vigorous defense of Dr. Adler. He appended a reiteration of the University’s policy against permitting interference by sectarian bodies. In this letter[†] is the most conclusive evidence that Dr. Adler was never “banished” from Cornell. *(Cornell University—A History: Waterman Thomas Hewett, Volume II, pp. 2., 3). †(The Cornell Era, May 4th, 1877).

Dr. Felix Adler (1851-1933) was the Founder of the Ethical Culture movement. He was born in Alzey, Germany, the son of a rabbi, Samuel Adler. When Felix was six, his father was appointed head rabbi at Temple Emanu-El in New York City and his family immigrated to the United States. Adler earned his undergraduate degree from Columbia University in 1870, and already being regarded as his father’s successor, he was sent to Heidelberg University to prepare for the rabbinate. Upon his return to America his father’s congregation asked him to deliver a sermon from the pulpit. That address, The Judaism of the Future, created a lot of talk because he had not mentioned God. When asked directly if he believed in God, young Felix responded, “Yes, but not in your god.” Thus ended his future at Temple Emanu-El. But in that address were the seeds of Ethical Culture. During the two years following, Adler taught Hebrew and Oriental languages at Cornell University. His outspoken attitude and his convictions drew the criticism that he was “dangerous” to his students, and he relinquished the professorship in 1876. That same year, at the age of 24, Adler founded the New York Society for Ethical Culture. His lectures before the Society on Sundays were well known and attended, and were routinely reported on in the New York Times. Adler’s belief in deed above creed led the Society to foster projects that focused on the poor and underserved in the community. In 1902 Adler was given the chair of political and social ethics at Columbia University which he held until his death in 1933. Well known as a lecturer and writer, Adler served as rector for the Ethical Culture School until his death in 1933. Throughout his life he always looked beyond the immediate concerns of family, labor, and race to the long-term challenge of reconstructing institutions like schools and government to promote greater justice in human relations. Within Adler’s ethical philosophy, cooperation rather than competition remained the higher social value. Adler was the founding chairman of the National Child Labor Committee in 1904. In 1917 he served on the Civil Liberties Bureau, which later became the American Civil Liberties Bureau and then the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). In 1928 he became president of the Eastern division of the American Philosophical Association. He served on the first Executive Board of the National Urban League. As a member of the New York State Tenement House Commission, Adler was concerned not only with overcrowding but also by the increase in contagious disease caused by overcrowding. Though not a proponent of free public housing, Adler spoke out about tenant reform and the rents which he considered exorbitant.

In 1885 Adler and others created the Tenement House Building Company in order to build “model” tenements that rented for $8–$14/month. By 1887 six model buildings had actually been erected on the Lower East Side of Manhattan. Even though critics favored restrictive legislation for improving tenement living, the model tenement was a progressive step forward. By the late 1890s, with the increase in international conflicts, Adler switched his concern from domestic issues to the question of American foreign policy. While some contemporaries viewed the 1898 Spanish American War as an act to liberate the Cubans from Spanish rule, others perceived the U.S. victories in the Caribbean and the Philippines as the beginning of an expansionist empire. Adler at first supported the war but later expressed anxiety about American sovereignty over the Philippines and Puerto Rico, concluding that an imperialistic rather than a democratic goal was guiding U.S. foreign policy. Ethical Culture affirms “the supreme worth of the person” and Adler superimposed this tenet on international relations, believing that no single group could lay claim to superior institutions and lifestyle. Unlike many of his contemporaries during World War I, Adler didn’t feel that the defeat of Germany alone would make the world safe for democracy. Peace could only be achieved, he thought, if the representative democratic governments remained non-imperialistic and if the arms race was curbed. As a result, Adler opposed the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations. As an alternative, he proposed a “Parliament of Parliaments” elected by the legislative bodies of the different nations and filled with different classes of people, rather than special interests, so that common ground and not national differences would prevail. Adler lectured extensively throughout his life and published such works as Creed and Deed (1878), Moral Instruction of Children (1892), Life and Destiny (1905), The Religion of Duty (1906), Essentials of Spirituality (1908), An Ethical Philosophy of Life (1918), The Reconstruction of the Spiritual Ideal (1925), and Our Part in this World. He remained the Society’s Senior Leader until his death in 1933 at the age of 81.

W438-W444 James [Jacob] Schwartz Lehmaier

Obituary. James S. Lehmaier ’78 James (formerly Jacob) Schwartz Lehmaier died suddenly on October 28 in Washington, D. C. He was born in New York on May 19, 1859, and entered Cornell in 1876, receiving the degree of Ph.B. in 1878. He was a member of the Curtis Literary Society. Then he entered Columbia University, where he received the degree of LL.B. in 1880. He immediately took up the practice of law in New York City, and for a number of years had been in partnership with William W.

James S. Lehmaier

Pellett, LL.B. '01, with offices at 132 Nassau Street. He was a member of the Bar Association of the City of New York, and of the American Bar Association, and took an active part in the civic and public affairs of the city. In 1895 he served as commissioner of accounts for New York City, and from 1887 to 1889 was secretary of the State League of Republican Clubs. He served as chairman of the executive committee [sic] of the National Republican Club longer than any other member. He maintained his interest in all these affairs until a few years ago, when his health began to fail. He married Miss Isabel Macy in 1889, and there were two children, Alan Louis, born in 1890, who was in the service and spent several months in France, and Isabel Macy, born in 1891, who is now a teacher in the public schools of New York. He was an active, useful citizen, who gave his strength and talents to his city and to his time. He took a most active interest in the transit conditions which menaced the growth of New York, and in every civic betterment. A member of his class, who is also a lawyer in New York, said of him: "He was highly esteemed, and his standing at the bar was excellent."

W445 Harold Dana Hudson

Hudson, Harold Dana. Born October 18, 1896. Army serial # 1272230. Enlisted April 18, 1917 for Sanitary Detachment, 3rd Infantry, New Jersey National Guard; reported for Federal service June 21, 1917. Highest grade attained: Sergeant, February 19, 1918. On November 11, 1918 serving in Sanitary detachment, 104th Engineers, American Expeditionary Forces. No record found of wounds.

Awarded Silver Star in General Order #14, Headquarters 29th Division April 20, 1919, for act of October 23, 1918. Honorably discharged August 5, 1919.

From: File note. Deceased Alumni Files.

Pvt. Harold D. Hudson, Sanitary Detachment, 105th Engs., has received the following commendation from Maj. Gen. C. J. Morton, commanding the 29th Division: "I have read with much pride the report of the commanding officer, 105th Engs., regarding your courageous conduct and devotion to duty, October 23, at Samogneux. Wounded men of the 322d F. A. were unable to secure medical attention. Your commanding officer was unwilling to order men to go through the deadly fire then prevailing, but you and two others volunteered and successfully carried out your work of rescue. I have ordered your name and deed inscribed upon the record book kept at these headquarters for that purpose."

Boat Club Offers Reward. Will Give $200 for Recovery of Body of Many Lost on Yacht. The Seawanhaka Boat Club at Elmhurst last night offered a reward of $200 for the recovery of the body of Edward S. Riconda, captain of the club, who is believed to have been lost with Harlod D. Hudson of Flushing and John Roden of Brooklyn, on board their sloop Amateur, missing since July 17. Richard Hudson, brother of Harold, returned with his mother yesterday from a three-days' sail at Block Island seeking traces of the missing yachtsmen. They are placing faith in the story of Captain William O'Brien of New London, Conn., who said that last Sunday he saw a sloop bearing the name "Amateur" near Plum Island Light. The authorities at New London have issued orders that any one found sailing the yacht Amateur is to be apprehended.

Mrs. C. May Hudson, R.D. 37, South Norwalk, Conn. Oct. 28- 1924. Cornell U. Athletic Assn. Ithaca, N.Y. Dear Sirs: This is to inform you that my son, Harold D Hudson, was lost at sea while sailing in a sloop July 17th between Block Island and New London. Yours truly C May Hudson.

From: Letter from Mrs. C. May Hudson to the Cornell University Athletic Association, dated 28 Oct 1924. Deceased Alumni Files.

Obituary. Harold D. Hudson '18 Harold Dana Hudson was lost at sea on July 17, 1924. He was born on October 18, 1896 at Sao Paulo, Brazil, and came to this country for his education. After attending Phillips Exeter Academy, he entered Cornell in 1914 as a student of agriculture and left in 1916 to enlist in the Army. He spent two years overseas with the 104th Engineers of the 29th Division and was decorated for bravery under fire. At the close of the War he represented the United States in the Inter-Allied games in Paris and then entered Columbia, where he completed his studies. While there he was captain of the track team in 1921. When lost, he and two companions were on a sailing cruise for a vacation. They left Block Island, R. I., for New London, Conn., and were never seen again. It is assumed that their boat was capsized in a squall and they were drowned. At the time of his death he was an insurance broker and a member of the firm of Quinlan, Terry and Johnson of Flushing, N. Y. Besides his mother, Mrs. C. May Hudson of South Norwalk, Conn., he is survived by a brother, R. D. Hudson, his wife, and a daughter.

W446 Justin Jerome Ambrose Burns

Cornell Obituaries. JUSTIN J. A. BURNS, '92. In the death of Justin Jerome Ambrose Burns, C. E., '92, at Watertown, N. Y., on November 14, Cornell lost one of the most prominent alumni that have been given to the world by the College of Civil Engineering since its establishment. In the fifteen years since his graduation, Mr. Burns had been engaged in some of the greatest engineering works of the time, and the practice of his profession had carried him completely around the globe. Mr. Burns was born in Watertown, July 28, 1870. He obtained his early education in the Watertown public schools and in the High school of that city, and entered Cornell in 1888 at the age of eighteen years. He had won a state scholarship, and earned the remainder of his expenses at college through his talent as a musician, playing first violin in the orchestra and at the Lyceum theater. Professor George W. Cavanaugh, '96, who was his room-mate during the four years of his college life, says he has never known so tireless a worker. Day after day Mr. Burns would arise at 5 o'clock in the morning to study, after being kept out until after midnight the evening before by his musical work. After leaving Cornell Mr. Burns secured a position on the construction of the Third avenue cable road in New York city, where he remained for two years. At the end of that time he went to Grand Rapids, Mich., to enter the service of the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad, as the Pere Marquette was then called. He had been in the West only a year, however, when he tried a civil service examination for the position of assistant chief engineer of bridges for the borough of Bronx, New York. He won the position, attaining the remarkable record of 99 per cent, in his examination, and remained in this position until the outbreak of the war with Spain in 1898. He enlisted in Company M, 1st regiment of volunteer engineers, U. S. A., and after serving as a clerk in the recruiting office at Peekskill, went to Porto Rico as 1st sergeant major of his regiment, being later promoted, at the request of the officers of the regiment, to the rank of 2nd lieutenant. Upon his return to the United States at the close of the war, he was at once offered a position as civil engineer on the New York subway and was placed in charge of the most difficult section of the work. This included the famous loop around the City hall, regarded as one of the most wonderful engineering feats accomplished in the construction of the entire subway. When he had finished this work, he was appointed one of the three assistant chief engineers of the American-Chinese railroad, at the request of Chief Engineer Parsons, who had noted with approval his achievements in the subway. Mr. Burns dug the first spadeful of earth in the construction of the railroad from Canton to Hankow, and remained in China, in active charge of one of the most difficult parts of the work, for a year and a half, until the Boxer uprising put a stop to the work and forced him to flee, the country. On his way home he completed the circuit of the globe, coming by way of Europe and the Atlantic. After his return he was engaged, until last summer, on the construction of extensive street railway systems in Memphis, Term., involving an expenditure of more than $8,000,000. Having completed this work, he had returned to his home in Watertown for a short rest before taking up his next commission, the building of the tunnel under the East river for the Pennsylvania railroad. He became ill of typhoid fever on November 1, and died November 14. He was buried at Watertown, N. Y. During the past few years Mr. Burns had been a frequent contributor to engineering periodicals, his articles on the railroad in China which appeared in the Engineering News being the best known. He was a man of versatile accomplishments, and seemed to have the ability to excel in whatever he undertook. At the time of his death he possessed a speaking knowledge of French, German, Spanish and Italian, and had considerable acquaintance with the Chinese language. He was unmarried, and both his parents are dead. He is survived by five brothers and two sisters.

W446 & W738 George Walter Cavanaugh

George Walter Cavanaugh, February 4, 1870 – July 2, 1938. The retirement of George Walter Cavanaugh at the end of the last academic year, and his death on July 2, 1938, brought to a close an uninterrupted service of forty-seven years. He was born in Watertown, New York, February 4, 1870. After graduation from the Watertown High School he taught school for one year at Rutland, New York. He graduated from Cornell University in 1896 with the degree of bachelor of science. In 1891, while still a junior in the University, he was appointed assistant chemist in the Cornell Agricultural Experiment Station. He held this position until 1903, when he was appointed assistant professor of Agricultural Chemistry. In 1909 he was made professor of Agricultural Chemistry, the position which he held until his retirement. The development of the College of Agriculture to its present position was made possible to a large degree by those members of the staff who, in earlier days, carried science to the practical farmer. In this field Professor Cavanaugh played a large role. His engaging personality, his faculty of making clear the application of scientific facts to agriculture, and his interesting presentation, made him at all times a welcome lecturer at farmers' institutes. Through his intimate association with the farmers of the State Professor Cavanaugh early realized the necessity of utilizing surplus agricultural products. The economical production of powdered milk was an important development resulting from his investigations. From the beginning of the University, agricultural chemistry was recognized as fundamental to instruction in agriculture and later became an essential part of the Experiment Station. On the retirement of Professor Caldwell in 1903 Professor Cavanaugh succeeded him in the field of agricultural chemistry. Professor Cavanaugh was essentially a teacher. His subject matter was presented in an interesting and convincing manner. He was gracious and generous, and took a keen personal interest in his students. He will be remembered by a host of former students with affection and respect. As a citizen, Professor Cavanaugh was a man of broad interests. He possessed a kindly disposition and a keen wit, was sympathetic and tolerant, and always ready to serve his fellow men. His influence on the life of the community in which he lived will not soon be forgotten.

From: Office of the Dean of the University Faculty, Faculty Memorial Statement.

George W. Cavanaugh As a freshman arriving in Ithaca via the Ithaca-Auburn Shortline in the Fall of 1917, I was pounced on by a Rooming Agency Compet who promptly stowed me away in a rooming house halfway down Williams Street below the White Gateway. Climbing up that nearly perpendicular street on registration day, I found my way to the Chemistry Department, then housed in the roofed-over ruins of Morse Hall which had been gutted by fire the preceding February. There, in my first meeting with a Cornell professor, George W. Cavanaugh, I was initiated into the mysteries of the B. Chem. curriculum. In those unhurried days a chemistry undergraduate had as advisor each year a senior professor, changing each year, so one was sure to get to know at least four members of the faculty. In 1917 some sixty of us freshmen for the B. Chem. courses were welcomed individually by Professor Cavanaugh who made our problems his. On a Saturday afternoon later that Fall I washed the windows of the Cavanaugh home to earn a much-needed dollar, and got to know Mrs. Cavanaugh, a gracious small lady who was a semi-invalid. She welcomed me and helped me forget my disappointment in not being able to attend the football game with my better-heeled classmates. George Cavanaugh was strictly a Cornell product and, following in the footsteps of Professor Caldwell, he spent his whole career in the service of the University and the farmers of New York State. Professor Caldwell, one of the first four professors picked by Ezra Cornell, was an innovator in the application of chemistry to agriculture and made Cornell a leader in this field in the days when the U.S. economy was still predominately agrarian. Georg Cavanaugh, born in Watertown, N.Y., in 1870, entered Cornell in 1889 to become one of Caldwell's protégés and, as a junior, became Assistant Chemist in the Cornell Agricultural Experiment Station. He qualified for the B.S. in 1896 and remained in Ithaca as Assistant Agricultural Chemist under Professor Caldwell. In 1903 he was appointed Assistant Professor of Chemistry in the College of Agriculture when Caldwell retired. He transferred to the Department of Chemistry in 1905 as Assistant Professor of Chemistry in It's Relation to Agriculture, becoming Professor in 1909. (In those days, because of strenuous faculty action, the degree of Associate Professor was not used at Cornell). In 1914 Cavanaugh was named Professor of Agricultural Chemistry. He retired as Emeritus Professor on July 1, 1938 and died July 2, 1938. He is unique in the history of the Chemistry Department as the only professor not having an advanced degree. Professor Cavanaugh, as I knew him, was of medium height and slight build, with thinning gray hair and a mustache. He would peer quizzically over his glasses, a quick twinkling of his eyes enlivening his lectures. He and Henry Feehan, our Irish stockkeeper, were great friends and met frequently at Henry's window to laugh over the latest Irish jokes. Because Cavanaugh's courses in food and agricultural chemistry were not required for the B. Chem. degree, he was not as well known to chemistry majors as other professors in the Department. As a senior I benefited from Cavanaugh's course in Food Chemistry. He was a natural teacher, presenting his subject matter in an interesting and convincing manner and interlarding his remarks with many personal experiences and humorous incidents. He took a keen interest in his students. Professor Cavanaugh believed in carrying science to the farmers of the State. His engaging personality and ability to make clear the application of chemistry to agriculture made him a welcome lecturer at Farmer's Institutes. He realized the necessity of utilizing surplus agricultural products and was particularly interested in dairy problems. The economical production of powdered milk was an important development resulting from Cavanaugh's investigations. Later he became interested in the possibility of utilizing giant kelp as a source of iodine, vitamins and trace elements. In the picture he is holding a decorated specimen of kelp, showing that he attacked this problem with characteristic high spirits and good humor. Professor Cavanaugh always entered into Departmental social doings with enthusiasm. Vividly remembered is a mock Ph.D. exam performed at an evening Get-to-gether of faculty and students in the main lecture room of Baker Lab. Cavanaugh and two other senior professors formed the committee and grilled a younger member of the faculty, to the delight of everyone. He was an active honorary member of Al-Djebar, a chemistry convivial group of the '20's and '30's, and regularly attended its initiation dinners and generously transported student members. One remembers driving to a meeting at Freeville Inn and overtaking Cavanaugh's car which was listing heavily to port. Fearing for his safety, I pulled along side only to find that "Tiny" Robey (a graduate student of some 350 pounds) was one of the passengers in the back seat. Although slight of build, Cavanaugh was fully capable of defending himself vigorously. He delighted in telling of his encounter with a drunk on a Lehigh Valley train. This pugnacious fellow undertook to vent his spleen on the small professor. Cavanaugh doubled up in his seat and let fly with his legs, sending the bully crashing down the aisle, a very surprised and humbler man. With Cavanaugh's retirement the courses in food and agricultural chemistry were transferred to the College of Agriculture. When his laboratory was liquidated I acquired several cases of cider jugs which still play an important role in my home winemaking activities. A. W. Laubengayer.

Burns, Edward John, lawyer, was born at Mohawk, N.Y., Mar. 26, 1895, son of Edward James and Emma (Piper) Burns. His father was an employee of the Remington Typewriter Co. Edward J. Burns was graduated B.A. in 1917 at Cornell University and LL.B. in 1921 at Columbia University. From 1921 until the close of his life he practiced law in Utica, N.Y., in association with the firm of Kernan and Kernan, of which he became a member in 1932. He specialized in bank law and negligence law. For many years he was a director of the Herkimer County (N.Y.) YMCA. During the first World War he served as YMCA secretary at Camp Merritt, N.J., and during the Second World War as a member of a selective service board in Mohawk. Burns was a member of the New York State (pres. 1950) and Herkimer County Bar associations, the Masonic order, and the Cedar Lake Club. His religious affiliation was with the Mohawk Reformed Church, and from 1930 until the time of his death he served as vice president of the consistory. Politically he was a Republican. Golf and tennis were his chief recreations. He was married in Mohawk, June 30, 1928, to Edyth, daughter of Charles Frederick Leonhardt of that place, a tabulator, and had four children: Carol Louise, who married Richard Oliver Hayes; Leighton Rand; Edward Leonhardt; and Robert John. Edward J. Burns died in Mohawk, N.Y., July 3, 1954.

W449 Silas Wright Pickering II

24 Men. John W Brothers, 13595 Congress Lake, Hartville, Ohio 44632. For 17 yrs Silas Wright Pickering II has been composing this column for the men of '24. He has done a memorable job but he has decided to retire. During these yrs Si has written not one word about himself! It is very much in order that some reminiscences about Si and his work be reported. Most of my recollections go back to our yrs on the Hill where it was my good fortune to be rather closely associated with Si. We were both in Sibley. We were on the same "E" lab "team" (along with Sam Bernard '25, Dune Williams, Jack Upstill, and Herm Knauss). It was our wkly chore to test various items of electrical equipment. Sam was the only member of our team who had the faintest notion of what we were doing. As a group we nearly drove Prof Johnny Pertsch (the brilliant prof sometimes referred to as "Augustus Pertsch of Franklin Hall," etc.) up the wall. Si liked to be the "hook-up" man. His procedures were based entirely on Hope. When the switch was thrown sparks flew all over the lab. Poor Prof Pertsch blew his fuse but kept his cool, a truly sweet man! Si did better at Schoellkopf, where he was the imposing character with the stentorian voice who managed Jack Moakley's 1924 track team. With Rym Berry '04 he announced events at the track meets. It was a good track team. Remember? In addition to the 1924 nucleus of Fred Lovejoy, Ed Kirby, Tom Hennings, Al Rauch, and "Jinky" Crozier there were some very talented younger men coming along. Si deserves a good deal of credit for the achievements of this group. After graduation Si buckled down to work seriously with Union Carbide in Charleston, W Va. There he met and married his sweet wife, Mimi. He was serious but with a leavening of good humor and fun along the way. It was inevitable that Si should be promoted to the hdqtrs staff of Carbide in NYC where he was made dir of the industrial relations dept. Si is now retd and living with Mimi at 40 E 88th St in "Fun City." Some Fun!

Borax Companies Indicted as Trust, World Cartel With

Robert Morision Curts

Nazi Links Is Alleged, With Tight Control of Vital War Chemicals, By Lawrence E. Davies, Special to The New York Times. San Francisco, Sept. 14—A Federal grand jury today accused a British corporation and another owned 90 per cent by Germans through a Netherland “dummy” company of having controlled since 1929 by means of a cartel arrangement the production and marketing of virtually the entire world’s supply of borax, obtained almost exclusively in California. Seven companies, headed by Borax Consolidated, Ltd., and American Potash and Chemical Corporations, were indicted for Sherman Anti-Trust Law violations with eleven individuals, four of whom live in England. ...Individual defendants named in the indictment were: ...Robert M. Curts of New York, sales manager of the company.

Notes from the Classes. '24. John O. (Jack) Todd of Evanston, Ill., sends a report indicative of an energetic and active life. His only grandchild and namesake, John Odell Todd III, celebrated his first birthday in August by visiting his grandmother (Kay Cone) and his grandfather. Jack's son is with IBM in Los Angeles. Our Jack—the '24 Jack—goes on to say, “The old ex-saxophone player had the good fortune to be national volume leader of the Northwestern Mutual for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1961.” It was good to hear such pleasant news from Jack.

Class Notes. 24. Surely you remember a handsome young man from Minneapolis by the name of John O. Todd, who organized and played (saxophone, wasn't it, Jack?) in a band that provided melodious rhythm for many a dance during our memorable undergraduate days. In his spare time, Jack sang with the Glee Club and saw to it that monthly copies of the Cornell Widow were delivered on time and to the proper people and places. With all this experience, he went on to found the Todd Planning and Service Co. and become one of Northwestern Mutual Insurance Co.'s most successful agents, with headquarters, first in Chicago, then in Evanston, Ill. In 1963, at 61, Jack was invited to help solve a retirement problem for General Electric Co. In his own words, “It took six years and many trips to New York, but the problem was finally solved with an innovative plan, funded by a form of permanent life insurance. This led to the formation of a new and separate entity called the John O. Todd Organization, which now has computer-connected offices in more than 20 cities, with headquarters in Norwalk, Conn., and staffs totaling close to 200 people.” What a beautiful capstone to a long and exciting career! Finally, at 85, Jack has arranged for others to carry on while he indulges in at least partial retirement in the company of his wife and undergraduate sweetheart, Katherine (Cone).

Obituary. John O. Todd died of heart failure on his 96th birthday Nov. 12 in his Evanston home. For more than 70 years, Mr. Todd sold life insurance, devising innovative insurance programs and becoming known for his personal sales style. “He always wanted to help the person,” said his wife, Elizabeth. Mr. Todd was born in Minneapolis and graduated from Cornell University in 1924. He began a lifelong affiliation with Northwestern Mutual Life in Milwaukee in 1931. Five years later, he moved to Chicago and in the late 1950s developed the split-dollar life insurance plan. He sold that idea to General Electric in the late 1960s and the company used it to cover their top executives, the first time a company used permanent life insurance to protect retirement benefits, said Bernard Pierce, Mr. Todd's accountant for nearly 40 years. Mr. Todd wrote many articles and six books on the insurance industry, publishing his last book in 1996. In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, John and George; a sister, Mary Mabel O'Leary; five grandchildren and a great-grandchild. A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at First Congregational Church of Evanston, at Hinman Avenue and Lake Street, Evanston.

From: Chicago Tribune, 3 Dec 1998.

John O. Todd '24 died on Nov 12, his 96th birthday, at his home in Evanston, Ill. His distinguished 70 year career in the life insurance industry was marked with the receipt of the cherished John Newton Russell Award for high contribution to that industry as well as President and membership for 65 consecutive years in the Million Dollar Roundtable organization. He was also president of the Association of Advanced Life Underwriting and the author of many articles and four books widely used in the life insurance industry. He was the founder of the John O. Todd Organization, a nationally known executive benefits firm specializing in insured non-qualified programs. He was a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity. He was predeceased by his beloved wife, Katherine Cone Todd also the class of '24.

W453 William Gardner Hale

Cornell Studies in Classical Philology. One of the ways in which Cornell has been gradually winning the recognition and respect of the learned world is through the series of publications called the "Cornell Studies in Classical Philology." The publication of these monographs was begun in 1887, under the editorship of Professors Isaac Flag, William Gardner Hale, and Benjamin Ide Wheeler. Since that date the following numbers have been issued : 1. William G. Hale. The CUM-Constructions : their history and functions. Part i. Critical, 1887. Part ii. Constructive, 1889, pp. x, 263. Out of print.
From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 2, No. 8, 16 Nov 1899, p. 61.

Biographical Notes. William Gardner Hale (1849-1928) was a noted classical scholar and professor of Latin at the University of Chicago, best known for his work on the poet Catullus and Latin grammar. Hale was born to a New England family in Savannah, Georgia in 1849. He earned his undergraduate degree at Harvard in 1870 and continued his philosophical education there and in Leipzig and Göttingen, Germany. He taught Latin at Cornell from 1880-1892, and then at the University of Chicago from 1892-1919, upon being recruited by President William Rainey Harper. Hale held the Latin Department Chair from 1894-1899. He was also one of the founders and, for a time, was director (1895-1896) of the American School of Classical Studies at Rome, now the American Academy at Rome. Hale published many articles and texts on the syntax of Latin but made his life's work the publication of the Catullus Manuscript which he, himself, found in the Vatican. He was also highly involved in developing the pedagogy of Latin, producing two textbooks: Latin Grammar (in collaboration with Carl Darling Buck, 1903), and A First Latin Book (1907). He was highly involved in the Joint Committee on Grammatical Nomenclature, which sought to standardize how Latin grammar was taught in North America and Western Europe. Hale sat on the advisory board of the Loeb Classical Library, which produced translations of classical Greek and Latin texts for a broader, non-academic audience. He was also editor of the journal Classical Review 1885-1907 and became editor of The Classical Quarterly in 1914. William Gardner Hale was in Europe when Germany invaded Belgium in 1914, cabling in an article to the New York Times in which he called for decisive action against Germany. He advocated a multi-lateral approach to the conflict, arguing that the United States should fight with the Allies on the basis that Germany had broken international law. In May 1916, Hale agreed to serve as an honorary vice president of the American Rights Committee during its Carnegie Hall memorial protest of the Lusitania sinking by a German Navy U-Boat. He donated money to various wartime causes, and corresponded with other intellectuals in Europe and the United States about the war. He was also a member of the New England Anti-Imperialist League, an organization that opposed the American annexation of the Philippines on the basis that it violated the credo of republicanism. In 1883, Hale married Harriet Knowles Swinburne (1853-1928) of Newport, Rhode Island, a graduate of Vassar College and a proponent of women's suffrage. Though William and Harriet owned a home in Hyde Park, they also retained a summer home, Aguiden Lodge, in Kineo, Maine and spent a great amount of time on the East Coast. The Hale family was listed in the Social Register and Who's Who in America, the directories of names and addresses of prominent American families who formed the country's social elite. William and Harriet had four children together, all of whom pursued creative endeavors: Swinburne, Margaret, Virginia and Gardner. Swinburne Hale (1884-1937) graduated from Harvard and became a lawyer and socialist activist. He was involved in the Committee of Forty Eight's Chicago convention, in which they tried to set up a major third party in American politics. He was also an aspiring poet, publishing The Demon's Notebook in 1923. He was married for ten years to Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, the stage actress turned feminist author and suffragist, then later, to the heiress Marie Tudor Garland, whom he divorced in 1924. Margaret Hale worked as the business manager for her artist husband, the printmaker Ralph M. Pearson, in New Mexico, with whom she launched a line of greeting cards based on his prints. Their third child, Virginia Hale (1887-1981), became an oil painter in California. The Hales' youngest son, Gardner Hale (1900-1932), became a well-known mural painter and interior designer on the West coast, reviving the fresco technique in the United States. He was married to the socialite and aspiring actress Dorothy (Donovan) Hale. William Gardner Hale eventually retired to Stamford, Connecticut in 1920, where he died in 1928. The Hales' home on Kimbark Avenue at 58th Street became the Graduate Club, while the second location of their home, 5727 S. University Avenue later became the Department of Music Building and the Statistics-Mathematics Building.

W453 John Carew Rolfe

Literary Review. A New Study of Cicero. Cicero and His Influence, by John Carew Rolfe, A.M. '84, Ph.D. '85, Professor of the Latin Language and Literature, University of Pennsylvania. Boston. Marshall Jones Company. 1923. 19.6 cm., pp. viii, 178. Our Debt to Greece and Rome 10A. The series of which this forms a part is a most commendable enterprise, under the guidance of Professor George D. Hadzsits of the University of Pennsylvania and David M. Robinson of Johns Hopkins. There are to be fifty volumes in which the whole matter of our modern debt to the ancient civilizations of Greece and Rome will be discussed. Professor Zimmern is to handle the Greek historians, Professor Walter W. Hyde '93, of the University of Pennsylvania, Greek religion, and Professor Lane Cooper, Aristotle's Poetics. Professor Rolfe has been one of the first to arrive at publication with his study of Cicero. He excludes a treatment of Cicero's philosophy, which is to be the work of Professor Nelson G. McCrea, of Columbia. It should also be noted that the enterprise is made possible by the philanthropy of some forty-odd contributors to the endowment fund, who deserve the thanks of all interested in the perpetuation of the best culture. Dr. Rolfe has produced an excellent volume. He is not a servile admirer of Cicero, nor on the other hand does he underestimate the value of Cicero's service to the world. He writes in an easy and elegant style, as befits one who has learned of the great Roman, and he gives evidence of a due sense of proportion. Cicero has been the subject of more extravagant praise and of more unjust censure, thinks Professor Rolfe, than any other historical personage. The philhellenes of the Renaissance sought to increase the glory of Greek authors by belittling Cicero. Mommsen, a strong partisan of monarchism, exalted Caesar as a representative of that spirit and slandered Cicero. A New York Times writer calls him "an everlasting word-monger, letterwriter, and self-praiser." On the other hand Dante, Petrarch, Luther, Erasmus, Ascham, Locke, Hume, Voltaire, Montesquieu, and Sainte-Beuve are among the many who have testified to the greatness of the Roman orator and thinker, and the enduring character of his influence on modern life and thought. The Renaissance was from one point of view a rebellion against the servility and humility of spirit which in the Middle Ages revered authority and bowed to king and pope. The Reformation was this same spirit expressing itself in the world of religion. It was natural that Cicero should be venerated and studied by the exponents of this new attitude. He was individualistic in his thinking, and "when properly understood he taught men to make their literary style the expression of their own personality." Of course the pendulum swung too far, and the rise of a slavish Ciceronianism testified to a lack of judgment on the part of too many of his admirers. But this extreme had its corrective in the vigorous writings of Erasmus, Muretus and Sidney. Modern liberals owe much to Cicero. He was largely responsible for the transmission of the Stoic ethics to the Church fathers. From stout-hearted Pelagius to Voltaire and Channing the liberals of nearly every Christian generation have cause to be grateful to the memory of one who did his own thinking, who, without belief in the gods of his time and country, was nevertheless devoutly religious, who exalted honesty, chastity, and temperance, and who was not afraid to enlist in the service of liberty even when he knew that such service would lead to death and perhaps to a long period of obloquy.

John Carew Rolfe, Ph.D. (1859, Newburyport, Massachusetts – 1943) was an American classical scholar, the son of William J. Rolfe. He graduated from Harvard University in 1881 and from Cornell University (Ph.D.) in 1885. He taught at Cornell (1882–1885), at Harvard (1889–1890), at the University of Michigan, and at the University of Pennsylvania. He was professor in 1907 - 1908 at the American School of Classical Studies and at the American Academy in Rome from 1923-1924. He continued to serve at the Academy until 1940. In 1910 - 1911, he was president of the American Philological Association. He translated many Latin authors, especially historians, for the Loeb Classical Library: Ammianus Marcellinus, Cornelius Nepos, Aulus Gellius, Quintus Curtius, Sallust, and Suetonius.

W453 Horatio Stevens White

Obituary. PROFESSOR HORATIO STEVENS WHITE, for twenty-five years a member of the University Faculty, died at the age of 82 December 12, 1934, at his home in Cambridge, Mass, after a brief illness. Professor White was born in Syracuse, April 23, 1851. He was graduated from Harvard in 1873 and received his LL.D. in 1901 from Glasgow University. He came to Cornell in 1876 as assistant professor of Greek and Latin, and the next year, during the absence of Professor Waterman T. Hewett in Europe, White took over also a large part of the instruction in German. He was admitted to the Bar in 1878. In 1879, owing to the continued ill health of Professor Willard Fiske, White was elected assistant professor of German which post he held until the establishment in 1883 of two professorships in German, to one of which he was elected, to remain until his resignation in June, 1902, when he returned to Harvard as professor of German. In 1919 he was made emeritus professor at Harvard. He was acting curator of the Germanic Museum there in 1908-09 and in 1926. Professor White's untiring energy and outstanding administrative ability won him the post of dean of the general Faculty in 1888, in which position he continued until 1896, when he became dean of the University Faculty and continued as such until he left the University. He was greatly interested in athletics, and was one of the incorporators in 1889 of the Cornell University Athletic Association, and baseball advisor on the Athletic Council for several years. He was the editor of several German texts and of Fiske's Chess Tales and Chess Miscellanies, of Memorials of Willard Fiske, and of Willard Fiske—A Biographical Study, published in 1925. He was a member of the Modern Language Association of America, of Phi Beta Kappa, and of Psi Upsilon, and an honorary member of the Goethe Society. On June 14, 1883, Professor White married Fanny Clary Scott of Syracuse, who died last April. He is survived by his son Joseph L. White '05, of Montclair, N. J., and a sister, Miss Mabel White of Boston. A daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Day, died last January.

W453 Thomas Frederick Crane

Professor Crane Dies. A Long and Distinguished Career Brought to a Close—Twice Acting President Thomas Frederick Crane, professor emeritus of Romance languages and literatures in Cornell and for more than forty years an active member of the Faculty, died on December 9 at DeLand, Fla., whither he had gone with his sister, Mrs. Katherine C. McMahon, a few weeks ago, intending to spend the winter in the South. He was eighty-three years old, and had been in failing health for several months, but was for a time apparently better than when he left Ithaca. He was the last member of the original Faculty. He was born in New York on July 12, 1844, and was graduated from Princeton at the age of twenty. His alma mater honored him and herself by granting him an A.M. in 1867, an honorary Ph.D. in 1883, and a L.H.D. in 1903. He at first studied law and settled in Ithaca for the practice of this profession; but his love of letters attracted the notice of President White, who called him to be assistant professor of Spanish and German in the original Faculty. In 1873 he was made professor of Italian and Spanish and in 1881 his title was changed to professor of Romance languages and literatures. He was made professor emeritus in 1909. In the same year and also in 1912-13 he officiated as acting president of the University. He was dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences from 1896 to 1902 and of the University Faculty, 1902 to 1909. He was a member of the Finnish Society of Letters, the American Philosophical Society, the Modern Language Association of America, the Royal Academy of Sciences and Arts of Palermo, Kappa Alpha, Phi Beta Kappa, and the Century Club of New York. Professor Crane was one of the most productive of Cornell scholars. Besides a vast number of articles and reviews he wrote "Italian Social Customs of the Sixteenth Century" and edited the "Exempla" of Jacques de Vitry, "Tableaux de la Revolution Francaise," "Le Romantisme Francais"; "La Societe Francaise au 17me Siecle"; "Chansons Populaire de la France"; Boileau's "Les Heros de Roman"; Rotrou's "Saint Genest" and "Venceslaus" and "Italian Popular Tales." He was one of the world's leading folk orists, and his knowledge of comparative storyology was extraordinarily broad and exact. In addition to his devotion to his chosen field of study, he took the most active interest in the history and traditions of the University and in its development, and was much in demand as a speaker at all sorts of University functions. Several of his addresses, made on occasions of scholastic import, have been published. Among them are his dedication speech at the unveiling of the statue of Ezra Cornell, on the quadrangle on June 22, 1919, and addresses at the semi-centennial celebration of the College of Architecture, the Rochester meeting of Phi Beta Kappa in 1912, and the dedication of Professor Tarr's memorial window in Sage Chapel in 1913. At the alumni reunions of many years he took the platform, often making several addresses during the same evening, for such rallies were not considered complete without words of welcome from the friend of so many classes. At the time of his eightieth birthday, Dean Crane recalled part of his dedication speech at the unveiling of the Tarr memorial. The words are these: "A few years ago I accompanied Andrew D. White to Friedrichsruhe to visit the tomb of Prince Bismarck. As I stood before the great granite sarcophagus of the German statesman, I read with emotion the simple inscription: 'Ein treuer Diener seiner Majestat.' When, in my turn, I take my place—a mere memory— among my friends upon these walls, I can conceive of no nobler eulogy, if its significance be rightly understood, than the thought of the epitaph of the Iron Chancellor, which might also be inscribed with truth upon this memorial window, 'A faithful servant of the University.'" Dean Crane often spoke of having seen Cornell grow out of its swaddling clothes into one of the leading institutions of the country. Incidentally, he liked to remark on one of the symbols of this growth—that of the Campus shade trees. He knew the Campus when it was but a barren hill top and had seen the trees set out. He had been almost equally interested in the growth and development of Ithaca and its institutions and gave many years of unselfish effort to the Memorial Hospital. He was president of Board of Trustees from 1914 to 1919. On July 10, 1872, Professor Crane married Sarah Fay Tourtelot of Ithaca, who died August 21, 1912. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Guy B. Muchmore of Cayuga Heights Road; two grandchildren; and his sister, now the widow of the late Professor James McMahon.

Thomas Frederick Crane Professor of Romance Languages and Literatures 1844 — Dec. 9, 1927 Dean Crane is gone. No other held among us so unique a place. Not only at eighty-three was he the last survivor of the notable group of teachers who nearly sixty years ago formed the original Faculty of Cornell, but as had none of his colleagues he had personally known the Founder and his advisers and shared their plans. A student of law in the office of Ezra Cornell's closest friend and legal adviser, he had been at hand for help in the new institution's emergencies. Thus there fell to him large part in its first entrance examinations; and when its professor of German was delayed in Europe he found himself drafted into his place. But his tastes and ambitions were always those of the scholar, and except for the period spent abroad in the completion of his studies he never turned from the career thus thrust upon him. The chair of which he dreamed, devoted wholly to Spanish, was indeed never his, but as Professor of Spanish and Italian, as head of the department of the Romance Languages, as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences (1896-1902), as Dean of the University Faculty (1902-1909) he passed through all ranks of academic preferment, and twice (1899-1900 and 1912-13) he for a year as President of the University. But his activity was never exhausted by class room or administrative office. Gifted with a pen of singular grace and charm, he was a frequent and welcomed writer for both the learned and the general magazines, and volume after volume he gave to the press. From the first his interest was less in language than in literature and in the living sources from which literature flows. Even before, in 1885, he published his first book, his Italian Popular Tales had given to the world the study which pointed out the importance for the beginnings of modern literature of the exempla, or illustrative stories used by the medieval preachers; and when in 1890 he followed this with his edition of those of the great crusading orator Jacques de Vitry, his reputation as a folklorist was established on both sides of the sea. Already his work had lost all touch of the dilettante. His narrow income was strained for the building up of his remarkable private library, and his slip catalogue of folk-tales became a resource for scholars the world around. In later volumes he exploited the mine thus opened; but these by no means checked the breadth of his reading or set a limit for his exuberant pen. This still found tireless vent in essay and review, edition and textbook, even now and then in a venture into fiction and it is matter for lasting gratitude that his latest volume (1925) could include, from his own hand, a bibliography of his rich output. But this career of bookworm and writer meant never for him neglect of social gifts. Of society he was always a lover as well as a student, and from his early manhood he shone both in conversation and as an after-dinner speaker. Yet few who knew him, sensitive and of delicate health, in his earlier years as a teacher, could have guessed how as Dean he was to become the very centre of student life, accessible and beloved, interested in every student activity and a speaker at all student gatherings. The university, too, now found him its happiest mouthpiece for all public occasions, its most attractive deputy for errands abroad. His addresses on memorial occasions will remain to it an especial treasure. Nor is its debt to him small for material gifts. Again and again he enriched the university library with precious collections and his last act among us was to bestow on it the note-books and memoranda of his lifetime's study. Nor were his interests ever narrowly academic. Though not a native of Ithaca, much of his childhood was spent here, here he fitted himself for college, and his love for the town and its people was deep and sincere. To church and school, to charities and hospital, he gave almost too generously of his means and of himself; and to the wider claims of country and mankind his ear was never deaf. Beneath all this wealth of service, this exuberance of self-expression, there lay, too, a character deep and earnest. The lightness of his touch was never permitted to belie his reverent convictions or his high sense of what became the gentleman. We shall miss the scholar and the courtly wit; but our deepest sorrow is to lose the man.

Thomas Frederick Crane (July 12, 1844 in New York - December 10, 1927) was an American folklorist, academic and lawyer. He studied law at Princeton, earned his undergraduate degree in 1864, and in 1867 graduated with an A.M. After graduation, he studied law at Columbia Law School but moved to Ithaca when a relative there became ill. He was admitted to the bar worked as a lawyer in the community and as a librarian for new founded Cornell University. He went on to become a student of languages, and was offered a faculty position by President A.D. White and taught French, Italian, Spanish, and medieval literature. He was among the founders of the Journal of American Folklore. He also served as the first Dean of the Arts College and later as Acting President of the University. As a young faculty member, he became one of the first members of the Cornell Chapter of The Kappa Alpha Society. Today, he is remembered in Cornell's fight song, "Give My Regards to Davy", whose lyrics begin "Give my regards to Davy/Remember me to Tee Fee Crane. "Tee Fee Crane" was a nickname given to Crane by students.

Class Notes. Insulin Pioneer. Treatment of diabetes has come a long way from the first experimental injections of insulin (extracted from the pancreas of sheep) that brought Ted Ryder back from death's door. And he's come a long way, too, from the desperately ill boy who at age 5 weighed a mere 26 pounds, to become recognized as the person who has been on insulin treatment longer (since 1922) than anyone in the world. Today he enjoys good health as a retired librarian, cartographer, and book seller living in Farmington, Connecticut. In addition to a mother who insisted on pursuing every possible treatment that might help her son, Ted Ryder (a third-generation Cornellian) is grateful for the help of two fellow-alumni, among others. It was the persistent urging on his behalf of an uncle, Dr. Morton Ryder '15, MD '18, then an intern in New York City, which led to the boy's acceptance for the then-experimental treatment in Canada. And, as an article about Ryder's case in the Alumni Quarterly of the Cornell University Medical College (CUMC) explained, "Undoubtedly much of the credit for his continued health must go to another CUMC graduate and friend of his uncle, Maurice "Tim" Root '15, MD '18, who was Ryder's physician for more than 50 years." So Ted Ryder at 72 is a role model. And he is especially proud, he told a reporter for the Hartford Courant last spring, that diabetes is no longer the feared killer it once was and that he has had some part in showing that persons who have it can lead long and useful lives.

He Was Last Living Link to Discovery of Insulin. A chapter in Canadian medical history ended quietly last month in Connecticut. On March 8, Theodore Ryder died in his sleep from heart failure at age 76. Ryder was an insulin-dependent diabetic, but no ordinary insulin user. He had been taking insulin since July 15, 1922, longer than any person alive. He was given his first injections here in Toronto by Dr. Frederick Banting, when Banting was in charge of trials of the great medical breakthrough he and his co-workers had just announced. Ted Ryder was one of the first dozen humans to receive insulin, and the last of the original patients to die. Ryder was born in New Jersey in 1916. At age 4, he began to show the symptoms of severe juvenile diabetes – excessive urination, insatiable thirst and hunger, rapid weight loss. The diagnosis was a like a death sentence, for the only "treatment" for diabetes was to force patients to eat sparingly. Their bodies had lost the ability to metabolize food properly, so they should only eat the small quantities they could metabolize. At best, these “undernutrition” diets allowed diabetics to prolong their life for a year or two while they slowly starved to death. In the spring of 1922, Ryder’s family heard about the discovery of insulin at the University of Toronto by a team of researchers led by Banting and Professor J. J. R. Macleod. A physician-uncle came to Toronto and pleaded with Banting to accept the child for treatment. Insulin was in desperately short supply. Banting said to wait three months. “Doctor, he won’t be alive by then,” Ryder’s uncle said. Banting relented. Ted Ryder was a 5-year-old, 27-pound human skeleton when Banting began giving him insulin. Within a few months, he had come back to life and apparent good health, a beautiful example of what even medical personnel were calling the “miracles” wrought by insulin. In 1923, the Toronto researchers received a Nobel prize, Canada’s first, for the discovery of insulin. Banting and Macleod divided their prize money with the other members of their team, Charles Best and J. B. Collip. The interplay between the researchers (they literally came to blows in the lab and squabbled for decades about credit for the discovery), was one of the main themes of my 1982 book, The Discovery of Insulin. But I had also paid attention to the impact of insulin on diabetic patients and had heavily emphasized the near-resurrections that the team witnessed in the magical season of 1922. I thought that the last of the patients had died, for even today the life span of insulin-using diabetics is well below normal. I had seen little Ted Ryder’s Toronto file, but didn’t have occasion to mention him in my book. In 1983, after giving a talk on the discovery of insulin to a medical history club at Yale, I was approached by a physician who told me of an old man in Hartford who claimed he first got insulin from Banting, name of Ryder... It turned out that Ted Ryder had had a long and satisfying life, faithfully using insulin and a healthy diet to control his diabetes. He had been a librarian and a world traveller and had suffered none of the serious side effects of diabetes that still plague many insulin-takers. When I met him in 1983, he was 67 and just settling in to a retirement home near Hartford. One clue to his remarkable longevity lay in the fact that I also met his mother, age 92. The Ryders were what we used to call New England puritan stock. The Star did a story about my rediscovery of Ted Ryder, and for the next decade he enjoyed a kind of medical celebrity status as the world’s senior insulin user. The American Diabetes Association gave him a special medal and made a coloring book about him, Teddy Ryder Rides Again. We had a memorable day at the U.S. National Institutes of Health when Ted met the new generation of diabetes researchers, reminisced about his life, and gave autographs. And it was truly memorable when Ted came to the University Toronto in October, 1990, for the unveiling of a historical display about the discovery of insulin. It featured his own “before” and “after” pictures, and there he was in the flesh. I last saw Ted when he and his girl friend (he had been a bachelor all his life, a bit under his mother’s thumb, but had a wonderful late-life romance after she died) came to Toronto on that visit. Every few months after that, we would talk on the phone. It felt like I was literally calling up history. Ted suffered congestive heart failure last summer and gradually wound down. He had never lost his affection for the city where, as a child, he had been saved by the Canadian doctors. In the last note I got from Ted, he said he had been cheering for the Blue Jays in the World Series. The last of the discoverers of insulin, Charles Best, died in 1978. Ted Ryder, the last patient, outlived all the physicians. We have lost our last living link with the great events of 1922 in Toronto. But the discovery itself lives on daily, in about 10 million diabetics around the world.

Ryder. Theodore Ryder, 76, of the Gables, Farmington, died Tuesday (March 9). He was born in Carmel, N.Y., and was a longtime resident of West Hartford. He attended West Hartford and Kingswood schools, and Trinity College before receiving his Bachelor’s degree at Cornell University. He later received advanced degrees at the University of Delaware and Pratt Institute Library School. He worked for many years as a librarian for the New York Public Library, the American Geographic Society, Cornell University, and Trinity University, San Antonio, Texas. His special interests included travel, birds, stamp collecting, politics, and geography. A lifetime diabetic, he had the distinction of being the longest surviving of the original group of patients who were administered experimental insulin by Dr. Frederick Banting in Toronto, Canada in 1922. He is survived by his sister, Margaret (Ryder) Shadford of Randolph Center, Vt.; a niece, Anne Pritchard of Randolph Center, Vt.; two nephews, Jonathan Shadford, and Stephen Shadford, both of Collinsville; four grand-nieces and grandnephews; and a dear friend, Joan Hamill of Farmington. Funeral service will be Saturday, 1 p.m., in the chapel of the First Church of Christ Congregational, 12 S. Main St., West Hartford. There are no calling hours. In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the American Diabetes Association, Connecticut Affiliate, 300 Research Parkway, Meriden 06450. Taylor & Modeen Funeral Home, West Hartford, has charge of arrangements.

Communications. Gay Alumni. Editor: Several gay alumni are interested in starting an organization for gay Cornell University alumni. We want to hear from gay alumni all over the country who would be interested in getting to know other gay Cornellians. We hope to hold get-acquainted parties around the country, and to provide a way for gay Cornellians to get in touch with others in their area. Long-range goals include support for the on-campus Gay Liberation Front and special events for gay alumni in connection with class reunion in Ithaca. Interested gay alumni of Cornell University are invited to write to one of the following: Art Leonard '74, P.O. Box 1899, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017; and Mark Schwartz

Communications. Not Proud of Gays. Editor: In the December issue you published a letter entitled, "Gay Alumni." I find this letter most offensive and I feel that the writers are no credit to Cornell. I also feel that the editor used extremely poor judgment in printing it. Several months ago you published a long article on the use of dope at Cornell. The university is always urging alumni to give to help support its activities. These articles are not helpful in asking for financial support. I have always been proud to say I was a graduate of Cornell but lately I have had some doubts about it. If I had a son now of college age I would think twice before sending him to Cornell. It is also possible that the Alumni News needs a shakeup in its editorial staff or whoever selects the articles. W460 John Townsend

The Townsend Family. Elijah Townsend, the father of John Townsend, emigrated from Putnam County, New York (the Dutchess County), to Seneca County, New York, in the year 1800, and settled on the old homestead. His wife, Martha, and six children came with him. The trip, made with a lumber-wagon and horses, through an unbroken forest, consumed seventeen days. The time between the places now is twelve hours. He landed here on the 12th of November, surrounded by the primeval forest. Deer and bears were plentiful, and supplied his table with provision for several years. He lived to see the country in which he settled cleared of its timber and become beautiful, cultivated fields. The house and barn he built are still the same as he left them, with the exception of necessary repairs. He raised a family of eleven children, five boys and six girls. He was born February 8, 1767, and died March 17, 1862, in the ninety-sixth year of his age. He rests in the cemetery a few rods north of his old home, once a part of his own farm. John Townsend, named after his grandfather, John Townsend (who is buried beside his son Elijah), was born May 18, 1810. He is the youngest of the family. He still resides on the old homestead, in the house in which he was born. His father having lost his farm by the dishonesty of the managers of the Lodi Bank, in which he held stock thirty-five years ago, it became his (John Townsend's) duty to redeem it from the Sheriff's hands. He married Emeline Meeker in 1835, and has a family of nine children, four boys and five girls. Their respective names are as follows: Martha, Elizabeth, Lewis M., Elijah, Sarah M., deceased; Helen, Robert H., J. Meeker, M.D.; and Ida. He and his wife are still living, and enjoying excellent health. Their children are all alive, with one exception. The family and their ancestors have always been a very healthy race; the grandfather on the mother's side (Lewis Meeker) died in his ninety-second year.

W460 Arad Joy

Arad Joy was born at Guilford, Vermont, on April 5, 1790, the son of David and Hannah Partridge Joy. His father was a farmer, a soldier in the Revolution and removed to Fabius, Onondaga Co., in 1800. In 1814, Arad Joy was married to Miss Catherine Fisher, who was born at Pompton, New Jersey on March 25, 1791, and the couple had five children., viz: Arad Thaddeus Joy born on September 12, 1815 and died on September 17, 1834, on the fifth day after his return from a trip through the Missouri Territory, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, and an absence of ten weeks; Horatio N. Joy, M.D., born on March 27, 1819, married Miss Frances Greenough, studied medicine and became a physician and later a photographer in this village where he died on June 24, 1868; Henry L. Joy, M.D. born on June 24, 1822, and removed to Marshall, Michigan, where he was a physician until his death on June 21, 1892; Charles Arad Joy born on October 8, 1823, who became Professor of Chemistry at Union College and then at Columbia College, died on May 28, 1891; and Cornelia C. Joy who married Rev. Dr. Dyer of Philadelphia on February 6, 1850. On January 7, 1811, Arad Joy located in the Town of Lansing where he conducted a store in Ludlowville, employing his younger brother, Benjamin Joy as clerk. In the War of 1812 he acted as Paymaster in the Regiment of Col. Henry Bloom and witnessed the battle of Queenstown. Upon the formation of the Chautauque County Bank at Jamestown in April, 1831, Mr. Joy removed thither, but within six months he became so disgusted with the management and conditions at the bank that he resigned, and in leaving shook off the dust of that town from his shoes forever. In 1832, he removed his family from Ludlowville to Ovid Village where he became a prominent merchant, pension agent and financier, and where he spent the remainder of his life. Arad Joy was cashier of the Farmers Bank of Ovid when it received its charter on October 16, 1838, served for many years on the Board of Trustees of the Ovid Academy, early associated himself with the Presbyterian Church in this village, and was a member of the Board of Trustees of the New York State Agricultural College at Ovid, as well as being treasurer of that institution. His long and active life closed in this village on April 16, 1872, and that of his wife a few weeks later, on May 18, 1872.

W461 Simon Henry Gage

Professor Gage '77 Dies. Professor Simon Henry Gage. '77, Histology and Embryology, Emeritus, oldest member of the Faculty in both age and years of service, died October 20, 1944, at his home in Interlaken. As student, teacher, and research scientist, he had been continuously associated with Cornell for seventy-one years. Born May 20, 1851, near Worcester, Otsego County, Gage entered the Natural History Course in 1873, with money earned as an itinerant photographer. He intended to become a doctor, but Professor Burt G. Wilder, the University's first professor of Comparative Anatomy and Zoology, persuaded him to seek a career as teacher and scientist. Following his graduation in 1877 with the BS degree, Gage was appointed instructor in Microscopy and Practical Physiology. In 1881, he was advanced to assistant professor and married Susanna Phelps '80, who died in 1915. In 1889 he studied abroad, returning as associate professor of Physiology. He became associate professor of Anatomy, Histology, and Embryology in 1893, professor in 1895, and retired in 1908 as professor of Histology and Embryology, Emeritus, to undertake special investigations on a grant from the Carnegie Foundation. He was Faculty representative on the University Board of Trustees during 1921 and 1922. Professor Gage returned to active teaching in 1918-19, replacing instructors in war service, and he worked daily in his office and laboratory in Stimson Hall until a year ago, when he and the second Mrs. Gage (Clara Starrett) '18 moved to Interlaken. He had since worked in his laboratory frequently, and was stricken there October 11. An original partner, in 1894, with the late Professors John H. Comstock '74 and Anna Botsford Comstock '85 in founding the Comstock Publishing Co., Inc., Professor Gage had been president of the corporation since 1932 and a director of the University Press since its reorganization in 1930. Professor Gage wrote extensively on microscopy, anatomy, optics, and other sciences; the seventeenth edition of his pioneer work on The Microscope was published in 1941 by Comstock Publishing Co. He was a member of numerous scientific societies, was librarian of the Van Cleef Memorial Library, and was secretary of the Class of '77. With his son, Dr. H. Phelps Gage '08, he gave the Gage Research Fund of $10,000 to the Department of Physics in 1918. Among his many contributions to the field of biological research was the perfection of the ultra-violet microscope. Establishment of the annual $500 Simon Henry Gage Graduate Fellowship in Animal Biology was announced May 20, 1941, at a dinner in Willard Straight Hall honoring Professor Gage's ninetieth birthday. The Fellowship was endowed by more than 250 of his friends, colleagues, and former students.

Simon Henry Gage

of the facts. Convinced by his inquiries of the injustice of the charge, and persuaded that Cornell was the place for him, he matriculated in the fall of 1873—and for seventy-one fruitful years his place it turned out to be. Gage's enthusiastic interest in biology immediately attracted the attention of Professor Burt Green Wilder, whom he assisted throughout his undergraduate years. Upon receiving the degree of B.S. in 1877 he was appointed Instructor in Microscopy and Practical Physiology. His subsequent titles were: Assistant Professor of Physiology and Lecturer in Microscopical Technology, 1881; Associate Professor (as above), 1889; Associate Professor of Anatomy, Histology, and Embryology, 1895; Professor of Microscopy, Histology, and Embryology, 1896; Professor of Histology and Embryology, 1902. In 1896 he organized in the newly established Veterinary College an independent department of histology and embryology which in 1902 was transferred to Stimson Hall, then the new home of the Ithaca division of the Medical College. He retired from teaching in 1908 on a pension provided by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in order to devote his whole time to the research which he prosecuted with vigor and enthusiasm until his last illness. His final visit to his laboratory was made only ten days before his death. In 1893 he joined Professor Comstock in establishing the Comstock Publishing Company, which, through the bequest of Comstock and the gift of Gage, became the property of Cornell in 1931 when Professor Gage

Simon Henry Gage May 20, 1851 — October 20, 1944

Simon Henry Gage was born at Crumhorn Lake, Otsego County, New York on May 20, 1851. In a prayer meeting that he attended as a youth he first heard of Cornell University from a clergyman who urged his young listeners to have nothing to do with "that godless institution." Gage was not one to let such an indictment pass without a study became president of the company, an office he held until his death. The profits of this enterprise continue to be one of the major sources of the support of the Cornell University Press. Professor Gage was ever most generous to the university of his affections. In 1915 he and his son, Henry Phelps Gage, presented a fund in memory of his first wife, Susanna Phelps Gage, herself an able biologist. This endowment, now amounting to almost $7000, will eventually be used for a room in a new dormitory for women. Three years later they established the Susanna Phelps Gage Endowment of $10,000 for research in Physics. These larger gifts were supplemented by many others, including valuable books, sets of periodicals, and apparatus. Professor Gage was a faculty member of the University Board of Trustees. From 1923-40 he was Librarian ("Responsible Librarian," he chose to call himself) of the Van Cleef Memorial Library, now the library of the Department of Zoology. It was, indeed, Professor Gage who persuaded Mynderse Van Cleef to found this memorial to his brother, Charles Edward Van Cleef. Professor Gage was a prolific contributor to professional journals. Microscopy was perhaps his dominant interest, stemming probably from his earlier interest in photography, but he also made notable additions to our knowledge of the biology of the lamprey in a series of fundamental researches published over a period of fifty years. The Southern Brook Lamprey has been named in his honor Ichthyomyzon Gagei. His studies of the fat particles of the blood and of the rate at which fat is deposited in the tissues are also noteworthy. Of his books the most characteristic is "The Microscope," first published in 1881 and probably the most widely used American text on the subject. The seventeenth edition appeared on his ninetieth birthday in 1941. With Burt G. Wilder he was co-author of "Anatomical Technology," 1882; with B. F. Kingsbury of "Vertebrate Histology," 1899; and with his son, Henry Phelps Gage, of "Optic Projection," 1914. In 1893, he and John Henry Comstock edited "The Wilder Quarter-Century Book," said to be the first American collection of researches published in honor of a university teacher. Shortly before his death he completed a history of the Comstock Publishing Company, and he leaves the nearly completed manuscript of a history of microscopy in America, a work which is being edited for publication by his wife, Clara Starrett Gage, and his son, Henry Phelps Gage. Gage was long a member of the American Society of Zoologists, one of the original members of the American Association of Anatomists, and a member of the first board of editors of the American Journal of Anatomy, which he assisted in establishing. He was also a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and twice presided over the meetings of its Zoological Section; a member of the New York State Science Teachers Association (President, 1896), American Microscopical Society (President, 1895-96, 1906), American Society of Naturalists, Royal Society of Arts, Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, American Fisheries Society, Optical Society of America, and the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. He was a man whom his students and colleagues delighted to honor. At his sixty-fifth birthday dinner there was announced the establishment of a fund in support of the Simon Henry Gage Fellowship in Animal Biology. By his ninetieth birthday this had reached the sum of $10,000 and the first fellow was then appointed. His seventy-fifth birthday was observed by a dinner given in his honor by the American Association of Anatomists in New Haven, and his eightieth by a dinner given in Philadelphia by the Advisory Board of the Wistar Institute of Anatomy, of which he had been a member since its organization in 1905; and on this occasion he was presented with a copy of volume 48 of the American Journal of Anatomy, which was dedicated to him. But no mere statement of the positions he occupied, or of the honors accorded him can convey the true qualities of the man; to know these was the high privilege only of those who worked near and with him. He was a lover of life, and with him life and work meant the same thing. He had an infectious enthusiasm for work which age never affected. To the end he lived in the future; no one was ever readier to discard the outworn or outmoded, to adopt what was new if it were better than the old. In the classroom and out he was a great teacher, for his whole life was a pattern that provoked emulation, exemplifying as it did the best traditions of the profession. His laboratory was a magnet that drew a constant stream of inquirers and of those who felt the need of refreshment and inspiration. His sincere and youthful enthusiasm, his fresh and forward-looking point of view, his fine sense of humor, his hearty, refreshing laugh, and his kindly interest in men and their problems struck a responsive chord in all with whom he came in contact. His many friends and this University that he loved so well and served so long and devotedly are the richer for his life; as with all great teachers, his influence will continue to be felt for generations.

W462 Frederick T. Deming

Frederick T. Deming – Nineteenth. Frederick T. Deming was one of that rare type of men who maintain marvelous composure, gentle and lovable manners during a life contest in the industrial and political world. Although prominent in business circles he resisted all influences that generally disturbed his neighbors and competitors. He was thoroughly judicial in his temperament. He was ever ready to perform private or public duties. His name was a synonym of honesty and justice. But honesty was not a rare quality in the public men of his generation, nor in the mercantile centers in which he moved. It was his combination of attributes that elevated him to a standard which all men admired. Mr. Deming was the son of Justus Deming, a Berkshire County, Massachusetts, farmer. Both father and son, perhaps, were natives of Connecticut. That is all that we can learn of his antecedents. It accords with the iron logic of his modest personality! He left no further information of his family. His estimate of men was based entirely upon personal, not ancestral, merit; an indication that his own parentage was of modest historical surroundings. In this characteristic Mr. Deming was notable, considering his own prominence as man, merchant and public official. In his early life he learned the trade of cabinet making with a Mr. Wells, in Newark Valley, Tioga County, N. Y. He must have been still young when he accompanied Mr. Wells to Ithaca. A deed was given by David Woodcock to Frederick Deming and a partner in 1817 for a piece of land, 50 by 60 feet, next to the Fall Creek bridge and west of a saw mill, for $600. It was recorded in Book B in 1818 and recited that Ithaca was in the town of Ulysses in the County of Seneca. He was then 21 years old. The record says that he was to establish an oil mill near the bridge. He owned a cabinet shop on the Cascadilla Creek above the Williams (now the Campbell) mill at Linn street. His speculations until late in his life were successful and he saved many thousands of dollars. His declining years were passed in comfort and happiness. His principal occupation was in manufacturing and dealing in furniture. His store and shops were destroyed by fire in the forties. He erected a brick building upon the old site and leased it. Murray E. Poole now owns it and Osborn & Co. occupy it. It is part of the Deming block and contains the Deming Hall. Mr. Deming, later, conducted the furniture business in the present Wolcott & Barton store, No. 107 West State street. How natural that Frederick T. Deming whose character and personality were so like those of Captain John Holman should be chosen for public honors. But unlike Captain Holman Mr. Deming was an earnest and interested partisan. His alliance with the Whigs was a disappointment to his Democratic friends. He became one of a group of fifty men whose presence at party caucuses and meetings gave the Whigs high standing and prestige and many exciting victories over Democrats whose leadership gave Ithaca envied fame and influence in Albany and in Washington. In 1841-5-6-9 Mr. Deming was elected on general tickets, for which every citizen might vote, a trustee of the village. In 1849, he was chosen president by his Whig colleagues Philip J. Partenheimer, Josiah B. Williams, John L. Whiton, Samuel Stoddard and Anson Spencer; and Nathan T. Williams, the only Democrat in the Board. This tribute to Mr. Deming can be expressed with greater effect by naming Democrats who were defeated at that charter election: John H. Selkreg, Henry W. Sage, Lewis H. Culver, William R. Humphrey and Peter Apgar. Mr. Deming was a charter member of the first fire company in Ithaca. He had served as a private citizen on a committee to purchase additional land for the village cemetery. He had been active in public and private affairs that in any way tended toward developing the industrial and commercial interests of the village. A few weeks after he had been elected president of the village he was elected supervisor of the village and town and held the two positions at the same time. He was elected supervisor again in 1851. Radical measures were adopted by the Board of Trustees in 1850, under new laws passed by the legislature of that year, to prevent a return of the cholera scourage of 1849. Mr. Deming was appointed a member of the Board of Health and succeeded in enforcing stringent sanitary rules in the village, with Jacob M. McCormick, his colleague. During Mr. Deming's administration as president of the village a plank sidewalk was ordered to be laid at the expense of owners of property on the west side of Lake avenue from Cayuga street to the steamboat landing. The Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R. Co., by its secretary William R. Humphrey, offered to furnish the plank for a plank road 8 feet wide from the South Hill depot to the steamboat landing if the village would lay it, the company having been granted the right to cross State or any other street in the village that the company might choose. The offer was accepted by the Board of Trustees. Plain street was opened from Buffalo to Cascadilla street. Mill street was opened from Albany street to Plain street. H. W. Sage was granted permission to "dig a ditch to lay pipe to bring a pure supply of water to the village." The planking of State street was finished and fast driving on the new plank road was made punishable by a fine of $10. Citizens were requested by an ordinance to not split or saw wood on State street sidewalks. The request went unheeded for five months and the Board passed an ordinance making such sawing and splitting of wood on said street sidewalks punishable by fine or imprisonment. The health officer was paid $80, and "each member of the Board of Health $40 for faithful and efficient service during the cholera" of that year. The Board of Trustees also passed a resolution of thanks to the Board of Health. The expenses of the administration were large during 1849 and notes were given by the Board to its creditors for the amounts due to them. At the final session of the Board in 1850 it adopted a resolution of thanks to President Deming for his wise and considerate manner of presiding over the Board and for his excellent work as president of the village. Mr. Deming was tall and attractive in physique. His face was serious and benevolent in expression. His manner of speech and action was deliberate. His opinions were uttered only after reflection and carried weight among men who knew him. Mr. Deming was an Odd Fellow of distinction and a member of the Ithaca Lodge. His residence was on East Green street. He was never married. He died in 1877, aged 81 years, and received the respect and consideration justly due from his surviving contemporaries. Among the sincerest mourners around his bier were men who had been in his employment in their earlier years; a beautiful tribute to his generous and intelligent nature.

John C. Taylor. Life must have been wonderfully satisfying to John C. Taylor, who died Monday at the age of 80. He was deeply interested in a thousand and one things and out of them carved not only a successful and busy career, but also hobbies that gave him pleasure during his leisure moments. Mr. Taylor was a genius in the farming field, having come out of Cornell University as a graduate with a knowledge that was to aid him in building up one of the best farms in Niagara County. He accomplished many useful things on his farm, and lived these many years to enjoy the fruits of his achievements. He was perhaps one of the most ardent billiard player enthusiasts in Lockport where he displayed his ability on many occasions at the Tuscarora Club, of which he was a member. He won several club championships with his cue and was looked upon in other cities of Western New York as a perfectionist in the game of billiards. In politics Mr. Taylor was a Democrat and served for many years on the Niagara County Board of Supervisors in looking after the interests of the Town of Hartland. He, too, was the board chairman, an honor given him not only by his Democratic but Republican friends as well. Both parties held Mr. Taylor in high esteem. His career was one to be envied.

Apr. 24, 1927. Mr. R. E. Treman, Ithaca, N.Y. Dear Sir:— We very much regret that it will be quite impossible for Mr. Ross to contribute anything toward the War Memorial at present. He had an attack of “sleeping sickness” six years ago, and is now unable to do any sort of work, so that it is hard to even to make ends meet, and educate our three children. Mr. Ross has the deepest interest in Cornell and all its concerns, and we both hope that some of these days he may be able to do his share. Very sincerely yours, Edith H. Ross (Mrs. Wm A.).

W485 David William Cheney

Alumni Notes. '22 DVM—Announcement was recently made of the engagement of Dr. David W. Cheney of Potsdam, N. Y., to Miss Mary E. Coe of Elmira, N. Y. The wedding will take place in June.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 26, No. 31, 8 May 1924, pp. 403-404.

Cheney Happy on 25-Year Practice; Looks A head with Keen Anticipation. Dr. David W. Cheney looks back happily on 25 years as a veterinarian in Bath, but he looks forward, too, with keen anticipation to many more years of practicing in a profession he really enjoys. "The past quarter of a century has gone past rapidly and happily," he declared, "but I couldn't have done it without the cooperation and kindness of the people in this area. The people have really been pretty nice to me here." Dr. Cheney has treated a wide variety of animals of all sizes, he recalled, but probably the strangest was the lion in the Strates Carnival show that had a cold. "It had caught distemper just like a dog or a housecat will," he pointed out, "and I went into its cage and treated it for about a week. The trainers had him all tied down, and I'd sure want him to be, too." It was a horse that was Dr. Cheney's most difficult patient. It was shortly after he started in private practice in Bath Jan. 1, 1936, that he was pushing a capsule down a horse's neck when it pulled up its front foot and caught him square in the face. The veterinarian was knocked to the ground, unconscious, and his nose and jaw were fractured by the blow. Dr. Cheney is a native of Hopkinton in St. Lawrence County and attended high school at St. Regis, near Tupper Lake. He was in Army service in 1917 and 1918 and then entered Cornell University. He was graduated there in June, 1922, with his degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine. He served with Dr. Walter Buck in Dansville for two months, went to Potsdam from 1923 through 1926, then was in Ogdensburg for three years serving as veterinarian and meat and milk inspector. When Dr. Cheney first came to Bath he was field veterinarian for the Borden Milk Co. in Steuben and nearby counties. Since the first day of 1936, he has "enjoyed a mixed practice with large and small animals" in the same location as at present, 126 West Washington Blvd. He has operated on animals of all sizes from cows that had coins, a jackknife (sic), nails or wire in their stomachs to a 34 pound chihuahua (sic) dog which had a caesarian operation for birth of its two pups. The owner was so happy with the results she named one of the pups for the doctor. Caesarian births are not uncommon among animals. His work averages 40 caesarian operations on pigs annually and 15 to 20 on cows. An increasing amount of Dr. Cheney's work in recent years has been inspection for dairy firms and the state and village governments. He makes 250 dairy inspections for the Pollio Dairy of Campbell each year and about 100 for Dairymen's League of Bath. Other testing includes 60,000 hens to determine possible presence of pullorum in breeders, blood testing and vaccination of cattle. He also is village milk inspector for Bath. Dr. Peter J. DePuy, formerly of Dansville, has been working with him in the past two years. "He has done a nice job for me, but he will be leaving July 1 to set up his own practice in Fairport," Dr. Cheney said. Another assistant from the 1954 Cornell graduating class will join him soon. Although a busy man, Dr. Cheney doesn't work all the time. "There is something I still like about the north country of the state even though Bath is very much our home, Every once in a while I break loose and go back up there to go fishing with my brother in the St. Lawrence," he reported. Dr. and Mrs. Cheney have had two sons and a daughter. One of those sons, Robert, received his Bachelor of Science degree at Alfred University and is now in charge of the office work of the business. Although he's been in the veterinarian business for 32 years now, he has no plans to retire. "I guess I'll just keep on going as long as I can. I really enjoy the work too much to quit," he declared.

W490 James George Needham

Great Teachers Die. DEATH this summer called two of the University's famous teachers. Professor James George Needham, PhD '98, Entomology, Emeritus, died July 24 in Ithaca, where he had lived for many years at 6 Needham Place. James G. Needham, PhD '98 Professor Needham was known internationally for his work, which resulted in twenty-five books on the subject of entomology. He was a pioneer in the field of limnology, which is defined as "the scientific study of fresh waters, especially that of ponds and lakes." He was director of the University's biological field station and preserves at the head of Cayuga Lake and of Entomology Department studies of the marine life of the region, and was instrumental in procuring five wildlife preserves for the University. Several generations of Cornellians remember him for his interesting lectures in Freshman Biology. At one time, Professor Needham was one of only twelve Americans studying dragonflies of the continent, and of only twenty-five in the world. He discovered a new species, which was named after him, Libellula Needhami. The naturalist received the BS in 1891 and the MS in 1893 at Knox College. In 1896, he came to Cornell as Goldwin Smith Fellow in Zoology at the request of Professor John H. Comstock '74. Professor Needham's first book, Elementary Lessons in Zoology, written in 1895 while he was on the faculty of Jerseyville High School in Illinois, had so impressed Comstock that he wanted Needham to study with him. Later they collaborated in developing new interpretations of morphology (structure) of insect wings. This work was universally accepted by world biologists and greatly modified entomological proceedings. After nine years on the faculty of Lake Forest College in Illinois, Professor Needham returned to Cornell in 1907 as assistant professor of Limnology, the first to be so designated anywhere. At Professor Comstock's retirement in 1914, Professor Needham succeeded him as head of the Entomology Department. He retired in 1936. Professor Needham was a member of the editorial board of Psyche, fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, past-president of the Limnological Society of America, honorary member of the Entomological Societies of America and China, and a member of Alpha Zeta and Phi Beta Kappa. In 1930, he was awarded the King Gold Medal for the best work on the fauna of China. Knox College bestowed on him the honorary LLD in 1921 and Lake Forest College, the honorary DSc in 1930. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Alec R. Hilliard (Anabel Needham) '27, who lived with him, and two sons, John T. Needham '18 and Paul R. Needham '24. The late William R. Needham '35 was also his son. Mrs. Needham died in 1935. Needham Place in Ithaca, where he was an early resident, was named for him.

James George Needham, Emeritus Professor of Entomology, died on July 24, 1957. Throughout a long and busy life he served Cornell University as a great biologist and a productive scholar. Dr. Needham was born in Virginia, Illinois, on March 16, 1868. He attended public schools and Knox College, from which he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees. In later years, he was fond of telling about the good fun he had with other youngsters while attending a country school on the prairie. After graduating from Knox College, he taught there from 1894 to 1896. During this time he prepared and published a text, "Elementary Lessons in Zoology". This was unique in its presentation of subject matter, and attracted the attention of Professor John Henry Comstock who invited him to come to Cornell to study with him as a Goldwin Smith Scholar. During this period he collaborated with Professor Comstock in establishing a new interpretation of the morphology of insect wing venation. This classical work became accepted by biologists throughout the world and did much to modify entomological procedures. From 1898 until 1907, Dr. Needham was professor of biology at Lake Forest University. For several summers while teaching there, he worked for the New York State Conservation Department in the Adirondack region, studying aquatic life as a means of maintaining and increasing the food supply of fresh water fishes. In 1907 he was invited to return to Cornell as assistant professor of limnology, to establish for the first time in any American university the subject of limnology as a field of instruction and research. Out of his effort grew the excellent program in limnology that attracted students from many parts of the world. Dr. Needham worked for years at the biological field station in the Renwick Marsh area at the head of Cayuga Lake, studying fresh water biology. In 1914, Professor Comstock retired as head of the Department of Entomology and with his recommendation, Professor Needham was appointed head of the department, a position he filled until his retirement in 1935. In 1909, Dean Liberty Hyde Bailey asked Professor Needham to give a course in biology. This course, with modifications, still exists in our college curriculum and has long served as an introduction to biology for students who are majoring in other areas of subject matter. His keen interest in the broader aspects of human biology enabled him to develop a course in the biology of the human species which received widespread acclaim from students in many colleges of the University. The course was noted for his unique manner of presentation, for his wholesome philosophy of life, and reflected the thinking of a great naturalist. He loved students and they responded with deep affection and respect. From all lands, they came to Cornell to study with Dr. Needham and found him a stimulating, sympathetic teacher, but also one who expected the best that one could give. Ecology entered the teaching curriculum of the Department of Entomology because Professor Needham developed it along with limnology and biology. Any student who had the privilege of going into the field with him has a lasting memory of a great naturalist at work. Nature unfolded its intricacies around him and with warmth and enthusiasm he made one see the life in a pond, in a stream, on an alder bush, or a goldenrod plant as one had never dreamed it existed. Professor Needham was so much at home with all of his friends in the plant and animal world that students sensed his inspiration and shared his enthusiasm for nature. With a twinkle in his eye, he would show students a parasite attached to a caterpillar and muse about bigger fleas have smaller fleas upon their backs to bite them! He could portray the living interrelationships of plants and animals in simple, understandable terms that students grasped. Among Professor Needham's most distinguished research is his work with the aquatic insects—the stoneflies, caddis flies, damsel flies and dragonflies. To the damsel flies and dragon flies particularly, he gave much of his time in study of the biology and classification. His outstanding work A Manual of the Dragonflies of North America, revised in 1954 with a former student, Dr. M. J. Westfall, as co-author, was published by the University of California Press only a few years before his death. During his career Professor Needham published more than 250 scientific articles, educational papers, and textbooks. His writing was clear, concise, and interesting to read. His style was typically and uniquely his own. No tribute to the life and work of Professor Needham would be complete without mention of his poetry and philosophical writings. Some years ago friends and former students persuaded him to publish a collection of his poems. Often during his active years he invited groups to his home, and as they sat around the fireplace on a winter's evening, he read from his poems, or perhaps an article about life on the frontier, or an "Uncle Remus" tale, with a buoyancy of spirit that reflected in the entire gathering. Always a staunch advocate of teaching biology where it existed—in nature, Professor Needham was instrumental in obtaining for Cornell University several of the biological preserves which presently are a great asset to all phases of the biological sciences. He was active in the Entomological Society of America, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Limnological Society of America of which he was a past president, and numerous other scientific societies. His teaching and research in China brought him widespread recognition.

Many Chinese graduate students came to Cornell to study with him. Professor Needham's life was a wonderful example of devotion to his family, his students, and his work. His genial personality and friendliness endeared him to his associates and students at Cornell for more than half a century of continuous association with the Department of Entomology. His great pioneering spirit advanced the work he loved so well until almost the very end of his days. His influence will always be felt on the Campus and, in a broader sense, throughout the world. C. E. Palm, C. O. Berg, J. C. Bradley.

W490 John George Pertsch Jr.

Prof. Pertsch drowns Professor John G. Pertsch, Jr., '09, of the School of Electrical Engineering, was drowned in Cayuga Lake, off Taughannock Point, about eleven miles from Ithaca, on August 23, when he attempted to rescue Miss Signe Sjoegren, formerly assistant medical advisor at Cornell. Stricken with cramps or a heart attack, Professor Pertsch sank before aid could reach him. When Miss Sjoegren was seen to be in difficulty in the water offshore, Professor Pertsch went to her rescue, holding her above water until other rescuers, including Harold Flack '12, secretary of the Cornellian Council, reached them. As they started back to shore, Professor Pertsch, behind the others, sank. The body was recovered after a fifteen-minute search. Professor Pertsch had been a member of the Faculty since his graduation. He was a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, Tau Beta Pi, and the American Society of Electrical Engineers. He is survived by Mrs. Pertsch and by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pertsch, at whose home in Baltimore funeral services were held.

John George Pertsch Jr. 1887—August 23, 1928. Professor of Electrical Engineering. On 23 August 1928, Professor Pertsch saved from drowning a person struggling in the rough waters of Cayuga Lake. The effort proved too much for his strength, and he met his own death in a deed that was of a piece with his kindly, generous life. John George Pertsch Jr. was born in Baltimore in 1887. He received from Cornell University in 1909 the degree of Mechanical Engineer. On graduating he was made an assistant in his college, and by successive promotions came to a professorship of Electrical Engineering. His whole academic life was spent in Cornell. He was a contributor to the journals of his profession and was a member of many learned societies. In recording his death the Faculty wishes to bear witness to the fine qualities that made Professor Pertsch a valued and well-loved colleague. His students found him an admirably informed and wholly sympathetic teacher; few indeed of the teaching staff aroused a deeper response.

His associates recognized in him a constant kindliness and fair-mindedness, a straightforward manliness, a thoroughness in dealing with his subject, a steady industry, that well explained his popularity. In his death the University loses a teacher and scholar difficult to replace, and very many members of the faculty lose a true friend.

He served Stanford in the several professorial grades without interruption from 1900 until his retirement in 1929. Throughout his university career Professor Rogers' chief interest was in his teaching. He was an originator of teaching techniques and an advocate of the deductive method, his views and contributions in this field being set forth in his book, "Deductive Physics." He was very adept at drilling students in the fundamentals of a subject and in the development and presentation of effective experiments and other teaching aids. His students recall particularly his patience and thoroughness, and these characteristics also contributed invaluable to his success as an investigator in the exacting field of electrical measurements. Personally as well as professionally he was scrupulous in the discharge of his obligations. His loyalties, not lightly assigned, were served in complete and serene fidelity. Professor Rogers is survived by his wife, Josephine, and by two sons and a daughter. Be it resolved, therefore, that these words of appreciation be recorded

Irving H. Handerhan The community was shocked by the sudden death of Irving Handerhan at the family home south of Montour Falls, early Sunday morning. He had been ill only two weeks, at first not seriously, but flu and pneumonia developed and the end came only a few days later. It was a great shock to his friends as many did not even know of his illness. He was only 30 years of age, having been born in Buffalo, Dec. 23, 1902. The greater part of his life was spent in Montour Falls where he made his home since a small child, with his aunt and uncle, Miss Katherine Handerhan and Henry Handerhan. He was a graduate of Cook Academy, the Elmira Free Academy and attended Cornell University. For a short time he worked in New York City. He is survived by his father, P. F. Handerhan of New York and Buffalo; a sister, Miss Mary Handerhan; his aunt and uncle, Miss Katherine Handerhan and Henry Handerhan, all of Montour Falls; two aunts, Mrs. Margaret Ryan of Elmira and Mrs. Jennie Leary of Caledonia. His passing leaves a deep void in the hearts of family and friends, it will be impossible to fill. Funeral services were conducted at the home at 8:30 a. m., Tuesday and at 9 a. m. in the St. Mary's of the Lake Catholic church in Watkins Glen, the Rev. Michael B. Grodin of Horseheads officiating. Burial was beside his mother in the Caledonia cemetery.

W504 Don Jay Wickham

Class Notes. 24. During the autumn month of the year 2000, we lost two of our stalwart women classmates: talented Mary Yinger of Montclair, NJ, and former professor Dorothea Johannsen Crook of Mitchellville, MD, both of whom served as class officers for many years. Likewise, this fall our last Class President, Don Wickham, changed his address from Hector, NY, to Schuyler Hospital, Montour Falls, NY. Then, after completing this column, we received the sad news that Don died on Jan. 18, '01. More on our esteemed classmate will appear in the May/June issue.

Class Notes. 24. After 76 years marital happiness "Flossie" Wickham, an honorary member of the Class of 1924, lost her husband Don this past January. Through the year, Don was one of the university's most ardent, loyal, and supportive alums. An honored graduate of the Ag college, Don was deeply involved for years with the college and farmer groups throughout New York State in agricultural projects and programs. It was no wonder, then, that Governor Nelson Rockefeller chose Don to be the Empire State Commissioner of Agriculture, an office he held for 13 years. A photograph of Don and the governor still hangs, among others, decorating the wall of the Wickham home at the southern tip of Seneca Lake known as Peach Orchard Point. Cherries and grapes, as well as peaches, adorned the hilly, fertile stretch of land which Don, Flossie, and their offspring loved. As Commissioner of Agriculture, Don was entitled to membership on Cornell's Board of Trustees, a position he considered one of the highest of honors and one which enabled him to serve his alma mater admirably for many years. At the same time, Don was a member of the board of directors of the NY Telephone Co., an affiliation which enabled him to be of great public service. Complementing these honors was Don's election as president of the Class of 1924, our fifth and last, following Chick Stone, Max Schmitt, Chick Norris, and Fred Wood. In summation, Don, here's a hearty salute to you for all you have done through the year for Cornell, the Ag college, and the great Class of 1924. Max Schmitt, 254 W. Heart Attack Is Fatal to U-E. Teacher Francis Parkhurst Dies While Swimming in Lake Ontario Channel Endicott, July 16—Francis Parkhurst 33, a member of the mathematics faculty of the Union-Endicott High school, succumbed to heart failure while swimming in a channel of Lake Ontario near his home at Selkirk four miles from Pulaski Sunday morning shortly before 11 o'clock. Mr. Parkhurst sank in deep water. Swimming near him was Roger Brooks of Vestal, who summoned aid. Mr. Brooks and others searched for the body, which was recovered with grappling hooks in about 20 minutes. Efforts to revive him by artificial respiration failed. No water was found in the lungs, and the coroner, Dr. A. G. Dunbar, attributed death to a heart attack. He said Mr. Parkhurst probably was dead before his body reached the bottom of the channel. The funeral will be held at the Lawrence funeral home in Pulaski Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mr. Parkhurst's only survivor is a sister, Mrs. Marie Wills of Jamesville. Mr. Parkhurst was a graduate of Cornell University. He became a member of the Union-Endicott High school faculty in the fall of 1930.

A Yonkers resident for the last 48 years, Mr. Caruso served as supervisor from 1943 to 1945 and as president of the 7th Ward Republican Club. He also served as Yonkers justice of the peace from 1935 to 1943 and was a Draft Board member in World War II. Born in Sicily, Italy, on Feb 22, 1900, he was an attorney in Yonkers for many years before retiring in 1977. Mr. Caruso attended Cornell University and was graduated from Fordham Law School in 1927. He was a parishioner of Mount Carmel Church where he was a member of the St. Donato Society and a former president of the Holy Name Society. Mr. Caruso married the former Ada Quici in the Bronx on April 23, 1928. She died on June 10, 1967. Mr. Caruso is survived by a son, Conrad Caruso of Ridgewood, N.J.; a daughter, Josephine Caruso of Yonkers; a brother, John Caruso of Mountain View, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Dominick (Dora) LaFiandra of Yonkers; and three grandchildren. He was predeceased by a brother, Achilles, and a sister, Josephine.

Case Against Police To Be Heard Today. Falmouth Selectman to Sit on Editor's Charge. Special Dispatch to the Globe. Falmouth, September 24—Falmouth Selectman will hold a public hearing tomorrow at 10 a m on charges preferred by Ware Cattell, a Woods Hole Summer resident, that Falmouth policemen have "exercise their powers in an arbitrary and unfair way; penalizing certain people and not others equally deserving of penalty." Mr. Patel, whose home is in Harrison, NY, and who is editor of the Collecting Net, a publication devoted to marine biology, is son of J. McKeen Cattell, former Columbia University professor and distinguished scientist. His charges concerning the Falmouth police are the outcome of several brushes with officers over alleged traffic law violations. It all started when a policeman stopped Cattell while the latter was piloting his motorcycle with two passengers. Police said his operation was impeded. Cattell said it wasn't and convinced Judge Frederick C. Swift that he was right. Later on police Chief Harold L. Baker recommended to Registrar Godwin that Cattell's license to operate be suspended and this was done last week. Now the Woods Hole editor has preferred written charges against “certain policemen,” officer Ralph Erskine who hailed him into court being one of them. Chief Baker said: “Cattell has argued and disputed with every policeman whoever spoke to him all Summer he has shown flagrant disregard of traffic and parking regulations.”

Ware Cattell Out Of Scientific Post. Editor of American Association Monthly is Dismissed ‘for Cause’ After 17 Years. He Denies Laxity Charge. Says Real Reason Is Differences With Dr. Moulton on Worth of Manuscripts. Special to The New York Times. Washington, July 14—The American Association for the Advancement of Science has dismissed as editor of its The Scientific Monthly Ware Cattell, son of Dr. J. McKean Cattell, former owner and publisher of the magazine. He had been managing editor and editor for seventeen years. The action of the association’s executive committee, which was confirmed without explanation or comment at its offices today, was taken at a meeting held July 10 on charges which Mr. Cattell denounced today as but “a reasonable front,” having “little or no basis in fact.” Notice of the action taken was received by Mr. Cattell Sunday night, in the form of a letter from Dr. Forrest R. Moulton, permanent secretary of the association, informing him that his resignation was demanded to become effective Monday, and telling him that in the event of failure to submit it, he was relieved of his duties as editor, “for cause,” as of that date. Had Asked Leave to Teach. The “cause,” as stated in the letter received by Mr. Cattell, included a rejected request for a leave of absence to teach physics from July 15 to December 31 at the University of Maryland and his alleged failure, on four counts, to discharge satisfactorily his duties as editor. Mr. Cattell, it was declared, had not devoted his full time to The Scientific Monthly, had not kept regular office hours, had failed to read and edit manuscripts submitted for publication, and had not properly conducted the magazine’s advertising department. Mr. Cattell said that he had accepted the denial of his request for leave of absence, and it could not therefore have been regarded as a cause for demanding his resignation, and that the other “reasons” given were equally baseless. “The actual prevailing reasons, as I believe them to be,” he said, “are these: “I objected to editing and proofreading arrangements. I objected to Dr. Moulton’s policy of rejecting manuscripts not upholding his views; he has wished to suppress those which do not. I objected to the over-emphasis on matters not concerned with the progress of science; in my opinion The Scientific Monthly now prints too many contributions in this field. And I objected to favoritism in the selection of articles; Dr. Moulton likes to print articles by his friends and old colleagues. Almost always they are wonderful people and distinguished men, but occasionally wonderful people and distinguished men write things which perhaps should not be published in The Scientific Monthly.” Charges “Outside Pressure” “And finally,” Mr. Cattell added, “I object to Dr. Moulton’s lack of independence.” Mr. Cattell said that “the last straw” in the move to seek his resignation or dismissal, occurred during preparation of the July issue of the magazine, in which he was “forced to print” an article which he regarded as misrepresenting a “medical matter paramount importance in the national emergency the article was identified by Mr. Cattell is one entitled “Quinine, the Story of Cinchona,” which was written by Norman Taylor, director of the Cinchona Products Institute of New York, and of which 200,000 reprints were ordered by the Institute for distribution to colleges and universities. Unless the executive committee rescinded its action, Mr. Cattell said, he would file suit for damages in the amount of $17,500, the amount of his salary for the unexpired period of his four year contract at $5,000 a year.

Editor Alleges 'Railroading' In Loss of Job. Ware Cattell has been dismissed from his position as editor of the magazine Scientific Monthly and has issued statements to the effect that the dismissal is "a railroading job" instigated by Dr. Forest R. Moulton, famed astronomer, an advisory editor of the publication. The executive committee of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which has owned the magazine since January 1 of this year, met July 12 and voted to dismiss Cattell. They took this action on the recommendation of Dr. Moulton, who charged, among other things, that Cattell was incompetent, did not keep regular office hours, failed to read proofs and manuscripts, and totally neglected to drum up advertising. Cattell was discharged without salary for the balance of the week and without provision for vacation that he had said was due him. He said yesterday he was bringing suit against the association for breach of contract for $17,000 salary due him; also he wants his job back. Up to the time of his dismissal, Cattell had served about 17 years with the magazine as assistant editor, managing editor and business editor, working directly under his father, Dr. J. McKean Cattell, physicist, who owned the publication. Since 1938 the editorial offices have been located in the Tower of the Smithsonian institution building. One day Moulton wrote to Cattell's secretary that she was no longer to work for Cattell but was to begin working for him. The secretary left Cattell, but, after a fierce to-do by Cattell, was returned in a week or so. Momentum was being gained by the rumors as these sallies took place. Not long ago Cattell asked the executive committee for permission to take half-time off in order to teach physics at American University. He was denied this, he said, because Moulton had told everybody worth telling that he didn't know which way the wind was blowing on full time, so what could he do on half time.

$17,500 Is Sought For Contract Breach. Ware Cattell, 3609 Military rd., nw, sued the American Association for the Advancement of Science yesterday, asking District Court to award him $17,500 under terms of an employment contract. Catell (sic) states he was hired on January 17, for a 4-year period at $5000 a year to edit the Scientific Monthly. He claims that since July 13, the Association has failed to pay him and states that he is no longer employed by them.

Editor's Suit Settled. Ware Cattell, Dismissed by Scientific Monthly, Gets $7,500. The suit for $17,500 by Ware Cattell against the American Association for the Advancement of Science, because of his dismissal from his position as editor of The Scientific Monthly, published by the association, was settled by court decree under which Mr. Cattell received $7,500, it was disclosed here yesterday. After his dismissal on July 12, 1943, Mr. Cattell sued in the Federal Court in Washington, D.C., alleging breach of contract and asking damages for the remaining three and a half years of his contract. On the fourth day of the trial settlement negotiations were initiated. Judge T. Alan Goldsborough signed the stipulation of settlement.

W504 Clyde Mayer

Notes from the Classes. '21. When the short comment about Clyde Mayer was sent to the ALUMNI NEWS last month, we knew from Clyde himself that his illness was "in the terminal stage" and that treatments were no longer effective. He bravely faced the end of the road which came on Jan. 6. Our class has lost a good companion who shared his friendly spirit with all and who, in return, was, to my knowledge, never spoken of disparagingly. Clyde's record on the Hill was exceptional. He was captain of both baseball and football teams, served on the principal campus committees, was elected to Sphinx Head, Tau Beta Pi, and Phi Kappa Phi, was president of Student Council, the Senior Class and the Alumni of 1921. He was born in Williamsport, Pa., and lived a good life there. His memory will remain warm in the hearts of his classmates and all others who were privileged to know him.

W504 Romeyn Berry

Now In My Time! Suspend. ROMEYN BERRY '04 died unexpectedly, March 22, in Tompkins County Memorial Hospital. He had suffered a broken hip in a fall at his home, Stoneposts, in Jacksonville, March 5. Funeral was in Sage Chapel. Grandson of John Stanton Gould, professor of Agriculture at the University from 1869-74 and a member of the first Board of Trustees, the writer of "Now in My Time!" early acquired his interest in Cornell. His mother lived with her parents in Cascadilla Place when it and Morrill Hall were the only University buildings. Berry received the AB in 1904 and the LLB in 1906. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi, Sphinx Head, the Savage Club, Masque, and Phi Delta Phi. He played Freshman football in 1899 and became assistant manager of the Varsity track team and treasurer of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. He was editor of the Widow for two years (one with George Jean Nathan '04 as business manager) and added Kenneth Roberts '08 to the board. Berry wrote "The Big Red Team" and the first original show produced by Masque, "The President of Oolong." With Roberts he wrote the Masque opera, "Panatela." He practiced law in New York City from 1906-17, then after service as a first lieutenant in the US Army, returned to the University as Graduate Manager of Athletics. He was on the advisory committee of the IC4A, the American Olympic Committee, and the committee on rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. He was executive secretary- treasurer of both the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball and Baseball Leagues at the same time and earlier, president of the Baseball League. In New York, he was a representative of the Cornell Club of New York on the Athletic Council, a director of the Associate Alumni, and a member of the Alumni Committee on Athletics. While he was Graduate Manager, Hoy Field was completed and the Crescent was constructed. He was much in demand as a speaker, and is still remembered as the stentorian announcer of track meets in Barton Hall before there was a public address system. Berry resigned as Graduate Manager in 1936 and shortly moved to the farm at Jacksonville. His first writing for the ALUMNI NEWS was a brief column, "Sport Stuff," that ran from 1920-29. He wrote a news page, "On the Campus & Down the Hill," in 1936-37, and "Now In My Time!" has appeared almost without interruption since 1937. Berry's picture here was taken about when this column started. Through the years, his columns have stirred the interest of more Cornellians of all vintages, both men and women, and brought more comments than any other feature of the NEWS. He was frequently quoted in other alumni magazines and his columns won awards for the NEWS in national competitions of the American Alumni Council. For twenty-six years until his death, Berry wrote for his neighbors of Tompkins County and for many who had moved away a weekly column, "State and Tioga," in The Ithaca Journal. He contributed also to American Agriculturist and regularly to the football programs of home games. For part of 1936, he spent most of every week in New York City, writing "Notes and Comments" in the "Talk of the Town" for The New Yorker. His books include Sport Stuff (1927), Dirt Roads to Stoneposts (1950), Stoneposts in the Sunset (1951), and Behind the Ivy (1951), a collection of his ALUMNI NEWS columns published by the University Press. He also contributed to the book, Our Cornell. For some years he conducted a radio program, "Chats on the Barnyard Gate," broadcast from University Radio Station WHCU and heard over other Eastern and Midwestern stations. Berry is survived by Mrs. Berry, the former Hester Bancroft '22, whom he married in 1932, a son, Warner B. Berry, and two daughters, Mrs. William N. McDonald III of Pelham Manor and Mrs. C. Hamilton Sanford, Jr. of Hamden, Conn., who was for a time in charge of alumni records at the University. The first Mrs. Berry, sister of the late Raymond Nutting '04, died in 1928. "Rym" had a unique gift for chronicling and interpreting this and all universities. He disclaimed being a historian and said frequently, "I paint in watercolors; I am not a photographer." But his writings in the ALUMNI NEWS and elsewhere have preserved an exhaustive and valuable volume of tradition and information. He could also be a crusader on occasion, battling with sturdy wit for the preservation of memorials, against alumni interference in affairs of the University, poking fun at academic bureaucracy, or gently recalling the loss of traditions that seemed important. He did not regret change and he steadily advocated freedom of inquiry and the self development of youth. A classic example is his rejoinder in the NEWS to attacks on the University's Russian program by a New York World-Telegram writer in 1944; a rejoinder that brought numerous gifts to Cornell. "Of course we've got Communists," Berry wrote, "and of course we're teaching Russian; also German, Plant Breeding, and both schools of thought on the Gold Standard. If you don't approve, perhaps you'd better cancel your $5 pledge and use $2.75 of the money to buy the Becker Book and find out why we have universities, what their job is, and what the particular job of this one is. ... Stop writing me letters. Stop teaching your son he must believe what you finally came to believe after you had been given a four-year chance to figure things out for yourself—if it has a ball and chain attached to it!" Rym's calls at the NEWS office, to bring in his copy written in pencil on yellow sheets and to visit about affairs in general, were enjoyed by all the staff. They will be greatly missed, as are those of other valued confidantes and friendly critics such as the late Woodford Patterson '95 and Professors William Strunk, Jr., PhD '96, and Dexter S. Kimball. Robert J. Kane '34, Director of Athletics & Physical Education, opened his Confidential Letter, March 28: A great Cornellian passed away last Friday. Romeyn Berry deserved the tab of greatness as very few have. He was a vivid personality whose mark in the world is imperishable. His influence, however, is a provincial one; provincial because he virtually dedicated his great writing talent to Cornell and to Ithaca. Thus he did not receive the wide renown he most certainly would have had if his sphere had not been so circumscribed. He did not seek renown. In fact, he avoided it when it beckoned. But we as Cornellians must always be humbly grateful he left us such a vast fund of Cornelliana and that he chose to live among us. I have before me his book, Dirt Roads to Stoneposts, and reading his glittering, flowing prose once again I feel a gnawing loneliness, an emptiness. Lord, he was good! Rym was profound and confoundingly knowledgeable, but it was Mother Nature who intrigued him most. He had a touch light as a zephyr. His was a gay pen. Never, never did he use it to demean or to be hurtful. It was my good fortune to have known Rym well. I was proud to be his friend. It gave me a lift to know that he approved of me. He served in my job for seventeen years and Schoellkopf was on his regular beat when he visited the Campus. He was immensely helpful to me, particularly in the early years of my service. He could have been bitter, but Rym had too much nobility for that. And he loved Cornell too much. He knew all her failings, her inadequacies as well as her virtues, and he loved her. I know as probably no one else does just how much Cornell benefitted from his ambassadorship. His influence in athletics was international, his many friends in the business were loyal and highly respectful. The Ithaca Journal seemed destitute Monday evening without his column. The ALUMNI NEWS can never be the same. Nor shall we, his friends.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 59, No. 14, 15 Apr 1957, pp. 491-492.

Romeyn Berry (1881-1957) was an American sports administrator and author. Nicknamed "Rym," Berry attended Cornell University, graduating in 1904 and earning a law degree in 1906. During his senior year, Berry was elected to the Sphinx Head Society and editor of the Cornell Widow with George Jean Nathan as business manager. In 1905, Berry composed the lyrics for the Cornell song The Big Red Team, thereby dubbing Cornell athletics "The Big Red." From 1906 to 1919, Berry practiced law in New York City. During World War I, he served as a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army. Leaving his law practice, Berry became the Graduate Director of Cornell Athletics from 1919 to 1935. During these years, Berry also served as graduate manager of the Cornell University Glee Club. In 1932, he was president of the Eastern Collegiate Baseball League, and he was named to the American Olympic Committee in 1938. Berry was succeeded as athletic director by James Lynah. Around 1936, he moved to a 65 acre farm known as "Stoneposts" in Jacksonville, New York, about 10 miles from Ithaca. His first wife was Olive Nutting, whose father, Captain Lee Nutting, had won the Medal of Honor in the Civil War. His second wife was Hester Bancroft who was a sculptor and painter. Well-known among Cornell alumni for his wit, Berry contributed to the Cornell Alumni News, The Ithaca Journal, The New Yorker, The American Agriculturalist, and Cornell football game programs. He also authored Dirt Roads to Stoneposts (1949), Stoneposts in the Sunset (1950), and Behind the Ivy (1950). His pieces for the Ithaca Journal ran under the heading "State and Tioga" from 1931 to 1956 and reflected his gentle humor and wry observations about rural life and human nature. He was inducted into the Cornell Athletic Hall of Fame in 1980.

W504 Charles Emmes Cassidy

Alumni Notes. '24. Our great classmate Charles E Cassidy died May 27, 1972. Herewith is appended the report of Kenny Van Sickle from the Ithaca Journal which tells of Charles's career. "Remember that famous Cornell backfield of the early 1920s- Kaw, Pfann, Cassidy and Ramsey." Only George Pfann carries on. The others have died. The news of the death of Charles E. Cassidy, 70, arrived here today. He died May 27, in Hawaii. "Pfann, who resides in Ithaca, and his buddies rolled through unbeaten in 1921 and 1922 and had another great 1923 season. They served under the immortal coach Gilmour Dobie." Cassidy had been in Hawaii many years and recently lived in retirement from the State Supreme Court bench. He was an associate justice. "Former Hawaii Gov. William F. Quinn, who appointed Cassidy to the Supreme Court, called him 'an outstanding lawyer and a great judge who had a very warm and outstanding personality.'" Chief Justice William S. Richardson called Cassidy's death 'a great loss to Hawaii. He had a real feeling for the people of the State. He was greatly involved in the growth of Hawaii and his decisions reflected this.'" Cassidy lived most of his life in Hawaii, although he was born in San Francisco. His father came to Hawaii in 1880 and was superintendent of the Hawaiian Bell Telephone Co. which installed and operated the original telephone system on Oahu. His island ties on his mother's side date back to 1847 when his grandfather, George Emmes, settled here and was naturalized as a citizen of the monarchy in 1854." Cassidy attended Central Grammar and Punahou schools, then Hitchcock Military Academy, and Cornell University where he received his law degree in 1925. While at Cornell, he distinguished himself in football as the fullback in the famous backfield of George Pfann, Eddie Kaw and Floyd Ramsey. He also was a member of the Cornell lacrosse team. After graduation he spent a year as a law clerk in New York, then returned to Honolulu and served as a deputy US attorney from 1926-27. He continued his association with sports, coaching for the Town Team and Punahou School. In 1927 he served in the Honolulu attorney's office and two years later joined the Attorney General's office where he was a deputy."

News of the Alumni. '24. Hervey S. Rose, who graced our 35th Reunion in June, '59, gives a report of bucolic peace that may cause some of us mild moments of envy, particularly those with more than the normal capacity to believe that other fields are greener. Hervey writes that he has lived on & operated a small farm at Watermill, L.I. since graduating from Cornell. This blissful state he elaborates on briefly in a manner which helps to dispel our envy. He says this experience has been "since World War II an expensive hobby and a darn poor way to make a living." A daughter & two sons has Hervey contributed to our population. His daughter provided him with a grandchild not too long ago. Classmate Art Corwith is his doctor & bowling opponent.

W504 James Hutton

People. James Hutton '24, PhD '27, the Kappa Alpha professor of classics, emeritus, died October 29 in Ithaca at the age of 77. He had been a member of the faculty since 1927, an authority on Greek, Latin, and Renaissance literature, author of The Greek Anthology in Italy, The Greek Anthology in France, and two books due to be published in 1981 and '82.

James Hutton. November 30, 1902—October 29, 1980. Born in Airth, Stirlingshire, Scotland, son of a sea captain, James Hutton came to the United States as a young boy. He graduated from the Walton, New York, High School in 1920 and received his Bachelor of Arts degree at Cornell in 1924, having been elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year. His Master of Arts, in 1925, and his Doctor of Philosophy, in 1927, were also Cornell degrees. Except for a year as instructor in Greek and Latin at Columbia University (1926-27), he was a member of the Cornell faculty for the rest of his life: instructor 1927-29, assistant professor 1929-38, professor from 1938 on. In 1961 he was appointed Kappa Alpha Professor of Classics, and on his retirement in 1973 was named Kappa Alpha Professor emeritus. He served as chairman of the Department of Classics from 1946 to 1952. From 1927 to 1943 he was also a member of the Department for the Comparative Study of Literature, in association with Professor Lane Cooper. As a student and in the early years of his teaching career, Hutton was much influenced by Lane Cooper, who was at the time a dominant Cornell figure in the study of literature. Cooper was the director of his doctoral dissertation, "The Influence of the Greek Anthology," and to Cooper he no doubt owed in some measure the great breadth of his scholarly training and his concern for both classical and post-classical literature, with an emphasis on the links between them. But his style as a teacher stood in marked contrast to the authoritarianism of Lane Cooper. Hutton's way of teaching was to encourage students to produce their own views and then to help them on their way by means of deft criticism and correction, offered gently but firmly, and by suggesting further territory for exploration. James Hutton combined extraordinary erudition with discriminating literary judgment. The erudition was never on conspicuous display, but no one could know him or his work for long without coming to realize the astonishing range and precision of his knowledge. At the center of his scholarly interests was the influence of the classics on later European literature, and this interest is reflected in much of his published work as well as in the distinguished course, Humanism in the Renaissance, that he gave for many years. Many of his students would give foremost place to his skill as a critic and interpreter of such ancient authors as Homer, Pindar, Aeschylus, Virgil, and, very conspicuously, the poets of the Greek Anthology. Still other students have particularly vivid memories of his course entitled Modern Writers on Art, and others again would give first mention to the course that he gave—an inheritance from Lane Cooper on Cooper's retirement—on Greek and Latin literature in translation, a seminar-style course for undergraduates that for many years attracted some of the most gifted Cornell students. In the scholarly world he is known first and foremost for his two great studies of the influence of the Greek Anthology: The Greek Anthology in Italy (Cornell University Press, 1935) and The Greek Anthology in France and in the Latin Writers of the Netherlands to the Year 1800 (Cornell University Press, 1946). These two volumes alone are sufficient to ensure James Hutton lasting renown as an authority on the European tradition of classical literature, but they give no adequate impression of the diversity and comprehensiveness of his literary studies. His numerous articles and reviews deal with literary subjects ranging from classical antiquity to the twentieth century. Some of these articles are minor classics, such as the essay entitled "Spenser's 'Adamantine Chains': A Cosmological Metaphor," which was his contribution to The Classical Tradition (1967), a festschrift for his friend and colleague of many years, Harry Caplan. Another conspicuous example is "Some English Poems in Praise of Music," in English Miscellany 2 (1951), a 63-page study of sixteenth and seventeenth-century English poems on music, tracing the history of the tradition of the harmony of the spheres that lies behind this poetry. Even some of Hutton's reviews deserve notice as significant essays on their topics, such as his searching review of Gilbert Highet's The Classical Tradition (American Journal of Philology, 1952). It should be added, moreover, that in everything that he wrote Hutton was a stylist of elegance and lucidity. A selection of his essays, including three previously unpublished, appeared shortly after his death, in a volume entitled Essays on Renaissance Poetry, edited by Rita Guerlac (Cornell University Press, 1980). Left finished except for minor revisions, and to be published in 1981 by W. W. Norton & Co., is a translation, with extensive introduction and notes, of Aristotle's Poetics. He left also a large and very valuable unpublished study of peace poetry in the Renaissance. A scholar and critic of international reputation, Hutton was in steady demand as a reader and adviser to literary projects of university presses. He served as an editor of Cornell Studies in Classical Philology; contributed to the Catalogus Translationum et Commentariorum, edited by P. O. Kristeller; was involved in numerous other scholarly enterprises; and served many times as a critic and reviser of the work of his friends and colleagues at Cornell and elsewhere, a service performed as an act of friendship and concern for the advancement of scholarship. This service was really an extension of his role as teacher, and the same careful and erudite criticism was enjoyed by a large number of graduate students in the preparation of their essays and dissertations in many fields besides Classics—Comparative Literature, Medieval Studies, English, and Romance. Apart from a sabbatic year spent in Europe in the thirties and one or two trips to Scotland, Hutton seldom departed far or for long from Ithaca, and then usually to attend a meeting of a learned society. He was a member of the American Philological Association, serving on its board of directors from 1959 to 1963, of the Modern Language Association, and of the Renaissance Society of America. From 1944 to 1950 he was a member of the Committee on Renaissance Studies of the American Council of Learned Societies. His other chief destination on leaving Ithaca was his beloved farm in North Lansing, with its spacious and handsome early-nineteenth-century house, where for many years he spent summer vacations, adding a measure of leisurely gardening to his customary literary pursuits. Though quiet and unassuming in his way of life as in his personal manner, he was accorded many honors, including a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1958-59. On his retirement he was presented, by a group of old friends and colleagues, with a volume of studies entitled Poetry and Poetics from Ancient Greece to the Renaissance (Cornell University Press, 1975). He kept up an active correspondence with scholars in various fields, in this country and abroad, and retained a strong interest in Scotland, the country of his birth. A life-long bachelor, he lived with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hutton, and they shared a house for many years with Lane Cooper. After the death of his mother and of Lane Cooper, he continued to live at 123 Roberts Place, with his cousin, Mrs. Margaret Green. Frail health as well as his natural inclination for a quiet life led him to stay mostly at home during the last years of his life, but to his visitors as to his correspondents he continued to be a lively and companionable friend, with the same enthusiasm for literature and scholarship, and the same delightful combination of grace, wit, and learning that commanded the admiration and the affection of his colleagues and his students over the years. Class Notes. '24. Among those of us who have recently retired is Lewis W. MacNaughton, of Dallas, Texas. Mac writes that on Sept. 30, 1967, he retired as senior chairman of De Golyer & MacNaughton. He is still active with several directorships and tending to personal business.

Class Notes. Here follow excerpts from the article appearing in the Dallas Morning News reporting the demise of L. W. MacNaughton. "Lewis Winslow MacNaughton, 65, world renowned geologist, partner in the firm of DeGolyer & MacNaughton, died in a Dallas hospital Tues., Feb. 26, 1969. MacNaughton was born on the Isle of Pines, Cuba, and was the son of a Spanish-American War veteran. He grew up in New York State and was graduated from Cornell as a geologist. He had worked in Venezuela for Standard Oil Co. for a short time to raise enough money to finish school. After graduation he worked for two years for the American Museum of Natural History before he decided to return to the oil business. "He had originally planned to go to California, but had only enough money to get to Texas. He worked for Humble Oil & Refining in Houston, then Rycade Oil Co., a subsidiary of Amerada, and finally Amerada itself. While at Amerada he met the late E. L. DeGolyer who at that time was president of Rycade and Amerada. In 1936, when MacNaughton was only 34, DeGolyer asked him to join in partnership 'because he was the most knowledgeable oil man of my acquaintance.' They formed a partnership in 1939 which was followed in 1949 by incorporation to perform geological, engineering, and economic services throughout the world. Since DeGolyer's death in 1956, MacNaughton had been in overall charge of the firm's world-wide activities. He retired as senior chairman of the board in 1967 but remained as director."

Along the Ashuapmucuan Four students canoe Quebec's rivers & lakes on a geological & camping idyll. By James Martens '21 and Benjamin Shaub '25. Early in 1924, while they were working in the petrography laboratory in McGraw Hall, Benjamin M. Shaub '25, a mechanical engineering student, and Lewis W. MacNaughton '24, a geology major, started talking about a canoe trip in Canada. Soon James Martens '21, a graduate student in geology, and Edward S. Roberts '26, a mechanical engineering student, were brought into the discussion. The result was that in mid-June 1924 the four of us set out for what would be a memorable summer in the wilderness along the Ashuapmucuan River, 135 miles north of Quebec City, Quebec. ... Lewis MacNaughton worked as a geologist for the American Museum of Natural History from 1924-26, and then worked as a field geologist for Humble Oil and Refining Company, mainly in East Texas. In 1938 he formed a partnership that developed into the large consulting firm of DeGolyer and MacNaughton, with operations in most parts of the world which seemed likely to have any oil production. He was chairman of the board for many years. He retired in 1967 and died in 1969.

He may be compared with the fabulous Dr Doolittle of children's book fame: the physician who chose to serve the sick birds and animals, and learned how to communicate with them. Or with Dr James Herriot of Yorkshire, who wrote All Things Bright and Beautiful and All Creatures Great and Small. Charles is quoted in the Atlantic Journal & Constitution as saying, "I used to take care of all of the zoo animals, and I did it at no charge because I was already taking care of the city's prison farm livestock. ...I stayed up all night with a sick gorilla. ...It is not easy to make a sick tiger take his medicine. A hunter once sent me 39 hunting dogs, all suffering from arsenic poisoning, I saved all but one. ...A street car ran over the back legs of a tomcat. I had a bicycle man make a little cart which I strapped under the hips. It worked pretty well." W508 Frederick Baker

The Alumni. '78 BS—Dr. Fred Baker and his wife, Dr. Charlotte Johnson Baker, on March 30 celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Their home is in Point Loma, Calif. They have been prominent in medical, political, and educational circles in San Diego for forty-five years. Dr. Fred Baker is a life member of the San Diego Society of Natural History, the San Diego Museum Association, the California Academy of Sciences, the San Diego Zoological Society, and the Sons of the American Revolution, and by virtue of extensive travel, an honorary life member of the Pacific Geographic Society. He was a founder of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, and is famed as a conchologist, having the finest private library on conchology on the Pacific coast. He has held the positions of vice-president and member of the Council of the California Medical Association, president of the Southern California Medical Society, and president of the San Diego Medical Society. He has also served on the City Council, the City Board of Education, and as a trustee of the City Library, and the San Diego State Normal School. His wife has been president of the San Diego County Medical Society and vice-president of the Southern California Medical Society. In 1913 they went on a two years' trip around the world, starting from San Francisco to Honolulu in an old-fashioned sailing bark. Their daughter is dean of women at the Fresno State College.

lusks at the University of California, a former president of the San Diego Society of Natural History, and vice president of that organization, which operates the Natural History Museum, at the time of his death. He had traveled extensively abroad on expeditions representing the California Academy of Sciences, the Smithsonian Institute and Stanford University. His collection of shells was considered the largest privately owned assortment in the West. He was a veteran of many political campaigns and served in many civic organizations. A specialist in eye, ears, nose, and throat disorders, Dr. Baker practiced for years with his late wife. He was a junior at Cornell when he became interested in natural sciences, went with an expedition to Mexico, returned to graduate. He then went to the University of Michigan where he obtained his M.D. in 1880 and remained a year on the medical school staff. He retired from active practice 15 years ago. Surviving are his son and daughter. Private funeral services took place Tuesday morning at Bradley-Woolman mortuary in San Diego with the Rev. G. F. Williams officiating.

Llenroc, or the villa of Ezra Cornell, was constructed between 1865 and 1875. Designed as Ithaca's finest residence, it is an outstanding and exceptionally well-preserved example of high style masonry Gothic Revival architecture. The house is constructed of "Llenroc limestone", a name used for the limestone quarried as building material taken from west of Ithaca. Artisans from around the world created the many elaborate fixtures of the house including: English woodcarvers responsible for the carved interior molding on the first and second floor and stonemasons from Germany completed the exterior stonework. Irish, Scottish, Italian, and Indian craftsmen also made significant contributions. Eight complete marble fireplaces were also imported from Europe to be placed throughout the house.

Albert D. Moler. Albert Daniel Moler, the only son of Professor and Mrs. George S. Moler, died in Garden City, Kan., on June 7, of typhoid fever. His parents had been summoned to Kansas by information of his critical condition and were at his bedside when he passed away. Mr. Moler was twenty-seven years old. He graduated from the Ithaca High School in 1900 and entered the College of Architecture at Cornell in the same year. Ill health compelled him to give up his studies in his sophomore year, and two years ago he went West, hoping to receive benefit from a change of climate. He lived in Denver for a time and then removed to Garden City, Kan., where he contracted the disease which caused his death.

Professor Moler to Retire. His Resignation to Take Effect Next June—Resolution of the Trustees. The Trustees on November 11 received and accepted the resignation of George Sylvanus Moler, professor of physics, to take effect in June, 1917. Professor Moler will retire from teaching, having reached the age limit. The board placed upon its minutes the following resolution: "Resolved, that the Trustees in accepting the resignation of Professor Moler desire to express their high appreciation of his faithful and devoted service to the University in the Department of Physics for over forty years. As a teacher he is held in affectionate and grateful remembrance by many generations of university students. For twelve years he shared with Professor Anthony the entire work of the department and during that period in collaboration with him designed, constructed, and installed the first dynamo in America, the first arc-lighting system (that on the campus of Cornell University), and the first apparatus for the electrolytic production on a considerable scale of oxygen and hydrogen. He has also devised countless original and ingenious pieces of apparatus of incalculable value to the Department of Physics. And the photographic laboratory in Rockefeller Hall, with its original and unique equipment, is largely of his planning." The President was directed to apply to the Carnegie Foundation for a retiring allowance for Professor Moler.

Professor Moler Dies. Was Inventor of First Commercial Dynamo And Inspiring Teacher—Honored by Engineers Last October. George Sylvanus Moler '75, emeritus professor of physics since 1917, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Howard T. Critchlow, at Trenton, N. J., May 20. He was eighty-one years old. He was known widely as the inventor of the first commercial dynamo used in the Western Hemisphere. The dynamo was developed in collaboration with the late Professor William A. Anthony. Professor Moler had been in failing health for some time but it was only three weeks before his death that he was taken seriously ill. He was born in Columbus, Ohio, and received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Hedding College in 1872. He came to Cornell and three years later he received the degree of B.M.E. He was appointed instructor in physics in 1875, assistant professor in 1880, and professor in 1911. He retired from active teaching six years later. He was life secretary of the class of 1875. The first dynamo was only sufficiently powerful to light one electric bulb, but it was soon perfected to the extent that it served a system lighting the Campus. The dynamo marked the beginning of electrical engineering in the United States. When the sixtieth anniversary of Sibley College was observed in October, 1931, the first dynamo was put in use again. In behalf of the Cornell Society of Engineers, Ellis L. Phillips '95 of New York, president of the Long Island Lighting Company, presented Professor Moler with the following illuminated vellum testimonial: "The Cornell Society of Engineers, mindful that this year, 1931, marks the 60th anniversary of the founding of engineering at Cornell, and the centenary of the discovery of electromagnetic induction, the Cornell Society of Engineers, with appreciation and esteem presents this testimonial to George S. Moler who, with Professor William A. Anthony at Cornell University in 1875 built the first dynamo in the Western Hemisphere. This marked the era of electric light and power which has contributed inestimably to the progress of civilization." The dynamo was demonstrated at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876 where it excited great curiosity. Subsequently the invention was shown by Professor Moler at the World's Fair in Chicago, at the Pan-American Exposition, and at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. "Not only did Professor Moler gain honor through his part in the construction of the dynamo but he is credited with being one of the first persons to make an x-ray picture in America. Michael Pupin of Columbia has been given that recognition but there is no conclusive evidence that the Cornellian's pictures used by him before his students were not the first. When the news of the discovery of x-ray was cabled to America, Professor Moler immediately demonstrated the process to his classes and he continued to make these pictures until the effect of the x-ray obliged him to give it up."

Athletics and Health. Dr. Dean F. Smiley '16 Conducting Inquiry—Information Sought About Certain Cornellians. The effects of college athletics upon the life expectation of those who engaged in them are being investigated in a careful survey made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in cooperation with the Presidents' Committee of Fifty on College Hygiene, and other organizations including the American Students' Health Association, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and the Society of Directors of Physical Education in Colleges. The subsequent life histories of some ten thousand athletes, more particularly "letter men," who were members of the Class of 1905 and prior years are being studied. The sports covered are football, rowing, track, baseball, lacrosse, cross-country, and hockey. At Cornell, Dr. Dean F. Smiley '16, assisted by the office of the Alumni Representative, has been tabulating the records of Cornell athletes. Given below are two lists of names, the former of those concerning whom the University has no information, and the latter of those who have died but concerning whom the records are too meager (sic) to be useful. It will be appreciated by the Committee if anyone, having information about these men, would send it to Foster M. Coffin, Morrill Hall, Ithaca. Known to have died: ...Foster Cornell Slade '97.

W540 John Henry Tanner

John Henry Tanner. March 1, 1861—March 11, 1940. John Henry Tanner, Emeritus Professor of Mathematics, died on March 11, 1940, fourteen years after his retirement in 1926 had concluded a period of more than a third of a century of distinguished active service at Cornell University. Professor Tanner was born at Fort Plain, N. Y., on March 1, 1861. After completing his secondary school education he taught for several years in the Clinton Liberal Institute before coming to Cornell, where he was graduated in 1891 with special mention for proficiency in Mathematics and was at once appointed instructor in that subject. During the following thirty-five years he showed unflagging zeal and loyal devotion in all his academic and professional activities. He was author or joint author of four widely used textbooks, and in these, as in his teaching, he showed his ability to present mathematics in such a way that the student would not merely accept but would understand. He gave his full share of time to the usual committee work, and from 1897 to 1904 he served as secretary of the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences. He was one of the early members of the American Mathematical Society and took a keen interest in its problems of organization, and as its treasurer for more than a decade he succeeded in placing the society's finances on a secure foundation. The permanence of his interest and faith in Cornell University is impressively attested by the gift which he and Mrs. Tanner have made for the eventual establishment here of a Mathematical Institute. Throughout his career his generous and unselfish spirit found innumerable ways of sympathetic assistance, always rendered with his characteristic unobtrusive graciousness, whenever a student or a friend or a cause was in need. The noble life of John Henry Tanner will remain a living inspiration to all who knew him, and his colleagues in the University Faculty would record this expression of their love and admiration for him and of their respect for his memory.

Necrology. Professor Tanner Dies. Professor John Henry Tanner '91, Mathematics, emeritus, died at his home in Ithaca, 104 The Parkway, March 11. He had never fully recovered from a broken hip suffered three years ago. Mrs. Tanner survives him. Born in Fort Plain in 1861, he spent most of his early life on a farm. From 1883 to 1887 he taught in the Clinton Liberal Institute, then entered the Science Course at Cornell, receiving the BS in 1891. He had been a member of the Mathematics Department since 1891, became professor in 1904, retired as professor emeritus in 1926. Two years he spent in study at Goettingen, Germany, and in 1901 he was awarded the PhD degree at New Hampshire College. Secretary of the Faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences from 1897 to 1903, he was a life member of the American Mathematical Society, Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, member of the Society for Promotion of Engineering Education, Sigma Xi, and Delta Upsilon. He was the author of several widely-used text books on algebra and geometry. In 1920 Professor Tanner and Mrs. Tanner established with the University the Tanner Foundation to Promote Mathematical Research and Instruction. The donors provided that after their death the fund of $100,000 was to be used "in such manner as most effectively to promote mathematical research and instruction in Cornell University."

George Wallingford Noyes. Kenwood, N Y. Noyes turned up at the 1922 reunion just as serene as ever. One wonders sometimes what goes on in a head that is capable of such exact memory and careful distinctions. In the old under-class days we used to look at those thoughtful eyes and puzzle our little brains over what peculiar correctness of arrangement of brain cells there were under that shock of sandy hair to produce marks that were the highest of any student in the University from 1889 to 1892. Certainly he was a genius. But what kind of one we never could tell, he talked so little about anything that gave a clue to the workings of his mind. Noyes has such a quiet, lonesome air, that the few of us who had been allowed to know him have almost loved him. But he doesn't seem quite human, at that. He seems more like a far-off mountain peak looming up in a wild cluster of lesser peaks, and with the beauty of a rich golden sun shining full and calm on his distant coldness. George Noyes came to Cornell from the Oneida Community, the son of the head of that successful communistic settlement. He took from Cornell an A.B. and a Phi Beta Kappa key. Since leaving Cornell he has applied himself to the work of the Oneida Community in its greatly changed activities. Position and rank are no more valued there than with Quakers. Noyes has but served.

It does not largely matter that the Community is highly successful in canning and shipping, and eminently safe in its financial standing. Noyes has been needed in New York a great deal to carry much of the Community's work. Some have said that the duties of a banker and treasurer of a produce house would not have a very different life than Noyes. He was married in 1899 to Irene Campbell Newhouse, Cornell '95, and they have had one child.

W543 Michael Vincent O'Shea

Michael Vincent O'Shea. University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. Leroy, N.Y., gave Michael V. O'Shea to Cornell, after preparing him for entrance to the University at its Free Academy, and it is proud, as it should be, of the fact. O'Shea came in and went out with the Class of '92, taking with him upon his departure a degree from what Class Historian Nichols is wont to term "that glorious old extinct Letters course." From 1892 to 1895 O'Shea was Professor of Psychology and Education in the State Normal School at Mankato, Minn., and from 1895 to 1897 occupied a chair at Teachers' College, Buffalo, N. Y. In 1897 he accepted the Professorship of Education in the University of Wisconsin, which position he continues to hold. He has been prominently identified with educational reforms and with University Extension work and has lectured extensively on education and related topics throughout America, and in England and Scotland.

He was Chairman of the American Committee for the International Congress on Home Education, at Brussels, Belgium. O'Shea has published, among other works, Suggestions for the Observations and Study of Children, (1894); Aspects of Mental Economy, (1900); Education as Adjustment, (1903); Dynamic Factors in Education, (1906); Linguistic Development and Education, (1907); Every-day Problems in Teaching, (1912); Social Development and Education, (1915); Mental Development and Education, (1919); First Steps in Child Training, (1920); Faults of Childhood and Youth, (1920); The Trend of the Teens, (1920); Every-day Problems in Child Training, (1920); Tobacco and Mental Efficiency, (1923). He is the author—with Dr. J. H. Kellogg—of the Macmillan Health Series of six volumes, designed for the grammar grades. He collaborated with Dr. Cook and Miss Holbrook in preparing the Every-Day Spelling Series of four volumes. He has served as editor of various educational and home periodicals and is now editor-in-chief of the Junior Home Magazine. He is also editor-in-chief of The World Book Encyclopedia; The Macmillan Experimental Education Series; The Childhood and Youth Series; the Parent's Library, and the Children's Foundation Year Book. In 1894 our classmate was married to Harriet F. Easterbrooks, and they have four children. He was the organizer and first President of the Wisconsin Educational Club. In a State where even the politicians bow before its University, O'Shea holds a most important place. He has made the most of it by placing first things first. No Cornell man in the educational world has had quite the same remarkable influence over his generation as has that poor Irish boy who came up from Leroy.

Obituaries. MICHAEL VINCENT O'SHEA '91, professor of education at the University of Wisconsin since 1897, died suddenly on January 14 of a heart attack. He was born in Le Roy, N. Y., on September 17, 1866, the son of Michael and Margaret Fitzgerald O'Shea. He received the degree of B.L. He was the author of a number of books on education, and edited several volumes of the School and Home Classics, the World Book Encyclopaedia, the Experimental Education series, the Childhood and Youth Series, and the Parents' Library. He was also editor of The Junior Home Magazine and The Nation's Schools. He was a fellow of the A.A.A.S. and a member of many scientific and educational associations. He is survived by his wife and four children.

The Alumni. '92 BL—In School and Society for February 27 is printed the minute adopted by the University of Wisconsin faculty on the death of Professor Michael V. O'Shea '92. We quote a part: Professor O'Shea was a close student, at first hand, of both European and American educational practice, and especially in the field of genetic psychology made both important investigations and distinct enrichment to professional literature. With a talent for clear and lucid statement, he possessed an unusual gift for popularizing educational theory and pedagogical principle, and, on the public platform, his powers of interpretation were of high order and in wide demand. For this form of service his intellectual resourcefulness and readiness, his native wit, his dynamic vigor and charm of personality were invaluable assets... But it is his own community that will most feel his loss... Few have the vital imagination and genial curiosity, that were his, to draw out the best in a conversation and illustrate the commonplace. He had a scholarly theory of values, but one which he had brought into intimate relation with the whole of life. The friendships that he created and maintained, the groups, large and small, of which he was an intimate part, these will feel increasingly the irreparable loss of his death; but the inspiration also of his happy and vital life.

W544 Edwin DuBois Shurter

Edwin DuBois Shurter. 2615½ Hibernia Street, Dallas, Texas.

If there is any one in the Class who ought to be allowed to speak for himself it is Shurter. But we hesitate. There are limits to the book, and orators are notoriously long-winded. Yet, on second thought Eddie was not verbose in college days. He knew how to say what needed to be said, and say that little well; so well in fact that it sunk deep. On third thought the Historian thinks he will do it himself. Eddie came from Brookton. Have you forgotten where Brookton was? Don't you remember that long cold walk out East State Street at the time of one of those underclass affairs? And don't you remember that high trestle bridge that was built across that pretty valley of Six-mile, where the little white cottages looked like doll houses from the bridge-end? One of those was the Shurter house. They call it Sweetacre now. E. D. Shurter was an Ithaca High School graduate, and when he entered Cornell a very efficient clique of Freshmen had him chosen to be Freshman Class President. But other Freshmen of '92 were more impressed with the dignity of Walker and resented the Ithaca "dictation." When the cheering was over and we came to know Shurter, we came to call him Eddie. Even Walker would unbend enough to admit that '92 had the greatest possible Freshman President. The twentieth century Freshman Presidents do not have a tenth of the Class work to do that rested on Shurter's shoulders. Those were days that tried our wisdom, and made us show if there was grit, tact and energy enough in us to go ahead with life's battle. Shurter was our Captain. The old man alumnus who forgets the formative days of that first year in college is forgetting an important thing. Those days were not crude. They were not months to be forgotten. What we became as a Class was brought together then. In college Shurter was a member of Phi Gamma Delta and closed his four years by securing a Ph.B. and winning the Woodford prize in oratory. Then he went to Stanford University as Instructor in Public Speaking. But after two years there he was back, and now with a wife, Alice Burt, to whom he was married August 16, 1893. At Cornell he had the same position in our Elocution Department. In 1899 Shurter was offered the position of Professor of Public Speaking in the University of Texas and has been a great influence for twenty-three years in the training of the public speakers who have come out of that great State University. In these years he has issued various texts on Public Speaking and two works in the larger field of oratory: "Masterpieces of Modern Oratory," 1907; and "American Oratory of To-Day," 1911. Shurter has been active in the Presbyterian Church and in Freemasonry. He took the Scottish Rite and is a Shriner. A new career opened for Professor Shurter with the creation of the Arnold Foundation at Dallas, Texas in connection with the Southern Methodist University. This Arnold Foundation is the creation of a fund known as the George

F. and Ora Nixon Arnold Foundation amounting to $120,000 in a deed of gift in 1923. Shurter has been made the Director of its School of Citizenship and holder of the Chair of American Statesmanship. The work is still young; but the list of courses examined shows a fine program. Undergraduate scholarships at $250 a year and graduate scholarships as $500 will make it possible for many to take these opportunities. We are just as proud of Eddie as can be. In the American Citizenship Creed written by Shurter he gives six very laudable "I believes." The last one sounds like Moses Coit Tyler at his best. "I believe that as a good American citizen I must maintain continuously a civic consciousness and conscience; that my country needs my active service in times of peace no less than in war; that patriotism must be a constituent part of my religion; that no prouder boast can emanate from my lips than truly to declare, 'I am an American citizen,' and that as an American citizen the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States ought to be a actual a part of my religion as the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount." What bothers the Historian is a quotation from Shurter's letter received last September. He says he is "now engaged in training Statesmen to take the place of politicians such as John Elliott, Duane Studley and Arthur Baldwin." Are these three statesmen or politicians? And if politicians, when was Duane ever like Arthur? Good luck to you, Shurter. When you have some statesmen all ready, send up a dozen to the United States Senate, and scatter a few around in some half empty mayoralty chairs.

Rev. W. J. Sly Buried At East Avon Funeral services were held for Rev. William James Sly, D. D., formerly of Avon on Friday, January 20, at East Avon. Dr. Sly died in Washington, D. C. Rev. Sly was associate minister of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church In Washington, D. C. He was ordained into the Baptist ministry in 1895 and his first association was with Garfield Park Church at Chicago. He graduated from the University of Rochester in 1880 and Rochester Theological Seminary in 1895. He also held a degree from Denver University. Dr. Sly was at one time professor of religious education at Linfield College, McMinnville, Ore. He was prominent as a lecturer on religion and peace education. Born In London, England, he came to this country at the age of 13. He is survived by his wife, the former Grace Pierson Taintor of East Avon. Interment was in the family lot in the East Avon Cemetery.

Mrs. Grace Taintor Sly Mrs. Grace Taintor Sly died on Saturday, June 6th, after a brief illness, in the Taintor home in East Avon, in which she was born in 1869. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, June 8, from the Stephenson Funeral home in Avon, with burial in the East Avon Cemetery. The Rev. Edward Stokesberry officiated. In her youth she attended the academy in Avon, and later the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary in Lima. After four years in Cornell University, she was graduated in 1892 with the degree of A. B., and had hoped to attend Class Reunion of this year, as she had last year. She taught for a time in Owego Free Academy and Genesee State Normal School. In 1896 she married the Rev. William James Sly, and spent many years of her life in parishes of the East and West. Following the death of Dr. Sly in 1940, Mrs. Sly returned to her home in East Avon, where she lived, until her death, with her sister, Augusta Taintor. Mrs. Sly was always interested in young people and their plans for the future, and gladly helped many of them. Since 1940 she has kept in close relationship with three of them, now living in Oregon and California. During her life in this vicinity she was a loyal member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Squires Class of which, until recently, she was president; the Ladies Aid Society, the Avon Book Club, the Home Bureau, Daughters of the American Revolution, the Livingston County Historical Society, and the Alpha Phi Sorority, of which she was a charter member of the Syracuse Chapter, and Avon Chapter No. 409 Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Sly was the means of starting the Public Health Nurses' Group, and the Loan Closet, sponsored by them. She was much interested in the Children's Protective Association, and regularly attended its meeting. For many years, Mrs. Sly was a very capable and efficient correspondent for the Avon Herald News. She had a busy and happy life, giving freely of her time and ability to help others, and entertaining them in her home.

Obituary. Frances Flint Dean '92 Mrs. Philip R. Dean, of New York, died of tuberculosis at her summer home at Woodstock, Conn., on June 13. Before her marriage she was Frances Elizabeth Holeman Flint, and was born on July 28, 1870, the daughter of Wilbur and Florence Varney Flint. She was prepared for college at the Rochester Free Academy. She entered Cornell with the class of

Frederick Louis Roehrig

'92 and became a member of Delta Gamma and Phi Beta Kappa. She held one of the Sage Scholarships for women and was one of the ablest students of her class, graduating as class essayist. After a successful career as a teacher, she was married on August 17, 1901, in Geneva, Switzerland, to Philip R. Dean, Harvard '96, at present head of the department of mathematics in the Evander Childs High School, and for some years a member of the Cornell Summer School Faculty. She is survived by her husband and two children, Florence, born February 8, 1903, and Benjamin Palmer, born October 10, 1907.

Frederick Louis Roehrig (1857 – 1948) was an early 20th-century American architect. Roehrig was born in LeRoy, New York, the son of the noted "orientalist and philologist," Frederick L.O. Roehrig. He graduated from Cornell University in 1883 and also studied architecture in England and France. His architectural styles evolved over time, covering the Victorian, American Craftsman, and Neo-Classical styles. Roehrig is particularly known for his many landmark buildings in Pasadena, California, including the Hotel Green, and Pasadena Heritage has occasionally conducted tours of Roehrig's buildings. ... Roehrig's brother, Dr. G. Edward Roehrig, was organizer and president of the Zoological Society of Los Angeles. Frederick Roehrig died at age 90 in 1948.

Everett Place. Edward Everett Soule, developed the city's fourth residential park after assembling the property in three separate acts, two in 1905 and one in 1907. In his first purchase, Soule acquired the right of joint use, enjoyment, and perpetual servitude in and to Rosa Park, its riverside neighbor. At that time, Saratoga Street was still projected through. Perhaps Soule envisioned Everett as an extension of Rosa Park. The neutral ground is consistent with that of Rosa Park, but its architecture is of a later period. Soule first commissioned Daney and Waddill to subdivide the property. Their plan, dated December 1906, shows four lots on the uptown side of the street and four on the downtown side. Soule dedicated the street to the city on January 11, 1907, making Everett Place the first residential park to do so. After he purchased an additional thirty feet along Nashville Avenue, Soule had the site re-subdivided by Daney and Waddill in a plan entitled "New Subdivision of Everett Place," dated February 18, 1909. In the new plan, lots 2, 4, 6, and 8 on the uptown side of the street were changed from 75 feet by 118 feet to varying street frontages by 118 feet. It is safe to assume that Edward Soule's brother, Robert Spencer Soule, designed the Craftsman style gates and fence for the park (Figure 24). Robert, an architect, lived at 6 Everett Place. Edward Soule (Figure 25) was the son of Colonel George Soule, founder of Soule Commercial College and Literary Institute, and for many years its treasurer. Edward graduated from Soule in 1884, from Cornell University in 1888, and from Tulane Law School in 1891. He was a member of many civic and carnival organizations, including the Boston Club, Lakeshore Club, and Rex School of Design. In 1931 Soule was King of Carnival. Prior to his development of Everett Place, Soule resided at 16 Rosa Park. After opening Everett Place, he purchased the 1908 Tudor Revival residence at 2 Everett Place originally built for Ernest Bornemann at a cost of $14,000, according to the design of R. Spencer Soule (Figure 26). The remaining original houses on the street were built in 1909.

W549 William Albert Finch

Death of Professor Finch. For Twenty Years a Member of the Law Faculty. William Albert Finch, A. B., '80, who had been for twenty years a member of the faculty of the College of Law, died last Sunday afternoon, March 31, at the home of his sister in Brooklyn. He was on leave of absence from the University, having been compelled by ill health to give up work last spring. His trouble was a valvular disease of the heart, complicated with Bright's disease. He went last summer to the Battle Creek Sanitarium and remained there till December, when he was advised to go to Florida for the winter. While he was on his way south he became worse and went to his sister's home in Brooklyn. He remained there till his death. The body was brought to Ithaca for burial. Professor Finch was born at Newark, N. J., on June 8, 1855, the son of G. A. and Anna (Woodruff) Finch. He was educated at the Ithaca Academy and entered Cornell in 1876, graduating in 1880 with the degree of A. B. He studied law in the office of Judge Francis M. Finch and was admitted to the bar in May, 1880. He practiced in Ithaca until September, 1891, being associated for a large part of that time with the late Samuel D. Halliday '70. In 1891 Mr. Finch was appointed assistant professor of law in the University. A year later he was made associate professor, and in 1895 he was promoted to a full professorship. His field was the law of property, and in this he was considered one of the highest authorities in the state. He was the author of "Cases on the Law of Property in Land," a syllabus on the law of property in land and sundry other syllabi for students. Professor Finch was unmarried. For many years he lived in the Cascadilla building. He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa society and of the Delta Chi fraternity.

A bronze tablet in memory of the late Professor W. A. Finch has been placed in the law library. It was bought with a fund raised by a committee of which Professor Stagg was the chairman. It was provided when the canvass for subscriptions began that any surplus should be used to buy as much as possible of Professor Finch's library for the college. Enough money was raised to pay for the tablet and to buy a good share of the library. The inscription on the tablet is: "To William Albert Finch, Cornell, A.B., 1880, who for twenty-one years, 1891- 1912, here taught the law with devotion and insight, this memorial, in grateful recognition of his loyal service, is erected by his students and colleagues. Professor Finch's Library. Committee Reports Purchase of 367 Volumes for the College of Law. The committee from the law school, consisting of Professor C. T. Stagg, John L. Senior and Frederick P. Murphy, which raised a fund for a memorial to the late Professor William A. Finch and for the purchase of as large a part as possible of Professor Finch's library, has reported to the Board of Trustees as follows: "The undersigned committee, acting on behalf of the present and former members of the Faculty of the College of Law, and many former students of this college, tenders as a gift to the University a bronze tablet to the memory of the late Professor William Albert Finch. This tablet has been erected in Boardman Hall. "The committee also tenders as a gift to the University the following volumes from the library of Professor Finch: New York Common Law Reports, 18 volumes; New York Chancery Reports, 7 volumes; Lansing's Reports, 7 volumes; Hun's Reports, 92 volumes; Appellate Division Reports, 150 volumes; miscellaneous reports, 76 volumes; Court of Appeals Reports (Volumes 189-205 inclusive), 17 volumes; total, 367 volumes. "These volumes are for the use of the College of Law. A suitable bookplate will be inserted in each volume showing the source and purpose of the gift."

William Albert Finch—March 31, 1912. Professor William Albert Finch, a member of the Faculty of Cornell University for a period of over twenty years, died on March 31st, 1912. At its first meeting after his death, this Faculty desires to inscribe upon its records an acknowledgement of the great loss which the University has sustained by the death of Professor Finch. Professor Finch was graduated from this University in 1880 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and was the same year admitted to the bar, having been engaged in the study of the law during his undergraduate days in the office of Francis M. Finch. He immediately took up the practice of law in Ithaca, becoming a member of the firm of Halliday and Finch. Appointed in 1891 to an assistant professorship in law, Professor Finch was the first graduate of Cornell University to return as a member of the Faculty of the College of Law. He was promoted the following year to an associate professorship, and in 1895 to the full professorship which he held until his death. During the years 1896-1901 he acted as secretary of the Faculty of the College of Law, having full charge of the administrative work of the College during that time. Specializing in the law of real property—a branch of the law requiring the closest application for that comprehensive mastery which was his—his presentation of it in classroom and through his writings was clear and illuminating. Yet he was no narrow specialist; it is an indication of the breadth of his scholarly interests and sympathies that he was accustomed to refresh and recreate his mind by constant studies in science and the classics. Never robust, and suffering from ill health during the larger part of his life, especially during the last years, he nevertheless entered into his daily task with a spirit serene but enthusiastic, a self-sacrifice brave but unostentatious, that brought friendly cheer and inspiration to his students and his colleagues. Frank Irvine, Chairman, C. T. Stagg, Ernest Merritt.

Obituary. J. Fremont Thompson. In the death of John Fremont Thompson which occurred at his home at Oneonta at about 10 o'clock Saturday evening, that city loses one of its most prominent citizens, Otsego county the senior member of the legal fraternity, and Cooperstown a distinguished friend. Mr. Thompson suffered a slight stroke of paralysis about three years ago, but the immediate cause of his death was a cerebral hemorrhage which he suffered at about 8 o'clock that morning and from which he never regained consciousness. Mr. Thompson was the son of the Hon. Jerome and Minerva Thompson and he was born at Candor, N. Y., August 22, 1856. He was educated at Cornell and Columbia, resided at Candor, Elmira and Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and established himself in the practice of law at Oneonta in 1895. Recently he retired from the active practice of his profession. With the cooperation of associates he organized and operated the Oneonta Telephone company which later was merged with the Bell system and among his outstanding achievements in a life of long and useful service to the city was the drafting of the charter under which that community assumed the functions of a city. His largeness of heart was manifested in many ways and especially in a keen interest in young men, many of whom in a quiet and unostentatious manner he assisted in securing an education while he helped many others who had taken one false step to rehabilitate themselves and to become useful and honored members of society. He adroitly often concealed the identity of the one assisting and there are some who will never know that he was their benefactor and friend. Discussing his character the Oneonta Star of Monday said most truthfully: "Mr. Thompson was a close student of men and affairs and a wide and discriminating reader of the public press, which exceptionally fitted him as leader of the current events class of the Woman's club. The ladies highly appreciated his devoted attention for years to the class, when not traveling or wintering in the south or west. In the old Fortnightly club he was deeply interested and his comments upon the subjects presented by the speakers were illuminating and always anticipated by the other members; Conspicuously a social man, a lover of his fellows, and actuated always by a desire to serve, his memory will long be cherished by all who knew him." Mr. Thompson was a member of the First Presbyterian church of Oneonta, of which he was also a trustee, of Zeta Psi fraternity at Cornell University, of the board of directors of the Oneonta Country club, serving that institution especially efficiently as chairman of the house committee, and of the Otsego Bar association. He was marshal of the state court of claims for many years, gaining a wide circle of friends among the attorneys appearing before that court by his uniform courtesy and consideration. In November, 1887, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage with Miss Kate Lane, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abner Lane of Cooperstown. Her death occurred in 1915 and two years later he married Miss Blanche House of Oneonta, who had been his devoted wife and companion for the years since. Surviving him, in addition to the widow, are one daughter, Ruth, wife of County Judge Lee D. VanWoert of Oneonta, and one sister, Mrs. Cora Farnham, widow of the late Dr. L. D. Farnham, late of Binghamton, she being now a resident of Westport, Conn. An older brother, Norman Thompson, was until his death, about six years ago, a prominent resident of Elmira. The funeral services were held from the First Presbyterian church at Oneonta on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial was made at the family plot in Riverside cemetery in that city.

perstown, offered the following memorial tribute to the memory of the late John Fremont Thompson of Oneonta, and moved that it be placed upon the records of the Court and a copy sent to the members of the family: "The passing of John Fremont Thompson brings to a close the life of one of our most beloved and inspiring citizens. He was a man, kindly, cheerful and charitable in the larger sense and most beloved by those who knew him best. He was born in the village of Candor, N. Y., educated, in the public schools, a graduate of Cornell University in the class of 1877, and of Columbia Law School in 1879. Thereafter he entered upon the practice of the law, and continued actively in that practice until a few years preceding his death. "About the year 1903 he was appointed marshal of the Court of Claims, and served in that capacity until 1911. He occupied an eminent position in his profession, and was highly regarded for his ability and learning, both by the bench and the bar. "He was possessed of a strong sense of civic duty and responsibility. It was largely due to his efforts that Oneonta was incorporated as a city. He and other associates spent many months gathering information and data from which the present city charter was compiled. It stands today as a monument of his thought and study. It has been pronounced by students of municipal government as the most workable charter in the state of New York: The Non-Partisan Commissions' system which has worked so effectively to the advantage of Oneonta, was conceived by Mr. Thompson and his associates. "He lived out his life according to his own plan. From a country boyhood, he succeeded in working out a well-rounded career to its complete fulfillment. An Inspiration. "He was an inspiration to those who were associated with him, either in the practice of law or in his civic or social life. A life such as his cannot end without a sense of loss to those who have been associated with him, but in a very real sense he had so far completed his work that it might be truly said of him that he had 'fought a good fight and finished his course.' His memory will remain as a choice possession for his family and for the multitude of friends who knew and loved him." In presenting the memorial as the resolution of the County Bar association Mr. Seybolt spoke with feeling of his personal associations with the deceased as did Harris L. Cooke, Judge Sheldon H. Close, District Attorney Donald H. Grant; Attorney Clermonte G. Tennant, and President VanHorne. All paid a high tribute to his high character, his eminent civic and public service and the distinction which he won in his profession, and all expressed a keen sense of personal loss in his death. Mr. VanHorne, stating that he considered Mr. Thompson's as one of the worthwhile and lasting friendships of his life, said that he ever found him upholding to the best of his ability the interests of his clients—never over-urging, never minimizing, and never exaggerating. He was a lawyer, declared Mr. VanHorne, who was ready at all times to meet his opponents fairly, and if the other parties were reasonable settlements could be made on a fair basis; but if a trial was necessary he prosecuted it with great ability and almost invariably with satisfactory results. Mr. VanHorne spoke with appreciation of his staunch support of the Otsego County Bar association and pointed to his career as one which all young men, both lawyers and laymen, might well emulate. "Essentially a Lawyer" "My own contacts with Mr. Thompson," said Judge VanWoert, "as you know were very close and intimate." The Judge said that he was an extremely modest man who sought to avoid anything in the nature of praise or eulogy and mentioned the fact that before his death, although he was a lifelong member of the Presbyterian church, he directed that the service of the Episcopal church be used at the funeral, as the latter makes no provision for a eulogy. He was essentially a lawyer, however, the Judge asserted, and expressed the conviction that he would not disapprove of action such as was being taken by the Bar association at this time. Declaring that Mr. Thompson believed his profession imposed upon him a trust for his fellowman, the Court declared him a man four-square; an able advocate, a wise counselor, a thoughtful teacher and a loyal public servant. The compensation he received for his services was the last thing he considered, many times to his own disadvantage, said the Judge, and quoted the lines of Edgar Guest's "Compensation," which he said he had observed the deceased frequently read with thoughtful expression in its framed position in the Court's Chambers at Oneonta. He directed that the resolutions be spread upon the minutes and that a transcription of the remarks of the members of the bar be filed with the records of the Court as a permanent testimonial to the memory of the deceased.

James P. Upham, Fourth son of George B. Upham, was born October 17, 1827, and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1850. Soon after his graduation he acquired an interest in the iron foundry and machine shop, which has since grown into the Sullivan Machinery Company, of which he was president twenty-five years, up to 1892. He is an owner in and president of the Brandon, Vt., Italian Marble Company, and has also been extensively engaged in farming. He was a representative in the New Hampshire legislature in 1865 and 1866, and is warden of Union church. He has five children—three sons and two daughters. Of his sons, J. Duncan is treasurer of the Sullivan Machinery Company; George B. is a lawyer in Boston; and Samuel R. is a practicing physician here.

(XI) James Phineas, the fifth son of George Baxter and Mary (Duncan) Upham, was born in Claremont, October 27, 1827. He married, November 5, 1851, at South Berwick, Maine, Elizabeth Walker, daughter of Captain Samuel Rice (formerly of Portsmouth) and Ruth Foster Brewster. She was born December 24, 1831, and died in Claremont, April 11, 1876. It is observed that she was gifted with singular beauty and rare graces of mind and manner and that her domestic virtues and christian life and example were none the less conspicuous and endearing. James Phineas Upham was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1850. Soon after his graduation he acquired an interest in the iron foundry and machine shop, later the Sullivan Machine Company, which he organized in 1869, and of which he was president for twenty-five years. He was a representative in the New Hampshire legislature in 1865-6, and was warden of Union Church (Episcopal), West Claremont. He died April 8, 1895. Children, all born in Claremont: 1. James Duncan, born November 7, 1853, married Katherine Deane, of Claremont. He graduated at Cornell University, in 1874; is treasurer of the Sullivan Machine Company. Two children—Katherine and Elizabeth. 2. George Baxter, born April 9, 1855, married Cornelia Alice Preston, daughter of E. C. Preston, of Dover, New Hampshire. He was graduated from Cornell University in 1874, and Harvard Law School in 1876; admitted to the Suffolk county bar in Boston February, 1877. In 1890 he engaged in the practice of law, firm of Upham & Proctor, Equitable Building, Boston. Two children. Margaret Ruth and Preston. 3. Ruth Brewster, born February 24, 1858, married Robert Upham, and resides in New York. 4. Samuel Rice. 5. Elizabeth, born September 1, 1868, married (first) Henry C. Radford; (second) Richard Dana. lives in New York.

George B. Upham, Noted Historical Authority, Dead. Boston Attorney, Claremont Summer Resident Many Years. George Baxter Upham, prominent attorney and man of affairs, of Claremont, died Sunday night at the age of 87 after a brief illness at his Boston residence, 233 Bay State road. A graduate of Cornell and of the Harvard Law school in 1876, in his early career as an attorney he took an active interest in the public affairs of Boston. As a member of the Public Franchise League, of which Joseph B. Eastman was then secretary, he was associated with Louis Brandeis, Morton Prince, and others, all of whom were interested in municipal affairs. Spending many summers in Europe, he brought home ideas as a result of his observations. He was known as the “father of the subway” because he was the first to advocate its building and against opposition fought for it in legislative hearings and in newspaper letters. In the same way he introduced and carried through the movement to limit the height of buildings and first proposed in America the one-way street. These activities brought him in contact with leaders, and out of a luncheon club of those who met was formed the Tavern club, of which he was a charter member. Endowed Memorial. In the year 1911-12 he made an eight months' trip around the world, becoming much interested in collecting Oriental porcelains and tiles. As a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Saint-Gaudens he was the prime factor in the organization and endowment of the Saint-Gaudens Memorial, which preserves for the public the home and studios at Cornish. It was through Mr. Upham's interest in Saint-Gaudens that a tablet was erected in his memory in Rome, Italy, where he studied as a young man and he began his career as a sculptor. Mr. Upham was born at Claremont, the second son of James Phineas Upham, founder of the Sullivan Machinery company. During this later life he retired to live on the ancestral acres at Claremont in the home which he built in 1906-07. It was through his love of this region that many articles of historical value were written of Claremont and the surrounding valleys, mountains, and highways. He contributed to the Daily Eagle many interesting and valuable accounts of the earliest known days of New Hampshire and Vermont, obtaining authentic material from photostate copies brought to this country by him from the British Museum. He was a widely known historian and was a former vice president of the New Hampshire Historical Society. No article or story was ever written by him without months of careful and accurate verified research. In his earlier days he was an ardent yachtsman and navigator and spent many summers cruising along the Maine coast. Collector. A collector of etchings and engravings, his knowledge of them was tremendous; he had studied and collected them since he was a young man. When the 150th anniversary of the founding of Union Church at West Claremont was observed in 1923, he wrote and staged the pageant given by the townspeople. In 1928, he wrote and produced a dramatization of an important event of the town's early history, “Tory Trial,” believed to have been the only judicial trial of Tories in America. Mr. Upham comes of the Upham family that first settled in what is now Malden about 1636. The original Upham homestead which dates from the 17th century, still stands there, maintained by the Upham Memorial society. Mr. Upham is survived by his widow, Cornelia Preston Upham; a son, Preston Upham of United-Carr Fastener Corporation; four grandchildren, Porter Sargent, Mrs. Benjamin Ferris, James Baxter, and James Phineas Upham; a brother, James Duncan Upham; and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Upham, both of Claremont. Another grandson, Upham Sargent, deceased, was an explorer and traveler. A private funeral service was held this afternoon at his home in Boston, and a memorial service will be held in Claremont in the spring or early summer.

G. B. Upham Is Dead at 87. Father of Boston Subway System. George Baxter Upham, 87, former lawyer, widely-traveled and “father of the Boston subway system,” died yesterday at his residence, 233 Bay State road, following a brief illness.

A graduate of Cornell and of Harvard Law School in 1876, he spent many summers in Europe and brought back with him many ideas for municipal betterment. Associated with Brandeis. Mr. Upham was first to advocate the building of subways in Boston and against opposition fought for it in legislative hearings and through the press. He also introduced and fostered the movement to limit the height of buildings and first proposed in America the one-way street. In his early career as an attorney he was exceedingly active in public affairs. As a member of the Public Franchise League, of which Joseph B. Eastman then was secretary, he was associated with Louis D. Brandeis, who became U. S. Supreme Court justice, Morton Prince and others associated with Boston progress. He was a charter member of the Tavern Club. In 1911-12, he made an eight-month trip around the world, becoming interested in and collecting Oriental porcelains and tiles. As a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus St. Gaudens, he was the prime factor in the organization and endowment of the St. Gaudens Memorial, which preserves for the public the home and studios at Cornish, N. H. Mr. Upham was a native of Claremont, N. H., And during his latter years retired to live on his ancestral estate. He was a son of the late James Phineas Upham, founder of the Sullivan Machinery Company, and came from the upper family which first settled in what is now Malden in 1636. The original Upham homestead, which dates from the 17th century, still stands in Malden and is maintained by the Upham Memorial Society. He is survived by his widow, Cornelia Preston Upham; a son, Preston Upham of the United-Carr Fastener Corporation, and four grandchildren. A private funeral service will be held at his home here at 2 P. M. Tomorrow, with a memorial service in Claremont in the spring or early summer.

Benjamin S. Miller, a wealthy ranchman of Binghamton (sic), N. Y., explorer and lifelong Republican, has announced he will vote for Bryan. Mr. Miller gives as his reasons that while in Alaska he felt; and saw the oppression exercised by the National American Transportation company of Chicago, in which Secretary Gage is interested, and the Alaska Commercial company of Kansas City, with which Secretary Alger is connected. Mr. Miller states that these concerns are grinding the miners, both on the matter of supplies and transportation so that life is made a greater hardship. Mr. Miller says reports of the distressing conditions in Alaska have been sent to Washington with a request for Investigation, but have always been pigeon-holed by some influence in the treasury department. He lays this to Secretary Gage, whose son is an employee of the transportation company in Alaska.

Dartmouth College. William Jarvis. Born 1849-9-15; died 1910-4-16. He died of an apoplectic shock after he had apparently gone to sleep. From 1897 until sometime later than 1904 he was U. S. Consul at Milan, Italy, and on the expiration of his term of office he returned to his home at Claremont, N. H., and retired from active pursuit of his profession as a dentist. He was beloved at home for his genial ways, business principles and the good word he had for everyone. He kept up an active interest in the lines of sportmanship in which he had always had an ardent interest, and we know him when in college as a crack wing shot. He was a great collector of rare antiques. In the Sportsmen's Review giving an account of his death, I find his picture, showing the same fine face, dark hair and long

He was survived by his wife.

Time Was... Tuition Cost Fifteen Dollars Seventy-Three Years

Ago. Alden Sherry '15 sent us this receipt for tuition, issued to his father, the late Arthur G. Sherry '77, when he entered the Science Course as a Freshman. It is signed by Joseph W. Williams, who was Assistant Treasurer of the University, 1871-74, and Treasurer until he died in 1879. The Register for 1873-4 lists tuition at $15 a term for three terms; room, board, lights, and fuel at about $220; with cost of textbooks and stationery, $20 to $30 a year; the total, less than $300 a year. No explanation is made of the "depreciation" fee of 50 cents. Students now pay $500 a year tuition in most Colleges, with fees from $60 a year up; board, room, laundry, and books are estimated to cost from $400 to $800 a year: total, $960 up. Grandson of this early student is Forbes A. Sherry '33.

While working on a death register of Confederate soldiers during the Peninsula Campaign, some time ago I had come across a letter from a member of the 7th Louisiana Infantry Battalion that was published in the June 18, 1862 issue of the New Orleans Daily Picayune. "...This morning I received from Mr. Mallory news from you all, through dear sis. It was a ray of light through clouds as dark as midnight. It was a balm to my bleeding heart. I was to have seen you all about the 1st of May, just the time our beloved city was taken. On the 5th we fought all day at Williamsburg, but God granted that but one Chasseur should be wounded. You have heard the Yankee account of this battle. It is a lie. ... The sad loss of our battalion was, out of 196 men and officers from 95 to 100 were killed and wounded. A list I furnish of our company: ... Albert Hoa, kicked in the mouth by a Yankee."

The Game of Billiards. A FINE GAME AT NEW ORLEANS—HENRY MILLER AVERAGES OVER TWENTY AT THREE-BALL.—Our New Orleans correspondent sends us the results of the match for the State championship between Henry Miller and Albert Hoa. The game was three-ball, 500 points up, and Miller scored a hollow victory, averaging 20 20-24, and beating Hoa 320 points. Best runs—Miller, 155, 87, 41; Hoa, 36, 20. Played on a 5x10 carom table.

Considerable has been said in billiard circles lately about cushion caroms, and Albert Hoa, who has been practicing the game, professes his willingness to play any one in Chicago. It is alleged, however, that when anyone suggests money to him, he isn't there. If he wants to play a game he can get an opponent.

Billiards. The second game in the pending tournament for the championship of Chicago was played in the presence of a large attendance last evening. The contestants were Albert Hoa, the well-known professional, and Miller, an amateur. The latter labored under the disadvantage of having taken all his practice and play on a 4 1/2 x 9 table, for which reason he was away off at to the angles, and could not get into the corner from two cushions on any terms. Hoa was in fair form, and his draws were something excellent—occasionally wonderful. He never was headed after the fourth shot, and won with the utmost ease. The last half of the game was devoted by him to some beautiful fancy work, which he would hardly have ventured on with less of a lead. Miller is, however, a clever player, and has a quick eye and good execution; he will make much nearer 300 in some of the coming games than he did last evening.

Obituary. J. Fremont Thompson. In the death of John Fremont Thompson which occurred at his home at Oneonta at about 10 o'clock Saturday evening, that city loses one of its most prominent citizens, Otsego county the senior member of the legal fraternity, and Cooperstown a distinguished friend. Mr. Thompson suffered a slight stroke of paralysis about three years ago, but the immediate cause of his death was a cerebral hemorrhage which he suffered at about 8 o'clock that morning and from which he never regained consciousness. Mr. Thompson was the son of the Hon. Jerome and Minerva Thompson and he was born at Candor, N. Y., August 22, 1856. He was educated at Cornell and Columbia, resided at Candor, Elmira and Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and established himself in the practice of law at Oneonta in 1895. Recently he retired from the active practice of his profession. With the cooperation of associates he organized and operated the Oneonta Telephone company which later was merged with the Bell system and among his outstanding achievements in a life of long and useful service to the city was the drafting of the charter under which that community assumed the functions of a city. His largeness of heart was manifested in many ways and especially in a keen interest in young men, many of whom in a quiet and unostentatious manner he assisted in securing an education while he helped many others who had taken one false step to rehabilitate themselves and to become useful and honored members of society. He adroitly often concealed the identity of the one assisting and there are some who will never know that he was their benefactor and friend. Discussing his character the Oneonta Star of Monday said most truthfully: "Mr. Thompson was a close student of men and affairs and a wide and discriminating reader of the public press, which exceptionally fitted him as leader of the current events class of the Woman's club. The ladies highly appreciated his devoted attention for years to the class, when not traveling or wintering in the south or west. In the old Fortnightly club he was deeply interested and his comments upon the subjects presented by the speakers were illuminating and always anticipated by the other members; Conspicuously a social man, a lover of his fellows, and actuated always by a desire to serve, his memory will long be cherished by all who knew him." Mr. Thompson was a member of the First Presbyterian church of Oneonta, of which he was also a trustee, of Zeta Psi fraternity at Cornell University, of the board of directors of the Oneonta Country club, serving that institution especially efficiently as chairman of the house committee, and of the Otsego Bar association. He was marshal of the state court of claims for many years, gaining a wide circle of friends among the attorneys appearing before that court by his uniform courtesy and consideration. In November, 1887, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage with Miss Kate Lane, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abner Lane of Cooperstown. Her death occurred in 1915 and two years later he married Miss Blanche House of Oneonta, who had been his devoted wife and companion for the years since. Surviving him, in addition to the widow, are one daughter, Ruth, wife of County Judge Lee D. VanWoert of Oneonta, and one sister, Mrs. Cora Farnham, widow of the late Dr. L. D. Farnham, late of Binghamton, she being now a resident of Westport, Conn. An older brother, Norman Thompson, was until his death, about six years ago, a prominent resident of Elmira. The funeral services were held from the First Presbyterian church at Oneonta on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial was made at the family plot in Riverside cemetery in that city.

Obituary. Mrs. Cynthia M. St. John. Mrs. Cynthia Morgan St. John, wife of Henry A. St. John, formerly Mayor of Ithaca, sister of the late Edward J. Morgan, jr., '77, and mother of E. Morgan St. John '11, died at Clifton Springs on Sunday, August 10, aged sixty- six years. Since 1883 Mrs. St. John had been deeply interested in the life work of the poet Wordsworth. The library which she collected is known both in this country and abroad as probably the most comprehensive of its kind, certainly the most complete Wordsworth collection in America, comprising practically every American and every English edition, except a few of the more recent. Many of the editions are very rare. The library has been of great interest to members of the Cornell University Faculty and other persons of literary taste, who were always welcome to make use of its valuable materials. She was the author of "Wordsworth for the Young," published in 1891.

Cynthia Woodward Morgan St John; Birth: Oct. 11, 1853; Death: Aug. 10, 1919; (Ithaca Daily News; Ithaca, NY. August 11, 1919. page 3.); Mrs. Henry A. St. John Dies, At Clifton, Ithaca Woman, Whose Home was Center of Culture, Succumbs to Pneumonia – Funeral to be Private. Mrs. Henry A. St. John, aged 65 years, who had been undergoing treatment at the Clifton Springs sanitarium for about three weeks, died at 4 o'clock yesterday morning from an attack of pneumonia which developed on Thursday night. Her condition had become critical about an hour before and Mr. St. John, who had been in Clifton Springs since Friday, was summoned to her bedside by the attending nurse. Mrs. St. John was Miss Cynthia Woodward Morgan, daughter of the late Dr. Edward J. Morgan and Ann Bruyn Morgan, and granddaughter of the late Judge Andrew D. W. Bruyn, a former member of congress from this district. Mrs. St. John was born and had always lived at North Cayuga and Buffalo streets. The St. John home was the mecca of both townspeople and university people of literary tastes. It was known both in the United States and abroad that Mrs. St. John had gathered together the most comprehensive Wordsworth library in this country practically every American and English edition, except the most recent ones being included in the collection. Many of the editions are very rare and were obtained only after long and painstaking search. The gathering of the collection began in 1883 with a nucleus of two editions. Besides her husband the immediate survivors are a daughter, Miss Sheila St. John, and a son, E. Morgan St. John. The funeral services, which are to be strictly private, will be held at the family home, 302 North Cayuga street, and friends are requested to omit flowers. JAMES DUNCAN UPHAM, Chairman of the Programme Committee for the anniversary celebration, and a leading business man of Claremont for many years, is a native of the town, born November 7, 1853, a son of James P. and Elizabeth Walker (Rice) Upham. His mother was a daughter of Capt. Samuel Rice of South Berwick, Me., formerly of Portsmouth, N. H., and his father a son of Hon. George Baxter Upham, lawyer and congressman. He received his preparatory education in the Claremont schools, and Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, where he graduated in 1870. He entered Dartmouth College in the following autumn, but transferred to Cornell University in the freshman year, and graduated B.S., from the latter institution in 1874. He then entered the employ of the

Sullivan Machine Company at Claremont as clerk and paymaster and was thus engaged until chosen treasurer and manager of the Brandon Italian Marble Company, in the summer of 1886 when he removed to Brandon, Vt., where he remained five years, returning to Claremont in the summer of 1891 to assume the position of treasurer of the Sullivan Machine Company (now Sullivan Machinery Company), and has since remained, as the active manager of the most important industrial enterprise in the town and county. For many years past Mr. Upham has been a director and the president of the Claremont National Bank. He is an active member of the Claremont Board of Trade, of which he has been a director, vice-president and president. Since October, 1912 he has been a director of the Boston & Maine railroad, and for the past two years, president of the New Hampshire Manufacturers' Association. A Republican of progressive tendencies, he has been active in political life for some years past, and was a member of the Executive Council of the State during the administration of Governor Floyd in 1907-8. In October, 1882, he was united in marriage with Miss Kate Hall Deane of Claremont. They have two daughters, Katharine Duncan, now the wife of Roy D. Hunter of Claremont, and Sarah Elizabeth, who married Percy R. Brooks, of Guantanamo, now of San Manuel, Cuba.

J. D. Upham, 94, Former S. M. Co. Treasurer, Dies. Claremonter Active In Civic, Financial Circles Many Years. Claremont, Jan. 19—James Duncan Upham, 94, for many years treasure of the Sullivan Machinery company and active in civic, financial, and political circles here and throughout New Hampshire, died Saturday at the Bellows Falls Inn, where he had been a patient for a little more than a year due to failing health. During his long residence here, Mr. Upham was treasurer and director of the Sullivan company for over 30 years, president of the Claremont National Bank for 25 years, trustee of public funds for many years, a past president of the Claremont Board of Trade, and held numerous other local and state offices. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Trinity Episcopal church, with Rt. Rev. John T. Dallas of Concord, Bishop of New Hampshire, and Rev. William P. Neal officiating. Services at the grave at Union Cemetery, West Claremont, will be private, and the family has requested that flowers be omitted. Oldest KUA alumnus. Born at "The Uplands," West Claremont, November 7, 1853, the son of James Phineas and Elizabeth Walker (Rice) Upham, Mr. Upham attended local grade schools, Miss Chamberlin's Academy, and Stevens high school. He was the oldest living alumnus of Kimball Union academy in Meridian, a member of the class of 1870. Subsequently he enrolled at Dartmouth college and following a year's study there transferred in January, 1871, to Cornell university. Here he was active in athletics, particularly baseball, and was a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity. He received his B. S. degree from Cornell in June, 1874. In August of that year he entered the employ of the Northern railroad at Concord, returning the following year to Claremont as clerk and paymaster of the Sullivan Machine company, a post which he held until 1886. During this period he continued his active interest in baseball, and pitched for the Claremont club against Newport in a famous game in 1875 which Claremont won by a score of

22 to 16, for which victory members of the winning team received suitable trophies. In 1866 (sic) Mr. Upham became treasurer and manager of the random Italian Marble company of Brandon, Vermont, and in 1885 became its president, an office which he held until 1909, when the company was sold. Sullivan Official. In the meantime, however, he became treasurer and a member of the board of directors of the Sullivan Machine company in June, 1891. In April of the following year, when it was reorganized as the Sullivan Machinery Company, he retained both of these offices under the late president F. K. Copeland. The post of treasurer he held until February, 1931, when he resigned, continuing as director until his resignation in March, 1944. In 1913 he became a director of the Boston and Marine railroad and in 1941 was reelected for his 28th consecutive term. In 1913 also he became one of the organizers of the United Life and Accident Insurance company of Concord, of which he remained a director until his death. Mr. Upham was a past president of the New Hampshire Manufacturers association, having served for many years as a member of the directorate, and a former member of the New Hampshire Bankers association. He was a past president of the Claremont Board of Trade, predecessor of the present Chamber of Commerce. He became a member of the board of directors of the Claremont National bank in January, 1883, served as its vice president from 1896 to 1905, and as its president from September, 1905, until 1930. Elected as trustee of public funds in 1903, he retained that post for nearly 30 years. Executive Counselor. Actively interested in politics for many years, Mr. Upham was a member of the New Hampshire executive council in 1907-08, serving under Gov. Charles M. Floyd, and was a delegate to the state constitutional convention in 1912. During World War I he served as a member of the New Hampshire Public Safety Committee of 100 and as chairman of the Claremont Liberty Loan committee. Other civic activities included service as president for many years of the local branch of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of which he was one of the organizers; as an officer of the Claremont Airport Corporation of about 20 years ago; as a member of the advisory board of the Ladies Union Aid society; and as president of the West Claremont Burying Ground Association. Mr. Upham was an active member for many years of the New England Council, being named its New Hampshire representative in 1926. He was a director of the New Hampshire Tuberculosis association, and served as Sullivan county chairman of the Protection of New Hampshire Forests in 1927. He was actively interested also in such state groups as the New Hampshire Historical society, the Red Cross, the New Hampshire Children's Aid and Protective society, the Audubon society, and others. He was a member of the Cornell New England club. Philanthropist. On October 25, 1882, at Hartford Conn.,

he married Kate Hall Deane of Claremont, whose death occurred here July 23, 1925. In her memory he established a free bed at the Claremont General hospital, and donated funds for a bed in his name also. He was interested in many philanthropic causes, to which he gave generously. In 1925 he inaugurated a safety essay contest here, and four years later established a students' aid fund. He was affiliated with Trinity Episcopal Church of Claremont and with Union Church at West Claremont. Mr. Upham was the brother of the late George B. Upon, well-known Claremont and Boston resident, whose death occurred in 1943. Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Roy Deneale Hunter of Claremont; two grandsons, Duncan Upham Hunter and Deneale Hunter; and two great-grandchildren, Duncan Upham Hunter, Jr., and Susan Hunter. A second daughter, Mrs. Percy Reddington Brooks, died in Cuba in 1927.

New Hampshire is proud to reckon among her younger sons Henry Webster Stevens, who was born in Concord, March 5, 1853, the son of Lyman D. Stevens and Achsah Pollard French. He was fitted for college at Phillips Andover academy, and graduated from Dartmouth college in the class of 1875. He took his degree in law at the Boston University law school in 1877 and immediately began the practice of law in Concord, in partnership with his father, with whom he had studied law, having been admitted to the bar in 1878. This partnership continued until June, 1879, when he became a partner of Edward G. Leach, which relation still continues. In addition to the demands of a growing clientage, Mr. Stevens has become identified with many other enterprises. He has been a trustee of the city library, and during the years 1885-86 was city solicitor of Concord. In 1887-88 he was a member of the house of representatives, and at the present time is an alderman of the city of Concord. He is a trustee of the Margaret Pillsbury general hospital, vice-president of the Mechanics National bank, trustee of the Merrimack County Savings bank, treasurer of the Firemen's Relief association, and of St. Mary's school. Mr. Stevens has cast his fortunes in with those of his native state, and has reflected his own measure of credit upon New Hampshire, who holds dear those who make the state of their birth the state of their residence, and who withholds no honors from those who win them.

HON. HENRY WEBSTER STEVENS. A prominent lawyer and business man of the Capital City is the Hon. Henry Webster Stevens, son of the late ex-Mayor Lyman D. Stevens and Achsah Pollard (French) Stevens, the latter born in Concord, September 26, 1822. Mr. Stevens was born in Concord March 5, 1853, and was educated in the public schools of Concord, at Phillips Andover Academy and at Dartmouth College, graduating from the latter institution in 1875. He at once began the study of law in his father's office and, later, entered the Boston University Law School, from which institution he received the degree of LL.B. He was admitted to the New Hampshire bar in January, 1878, and immediately formed a law partnership with his father. In June, 1879, Mr. Stevens formed a partnership with Edward G. Leach of Franklin which was continued until 1900, when Benjamin W. Couch was admitted to the firm. Mr. Leach retired from the firm a few years later, and in January, 1915, Mr. Stevens' brother, William L. Stevens, became the junior member of the present firm of Stevens, Couch & Stevens. It is interesting to note at this particular time that the office now occupied by the above-named firm has been used continuously since 1847 by Lyman D. Stevens and the succeeding law firms. In politics Mr. Stevens has always been a faithful and earnest Republican. In 1885-86 he was chosen city solicitor (a position previously held by his father in 1855-56). In 1887 he was elected from Ward Five as a representative to the General Court and in 1894 served as alderman from the same ward. In 1901 he represented District No. 10 in the State Senate, serving as chairman of the Committee on Banks and as a member of the Judiciary and Revision of Laws committees. He has been a trustee of the public library and served as trustee and president of the Margaret Pillsbury General Hospital. At present Mr. Stevens is vice-president of the Mechanicks National Bank, the Merrimack County Savings Bank of Concord, a director of the Board of Trade Building Company and of the Concord Light & Power Company. He is a member of the Wonolancet Club of Concord and the University clubs of Boston and New York. On October 27, 1881, he was married to Ellen Tuck Nelson, second daughter of William R. Nelson and Abby Elizabeth Tuck, of Peekskill, N. Y.

Scientific Class. Walter Parker, Σ. Δ. Φ. Walter Parker was born December 16, 1852, to Joseph C. and Emily (Ward) Parker, at Barre, Vt., where his father was a farmer. In 1857 his father moved to Quechee, Vt., to engage in the manufacture of woolens. Parker was another Kimball Union Academy student, graduating in '70, to go directly to Dartmouth. After leaving Dartmouth he returned to Quechee and started to master the mysteries of woolen manufacture and the secrets which contribute to financial success in that business in Vermont. Two years later his success justified his becoming a member of the firm of J. C. Parker & Co., with satisfaction to all the parties interested. Other facts related to his life are as profound secrets as those of the woolen business. It is known, however, that he has never married, and to the outside world he appears at peace with all men, including himself.

W591 Daniel Willard Fiske

Professor Willard Fiske. Sketch of His Life, Based on Remarks of Ambassador White. Daniel Willard Fiske, formerly professor of Northern European languages at Cornell University, died suddenly at Frankfort-on-the-Main in Germany. As Professor Fiske took a leading part in developing the University Library, and during the early days was one of the University's most famous and brilliant professors, it was deemed fitting to publish the following sketch of his life, drawn from various sources and especially from remarks made by former President Andrew D. White, who was one of Professor Fiske's most intimate friends. During the past summer Mr. Fiske had been traveling in Italy, France, England and Sweden, but had recently returned to Switzerland and Germany. For many years he had been in poor health, and last spring when Dr. White visited Nice with him, he was seriously ill. Recent letters indicated that he was still suffering considerably, though there seemed to be no reason for expecting any immediate serious results. Professor Fiske was born in Ellisburg, N. Y., in 1831, and even as a boy, became noted for his brilliant ability. He entered Hamilton College, where his literary qualities attracted wide attention. While there, he formed many strong friendships, especially with Charles Dudley Warner and with Joseph R. Hawley, who became distinguished during the war, was governor of Connecticut and is at present United States senator from that State. After two years at Hamilton, Mr. Fiske went to Uppsala University, Sweden. He had formed a strong liking for Scandinavian studies, particularly the literature of Norway and Sweden. To satisfy his inclinations in this respect, he visited those countries many times during his life and also made several voyages to Iceland. While on the island, he assembled one of the most notable collections of Icelandic literature in the world. He also studied at various German universities and for a time was associated with the eminent historian. Motley, when the latter was United States minister at Vienna. Upon his return from Europe Mr. Fiske was called to the position of secretary of the New York Geographical Society, and assistant librarian of the Astor Library in New York City, where his ability and his remarkable social gifts won him a host of friends. From New York he was called by his friends, Hawley and Warner, to be associated with them in the editorship of the Daily Courant at Hartford, Conn. From there he was summoned to Syracuse, where he became one of the editors of the Syracuse Daily Journal.

Called To Cornell. While at Syracuse, Professor Fiske was asked by a wealthy citizen to accompany his eldest son to Egypt and the East. Upon this journey in 1868, he was invited to take the professorship of Northern European languages at Cornell, and he arrived in Ithaca a few months after the opening of the University. He proved to be a most inspiring teacher, forming many friendships among the students, and giving a great impulse to the studies in his department. He had gained the friendship of Bayard Taylor and George William Curtis, and through them became widely known among scholars. It was in the establishment of the Cornell University Library, however, that he made perhaps his most lasting mark. When he arrived here, the library comprised but four or five thousand volumes. These he arranged in the first of the college buildings, made the rooms attractive, and with the knowledge of books gained at the Astor Library, and his wide studies in literature, he soon developed this nucleus into a more and more useful collection. Professor Fiske's connection with the University continued until the year 1881, when he retired from active teaching, to spend the remainder of his life at Florence, Italy. His Villa At Florence. Upon a beautiful slope above the city he purchased the attractive estate of Walter Savage Landor, and there he fitted up the beautiful villa which had been linked with many centuries of Florentine history, surrounding himself with his books and many works of art. In this he welcomed the foremost men of all nations in literature, science and art. Cornellians found his handsome house and grounds always thrown open wide to them, and were the recipients of his charming hospitality. He travelled widely, visiting Egypt five or six times, and making even more frequent trips to Paris, London, Berlin and Stockholm. From time to time he made liberal gifts to Cornell University, placing here his Dante library, which is one of the two best, if not the best, in the United States. He also presented to the University his collections in Romance language and literatures, and various smaller collections. He gave to the University of Iceland several collections of books and apparatus, and extended liberal aid to many young scholars pursuing studies in which he was interested. He visited Ithaca occasionally and showed a continuing interest in the University. As a young man, Professor Fiske became deeply interested in the game of chess, and this interest endured to the end of his life. He collected masses of curious information about the game. He won special renown also as a collector of rare, choice and valuable books, among which his three collections on Icelandic literature, on Dante and on Petrarch are undoubtedly among the most noteworthy ever made in those fields, the last named being probably unequalled by any previous collection in existence. His Winning Personality. Professor Fiske was of a very attractive character and had a wide circle of friends. He made no pretensions to eloquence as a speaker, but his powers of conversation attracted to him numbers of men, especially young men. He was greatly interested in all evidences of improvement in every country, particularly his own, and was always ready to aid any young man who he thought he was doing good work along lines in which he himself was interested. Tribute from the Nation. The New York Nation, to which the late Professor Fiske was a frequent contributor, publishes the following appreciative sketch of his character and personality: "Mr. Fiske's nature was essentially modest, simple and trustful, ardent, persistent, generous—in his day of small things as in his prosperity; and his attainments were deep and lasting. Some of the closest of these were for ex-President Andrew D. White of Cornell, the late Charles Dudley Warner, the late Eugene Schuyler, the late Dean Sage, the late W. J. Stillman and Professor E. P. Evans, now of Munich. The imbroglio with Cornell was personal to the Trustees, and unmercenary; and, besides the gifts of the Library already enumerated, it is the common expectation that his Icelandic and Petrarchan collections will ultimately find their way to Ithaca. At that institution he was an active promoter of the chapter-house system for Greek-letter societies. Childless himself, he had a kindly drawing towards youth. Verse was an occasional solace, as a privately printed volume evidences. Mr. Fiske will be greatly missed, as he was much beloved." Left His Fortune to Cornell. The will of the late Professor Fiske was opened in New York City Saturday, September 24th, and read by the executors, Attorney Ira A. Place, '81, of that city, and Professor Horatio S. White of Harvard, formerly dean of the Cornell faculty. President Jacob Gould Schurman was also present at the reading of the will, having gone to New York for the purpose from his summer home at East Hampton, L. I. While the contents of the will were not made public by the executors, it is known that after having provided for several small bequests, the testator leaves the residue of his estate to Cornell, to be applied on the endowment and equipment of the University Library. It is understood that the will also leaves to Cornell the two famous libraries, the Petrarchan and Icelandic. The value of the estate is not definitely known. Much of the property of the late Professor Fiske is in Italy, and of its valuation the executors know almost nothing. The most authoritative estimates of Professor Fiske's fortune place it between $500,000 and $1,000,000. It is believed that the Cornell bequest will amount to about $500,000.

Funeral of Willard Fiske. His Remains Interred in Vault in Sage Memorial Chapel—Impressive Services. The funeral services over the remains of the late Professor Willard Fiske were held in Sage Chapel, Saturday afternoon, and were attended by a large number of members of the faculty and students of the University. All University exercises were suspended, and the library was closed for the afternoon out of respect for its first librarian. The short but impressive services over the body were conducted by the Rev. Professor Charles Babcock, after the form of the Episcopal church. In the course of the services the hymns "Lead Kindly Light," "Abide With Me," and "Integer Vitae" were sung by the quartet composed of Messrs. Brown, Button, Smith and Whitcomb. At the conclusion of the public service the casket was borne to the memorial chapel, where a brief burial service was conducted, and the body lowered into its final resting place. The casket was covered with floral tributes among them a beautiful wreath of orchids, the gift of H. H. Tyndale, '77, a pupil of Professor Fiske. The honorary bearers were colleagues of Professor Fiske in the University in 1878,—former President Andrew D. White, Professors James Law, J. T. Morris, T. F. Crane, and J. M. Hart, Judge Finch, Librarian G. W. Harris, and President Schurman, representing the University, Ira A. Place, representing the executors, and the Hon. S. D. Halliday, representing the board of trustees. The active bearers were the following fraternity brothers of Professor Fiske: John L. Senior, E. B. Fernow, A. N. Newberry, L. B. Fay, L. H. Paddock, and R. D. Day.

Daniel Willard Fiske (1831–1904) was an American librarian and scholar, born on November 11, 1831, at Ellisburg, New York. Fiske studied at Cazenovia Seminary and started his collegiate studies at Hamilton College in 1847. He joined the Psi Upsilon but was suspended for a student prank at the end of his sophomore year. He was educated at Copenhagen and at Uppsala University. Upon his return to the United States, he acted as a General Secretary to the American Geographical Society and edited the Syracuse Daily Journal. Upon the opening of Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, Fiske was named university librarian and professor in 1868. He made a reputation as an authority on the Northern European languages, and Icelandic language and culture in particular. With loans from Andrew Dickson White, Fiske at age 48 took a leave of absence and sailed to Europe. In the summer of 1879, he visited Iceland for three months, travelling on the island with two other Americans and endearing himself to the residents by organizing donations of books from America. He travelled to Rome in April 1880 to join Jennie McGraw, then age 40. In July 1880, he married Jennie, at the American Legation in Berlin. McGraw was the daughter of timber magnate John McGraw, and upon McGraw's death in 1877 inherited $2.2 million ($48.7 million today). Their marriage was short, and by September 1881 she had died from tuberculosis. Controversy over her will's bequest to Cornell left Fiske involved in the The Great Will Case. Following its resolution in May 1890, he spent much of his remaining years in Italy, and collected manuscripts. His interests included chess; he helped organize the first American Chess Congress in 1857 and wrote the tournament book in 1859, and edited The Chess Monthly from 1857 to 1861 with Paul Morphy. His scholarly volume, Chess In Iceland and in Icelandic Literature (Florence, 1905), was used as source material by H.J.R. Murray for A History of Chess. Another manuscript, Chess Tales and Chess Miscellanies (New York, 1912), also published posthumously, is an anthology covering chess life of the period including articles about Morphy, problems by Sam Loyd, and the history of chess including some fables. Fiske donated thousands of volumes to Cornell including a 1536 edition of the Divine Comedy that he purchased in April 1892 and directed to be sent directly to Cornell. The Fiske Dante Collection grew out of this acquisition and as of 2005 numbered approximately 10,000 volumes. On September 17, 1904 Fiske died at Frankfurt am Main, Germany. He is buried next to his wife Jennie McGraw Fiske in the elaborate crypt of Sage Chapel at Cornell University. Upon his death, Fiske left a bequest of 32,000 volumes, the Fiske Icelandic Collection, to Cornell along with funds that Fiske had received from Jennie's estate.

W593 & W769 James Law

James Law Dies. Member of Cornell's First Faculty Stricken With Pneumonia At the Age of Eighty-three. Dr. James Law, one of the foremost members of the first Cornell Faculty, died at the age of eighty-three at the Chapin Memorial Hospital in Springfield, Massachusetts, on May 10. Dr. Law was returning from Florida with his family when he was suddenly taken ill, and just before reaching Springfield his condition became so critical that it was necessary to take him to the hospital. He developed pneumonia, which became the immediate cause of his death. Dr. Law was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on February 13, 1838, and was graduated from the Veterinary College of Edinburgh in 1857. At graduation he won the Highland and Agricultural Society's Medal for the best general examination and their special medal for the best examination on general and descriptive anatomy. He studied also at the Ecole Veterinaire, Alfort, and the Ecole Veterinaire, Lyons, France. In 1860, Dr. Law became professor of veterinary anatomy, physiology and materia medica in the New Veterinary College of Edinburgh. From 1865 to 1867 he was professor of anatomy at the Albert Veterinary College in London. When Dr. Andrew D. White was in Europe in 1868 to find men for the Faculty of the University, he secured the services of Dr. Law, who was highly recommended by Dr. John Gamgee. In his "Reminiscences of Ezra Cornell" Dr. White tells of how Mr. Cornell, standing on the wharf, had called to him to "be sure and bring back that hoss doctor." On August 7, 1868,

Dr. Law sailed from Glasgow with his family to become a member of Cornell's first Faculty, holding the chair of veterinary medicine and surgery. In 1890, he was appointed dean of the newly organized New York State Veterinary College, which position he held until 1908. In this capacity he served both the State and Federal Governments in connection with the study and control of diseases prevalent among domestic animals. Dr. Law was for many years active in the work of the American Public Health Association. He had been a president of the State Veterinary Society, and also of the American Veterinary Medical Association. He gained the reputation of being the foremost veterinary educator in the country, and was the author of "General and Descriptive Anatomy of Domestic Animals," "The Farmers' Veterinary Adviser," and "A Text Book of Veterinary Medicine" in five volumes as well as of numerous, scientific papers. In 1863 Dr. Law married Miss Elizabeth Creighton, of Kirkaldy, Scotland. Five children were born to them: John E. Law '84, who died in Hartford, Conn., on October 18, 1894; Miss Cecilia A. Law '92; Mrs. James A. Foord '93, of Amherst, Mass.; Miss Julia Law; and a daughter who died in infancy.

Doctor James Law. Professor of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery. February 13, 1838—May 10, 1921. The career of James Law embraced the first fifty years of the history of Cornell University. He was a member of the first Faculty which began its work in October, 1868, and until his death, May 10, 1921, either as active or emeritus professor his services to the University and his adopted country were continuous and invaluable. It was significant that in the young University almost the first professorship created was of a subject that had at that time no academic standing in America, and the value of which to purely scientific studies and to the welfare of the State was scarcely dreamed of. To Ezra Cornell was due the recognition of that subject; and to Andrew White was due the recognition of the equal value of all subjects of academic study. No choice could have been happier from these two points of view. The new professor had been trained in the best schools of Europe under the most famous teachers of their bay, and was himself of such personal dignity of character as to impress all who met him with the conviction that he was of the highest type of scholar and man. Although his chair was but one of many in the new university, Dr. Law by his own broad knowledge practically founded a course in Veterinary Medicine, and furnished the country with graduates who later organized the National Control of Animal Diseases. It was the broad knowledge of every branch of his subject and his practical application of it to the problems of animal industry in the United States that won for him and the University, which he served so faithfully, the recognition by the State of New York and the Federal Government of his accomplishments; and which led to the creation, in 1894, of the New York State Veterinary College, the first state veterinary college in America. During the interval between 1868 and 1894, Dr. Law had, almost single-handed, accomplished a revolution in the conception of the knowledge and practice of Veterinary Medicine in the United States, and had raised it to a rank coordinate with human medicine. His persistent effort in raising the standard of veterinary education has found expression not only in the institution of which he was head, but also in the veterinary colleges of America. He was a great teacher because he was a great scholar, and he pursued his unremitting labors almost to the last hour of his long and honored life. He won the affection and respect of all who knew him, and the University owes him for his splendid example of unselfish devotion, gratitude which cannot be expressed in words.

W596 Moses Coit Tyler

Professor M. C. Tyler Dead. Cornell's Well Known Historian and Professor Passes Away. On Friday, December 28, the sad news was announced that Professor Moses Coit Tyler had died about midnight of the night before. The news was not unexpected, for he had been at the point of death for several days. For about four weeks he had suffered with cystitis but his condition was not considered dangerous until about a week before his death. Mrs. Tyler, his daughter, Mrs. Jessica Tyler Austen, and his son-in-law, Willard B. Austen, were with him at the end. The only other member of his immediate family is his son Edward, of New York City, literary editor of the Literary Digest. Friday morning, the large bell in the Library tower tolled sixty-five, which was the number of the years of his life. The news of his death was commented widely upon by the press of the country and many tributes were paid to his memory by those conversant with the work he had done at Cornell and in the world of letters. The funeral, preceded by a short service at his late home on East Avenue, was held Sunday at 3 P. M., in Sage Chapel. Rev. S. H. Synnott, D.D., and Rev. Professor C. M. Tyler officiated. The pall bearers were Professors T. F. Crane, J. L. Morris, J. M. Hart, E. A. Fuertes, R. H. Thurston, G. L. Burr, and Messrs. S. D. Halliday and H. V. Bostwick. The faculty attended in a body, and the church was filled with friends. The interment was in Pleasant Grove cemetery, north of Forest Home. This spot was selected some years ago by Professor Tyler himself. Professor Tyler was born in Griswold, Connecticut, August 2, 1835 he graduated from Yale in 1857. After graduation, he studied theology in the Andover Theological Seminary and, in 1860, became pastor of the First Congregational church of Poughkeepsie, where he remained two years. The years 1863 to 1868 he spent in England engaged in literary work, many of his essays of that date, such as "American Reputations in England" being printed in the Nation. In 1867 he was called to the chair of English language and literature in the University of Michigan, where he remained until 1881. While there, he published several works, chief among them being his "History of American Literature during the Colonial Times," in two volumes, a work which drew from the poet, Longfellow, congratulations on his having done the work so well that it would never need to be done again. During the years 1873 and 1874 he was editor of the Christian Union, now the Outlook. In 1881 he was called to the chair of American History at Cornell, where he has since been senior professor in the school of history. He published a new "Life of Patrick Henry," so superior to all predecessors as to supersede them entirely. It led to an invitation, in 1896, to address the Virginia Historical Society, which no Northern historian had previously been asked to do. In 1894, he published "Three Men of Letters," monographs, biographical and critical, on Bishop Berkeley, Timothy Dwight, president of Yale, and Joel Barlow, the poet. His latest completed work is "The Literary History of the American Revolution." At the time of his death, he was engaged upon a new work for Putnam's. Professor Tyler was the first professor of American history in any college of the country. When he came to Cornell it was with the understanding that the subject of American history should be made a separate department. In all colleges at that time American history was taught as a part of European history. The other colleges and universities were not slow to follow in the lead of Cornell in the establishment of chairs of American history. Professor Tyler also laid special emphasis on the study of the local history of New York state. While in Ann Arbor, just before coming here, Professor Tyler was ordained deacon in the Protestant Episcopal church of St. Andrew, in that city; two years later, in St. John's church, of Ithaca, he was ordained priest. A Tribute From Dean Crane. The day after the death of my dear friend, I penned the following lines at the request of the Ithaca Journal. The ALUMNI NEWS asks me to add a few details which will be of interest to its readers. T. F. CRANE. December 31, 1900. "It is too soon adequately to measure the loss which the University has sustained in the death of Professor Moses Coit Tyler, and it is far too soon, while our grief is at its height, to estimate the man and the friend at his true worth. I remember very distinctly the first time I saw him, a beautiful day in May, twenty-seven years ago, when he delivered an address at the laying of the corner-stone of Sage College. His fine presence, the wit and eloquence of his style, and his oratorical gifts made a lasting impression on all who heard him. In his case the dictum "the style is the man" was true indeed. The clearness and precision of his language, the play of humor, the elegance of diction, were all characteristic of his mental processes. Even in familiar conversation one could not help admiring the beauty of his words, and the delicacy of his fancy. In his writing there is no unseemly haste or negligence of the nicest proprieties. He saw clearly, and honestly, and elegantly, and his expression is stamped by all these qualities. It is for specialists to estimate the historical value of his monumental works, but there can be only one opinion as to the noble form in which those works are cast. These are the qualities which all who read him can perceive and admire but only the little number of those who were admitted to his closest intimacy can know the hidden treasures of his nature,—the kindly heart, the genial humor, the tender sympathy with friends, the keen appreciation of others' success, the modest bearing of his own,—these make his loss to some an irretrievable one. How sweet a companion he was those know who have trodden with him the walks of this beautiful neighborhood, every lane and path of which will henceforth have the added charm of the memory of his presence. In an age of doubt and religious unrest he had the firm confidence of a certain faith," and the inexpressible 'comfort of a reasonable, religious, and holy hope.'" The death of Professor Moses Coit Tyler came as a sudden blow even to the friends at Ithaca who knew of his illness. Never had he seemed so well and happy as during the autumn months. Those who shared his rambles over the hills and valleys of the country he loved so well will never forget his buoyant spirits, his ceaseless flow of humor, his genial temper, and keen appreciation of Nature in all her varying aspects. In spite of his robust appearance and athletic habits—he was an accomplished horseman, a superb swimmer, a tireless pedestrian and wheelman—he was conscious of a constitutional weakness, which had shown itself in early life in nervous prostration. He knew that it was only by husbanding his nervous strength that he could perform well the arduous duties of his professorship, and complete those great works which will make his name illustrious as long as American literature shall last. Notwithstanding this necessity of concentrating his energies, he played an interested and useful part in all the great reforms which have so materially changed the University during the last twenty years. In all that related to the government of the students he showed that sympathy with youth, that confidence in its generous impulses, that freedom from narrow methods of restriction, without which the young cannot be successfully guided. About Thanksgiving time he was seized by an illness not altogether unexpected to him, and which did not at first seem serious. The disease soon assumed a dangerous character, and after three weeks of suffering he passed peacefully away at half past one o'clock on the morning of Friday, December the 28th. In his walks and rides about Ithaca he had early noticed the quiet beauty of a little country graveyard on the road running north from Forest Home. It is on a slight knoll by the roadside and commands a wide prospect of the distant hills. This was the spot he chose for his last earthly abode, and often passing it on his walks he discoursed with his friends of its peacefulness, and spoke of the future with the calmness and certainty of Christian belief. And here his family and a little company of devoted friends laid him to rest the last Sunday of the century. It was a gray winter afternoon, but the landscape had a beauty all its own. The woods stood out dark against the snow and hid the towers of the University but on the still air fell the sound of the distant chimes, which for nineteen years had called the sleeper to his pleasant tasks.

Moses Coit Tyler. Professor of American Constitutional History—Dec. 28, 1900. The special committee appointed at the last meeting to draft resolutions on the death of Professor Moses Coit Tyler reported the following resolution: "On Friday, the 28th of December, in the last week of the closing century, it pleased God to take from among us our revered colleague, Professor Moses Coit Tyler. To his family, to society, to scholarship and to literature, the loss is heavy. It falls with peculiar weight on this University and on its Faculty. For nearly twenty years his place among us was unique. He came to us, in 1881, ripe, not alone with the training of the scholar, but with a rare social and literary experience. To a wide acquaintance with men of letters on both sides of the sea he added freshly-won prestige of an epoch-making book. Thus from the first he brought to our deliberations and activities the dignity of a matured character and the poise of an assured eminence. In our debates we deferred to his broad knowledge of academic life and to his singular union of a wise conservatism with openness of mind. In the social circle we found him ever courtly of presence, genial of manner, austere of conviction yet buoyant of temper, fertile in thought and in anecdote, delicate in fancy, affluent and happy in diction bubbling with playful humor, yet wielding at need a trenchant irony. In daily life he proved himself a thoughtful neighbor, a tender and loyal friend, sensitive to his own rights but not less quick to recognize those of others. We were proud of what we learned of his work in the class room and in the study; yet, though he was our model in the rigor of his devotion to the tasks of his pen, we knew that he was not less scrupulous in the maintenance of the highest physical vigor, and those of us so happy as sometimes to share with him his walks or his rides knew, too, what a love of nature and of common life, what a boyish glee in out-of-doors, were his to the end. Above all, and at the heart of all, we felt him a man of reverence and of faith, broad yet earnest, tolerant yet devout ; and the graces of his personality drew their best charm from the deeper sanctities of his character. Such a man we do well to mourn."

Pump dispute results in death of man - Driver fled after

Paramus fracas. PARAMUS—It could have been an extreme case of road rage. After a motorist backs his car into another, he doesn't want to involve police, then knocks the other driver to the ground when the man tries to jot down his license-plate number. But extraordinary circumstances, coupled with one man's history of health problems, may have turned the argument into something else: manslaughter. Police on Wednesday continued looking for the hit-and-run driver who pushed Calvin E. Nelson, 63, of Saddle River to the ground last week, fracturing his hip. Nelson, who had a metal plate in his hip from an earlier injury, later suffered an embolism and died Sunday at Hackensack University Medical Center, five days after the incident. At that point, the assault took on a new urgency, and investigators stepped up their search. "He would not have been in the hospital if it wasn't because of this," Deputy Police Chief Richard Cary said Wednesday. At the very least, the man who pushed Nelson will be charged with aggravated assault, Cary said. Whether those charges are upgraded depends on the results of an autopsy by the Bergen County medical examiner, the deputy chief said. Nelson was in his car as his gas tank was being filled at the No Name gas station on Forest Avenue, near the Bergen Mall, just before 7 p.m. Jan. 18, when a silver Toyota, possibly a Camry, backed into his car, Cary said. Without stopping, the man drove the Toyota to the other side of the gas pump and got out. Nelson got out of his car, approached the other motorist and demanded his driver's license and registration, Cary said. But the man refused, insisting that the crash caused no damage, he said. When a fuming Nelson stormed to the back of the man's car to write down his license-plate number, the driver pushed him down, Cary said. Detectives interviewed Nelson before he died, as well as the service station attendant and Nelson's sister, who was in the car, Cary said. He described the hit-and-run driver as white, in his 50s, with dark hair, 5-foot-9-inches to 5-foot-10-inches tall and about 175 pounds. Cary said the man's New Jersey license plate begins with the letters PSW. Cary said investigators believe the man may live in western New Jersey. Most license plates they have found with the same letters are from that area, the deputy chief said.

Obituary. Joseph "Joe" F. Mozer, Sr., 69, most recently of Hudson, MA, and longtime resident of Acton and Harvard, MA, died peacefully on Wednesday, February 4, 2015, after a long illness. Born on February 19, 1945, in New York City to the late Helen (Hattayer) and Frank Mozer, Joe attended Brooklyn Tech High School, and then went on to receive a 5-year B.E.E. from Cornell University as a member of the Class of 1966, where he was also a member of the Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity. His profession brought him up to the Boston area to work for such companies as Terradine, Wang Computers and Digital Equip. Corporation, where he worked on the LNO3 project. In later years, he worked as an assistant manager for Wood Worker's Warehouse, which tied into his love for woodworking. His other hobbies included stamp collecting, skiing and bowling, along with an incredible love for social dancing. He also held a particular affinity for 60's rock 'n roll, and his Hungarian heritage, which frequently included attending the annual Hungarian Festival at St. Stephen's in Manhattan. His philanthropic side included being a faithful blood donor and raising funds to help fight cystic fibrosis. He is survived by his sons Rev. Joseph F. Mozer, Jr. of Wrentham and Plainville, MA and Michael S. Mozer of Sherman Oaks, CA. He also leaves behind his longtime companion and soul mate, Elizabeth Hendry of Hampton, NH, and his former wife, Kathryn Mozer Thibert of Leominster, MA, mother of his sons. Friends, family and caregivers are invited to attend visiting hours on Friday, February 6, from 5-8 PM at the John P. Rowe Funeral Home Inc., 57 Main Street, Marlborough, MA and the funeral Mass on Saturday, February 7 at 10 AM at St. Martha' Catholic Church, 227 South Street (Rte 1A), Plainville, MA. Burial will take place on Long Island, NY at a future date. During his illness, he was grateful to be assisted by such organizations as South Middlesex Opportunity Counsel (SMOC), Braintree Rehab Hospital and Beaumont Rehabilitation Center. In lieu of flowers, donations in his honor may be made to SMOC at 496 Lincoln Street, Marlborough, MA 01752 or to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

W609 Jefferson Mack Myers

JEFFERSON M. MYERS, state's attorney for Walsh county, North Dakota, is a gentleman of the highest character and possessed of an excellent education and wide knowledge of men and the world and occupies a prominent place in general matters. He has gradually built up an extensive law practice and has long been one of the leading lawyers of the Walsh county bar and is recognized as one of the leading attorneys of North Dakota. He has a quick and comprehensive mind, is earnest in his convictions and is devoted to the interests entrusted to his keeping and is a well equipped practitioner, an able advocate and thorough lawyer. Our subject is a native of Sheldon, Richland county, Ohio, and was born April 6, 1854. His parents, Joel and Emily A. (Ayers) Myers, were natives of Pennsylvania and his father was born in Cumberland county, that state, and the family were of Dutch descent on the father's side. The father of our subject was a lawyer and practiced his profession in Ohio for some years and was the first probate judge of Richland county and was re-elected to that office. He afterward became part owner and editor of the "Ohio Statesman," of Columbus, Ohio, and in 1875 sold the paper and passed the last years of his life at Oberlin and died in February, 1899. The mother of our subject passed away in 1859. They were the parents of three sons and four daughters, of whom our subject is the only one in North Dakota. Mr. Myers was reared and educated in the public schools of Mansfield, Ohio, and at Cornell University, and taught school two years, when he became clerk in the office of the probate judge at Mansfield and held the position four years, during which time he read law. He was also interested in "The Ohio Liberal" at Mansfield as Owner and editor, and in 1883 came to Bartlett, North Dakota, and became editor and manager of the "Bartlett Times," which he operated six months and then went to Nelson county and conducted the "Nelson County News" one year, and in January, 1885, gave up the paper and was appointed deputy register of deeds of that county and later elected county superintendent of schools, which position he held four years. He was admitted to the bar in 1885 and began the practice of his profession at Lakota, in company with Fred A. Kelly. The firm existed until 1890 and in 1891 Mr. Myers came to Park River and remained a short time and during the same year moved to Grafton, where he has resided continuously since. Our subject was married, in October, 1876, to Mary A. Fulk, a native of Pennsylvania. Three children, one son and two daughters, have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Myers. Mr. Myers was elected state's attorney in November, 1896, and was re-elected in 1898. He has also served on various local boards and as city attorney and is well known and deservedly popular with the people. He is a Democrat in political sentiment and is strong in his convictions.

W610 Charles Courter Dickinson

The Beta Omicron Cornell University Ithaca, New York.

'91 CHARLES COURTER DICKINSON. A.B.; LL.B., '94; charter member; president of the Eastern Division of the Fraternity, 1891-2; president of Delta Tau Delta, 1892-3; born Cobbleskill, N.Y., July 12, 1870; died New York City, N.Y., May 24, 1910.

From: The Seventh General Catalogue of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity, New York, 1917, p. 421.

OBITUARY. C. C. DICKINSON. Charles Courter Dickinson '91, one of the alumni members of the University Board of Trustees, died early on Tuesday morning, May 24, in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, of pneumonia and kidney disease. According to a statement made by his brother, Stanton C. Dickinson, the immediate cause of his last illness was the inhaling of some deleterious gas while he was witnessing an experiment in a chemical laboratory at Scranton, Pa., an experiment performed in connection with an industrial project in which he had been invited to interest himself. He was not able to return to New York until the day after the experiment. On the Wednesday before his death he was taken to the hospital. Mr. Dickinson was born in Schoharie county, New York, on July 12, 1870. He prepared for college at the Cobleskill Academy, graduating at the age of fifteen, and won a State scholarship in Cornell University. He entered the University in 1887 and graduated in 1891 with the degree of B. L. He was a Commencement orator, won a certificate for proficiency in military science and also won a prize, awarded by Joseph H. Choate, George William Curtis and Charles Kendall Adams as judges, for the best work written by an undergraduate in any college of the United States on "Electoral Corruption." Mr. Dickinson was one of the founders of the Cornell chapter of Delta Tau Delta and was afterward president of the general fraternity. He was also a member of the law fraternity of Phi Delta Phi. During his undergraduate course Mr. Dickinson read law, and by the time he won his baccalaureate degree he had completed the necessary study for admission to practice. He accepted, however, an appointment as an examiner of banks of the State of New York. He was designated to make the first complete examination of the trust departments of all the trust companies of the state, which involved over a year's work. Then he obtained leave of absence from his post, entered the Cornell law school, and after one year's study took the degree of LL. B. in the class of 1894. He divided second prize for a graduation thesis on eminent domain. He was admitted to the bar of the state in May, 1894. He was the author of several law works, including Dickinson's Eminent Domain, Groesbeck and Dickinson's Banking Laws of New York, and Dickinson and Cummings's General Municipal Laws of New York. Soon after beginning the practice of law in New York city, Mr. Dickinson became interested in banking, and he was instrumental in organizing the Colonial Trust Company and the Colonial Safe Deposit Company. Then he organized the Carnegie Trust Company and in March, 1907, persuaded Leslie M. Shaw to resign the Secretaryship of the Treasury of the United States and to accept the presidency of the company. Mr. Dickinson became a director, then vice-president, and finally, upon

Mr. Shaw's resignation, president of the company himself. He resigned the presidency and retired from active business last October, after his health had been impaired as a result of being thrown from his horse while riding in Central Park. In June, 1909, Mr. Dickinson was elected an alumni trustee of the University, receiving more than four thousand votes. He was a member of the Mayflower Society, Sons of the Revolution, Huguenot Society, Society of Colonial Wars, American Museum of Natural History, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Geographical Society, Botanical Gardens, Municipal Art League and the Manhattan, Lotos, New York, Cornell University, Democratic, Lawyers' and Railroad Clubs. He married in January, 1905, Grace Georgette Kidd. She and one son, Charles Courier Dickinson, jr., who is four years old, survive him. At his funeral the University was represented by Trustees Henry W. Sackett, Robert T. Morris and James H. Edwards.

From the Chapters. Beta Omicron—Cornell University. It was a great disappointment to me to find that Beta Omicron was not represented by a letter in the last number of The Rainbow. It was no fault of the chapter, however, that such a letter did not appear. Since the fraternity has had no account of Beta Omicron for the closing weeks of last year, perhaps some remarks in regard to her history then may not be out of place at this time. Our Cornell chapter started under very favorable circumstances, A comfortable house, nicely furnished, and the desired number of men were assured before the chapter was installed. The number was increased, fraternity life was not a disappointment, and Beta Omicron closed the year with sixteen men. And only three of the sixteen are not ready to return. Brother Paul M, Chamberlain, having received his advanced degree, accepted a lucrative position in Waynesboro. Pa, Brother Monroe M, Sweetland is now a practicing attorney in Ithaca, and Brother Mortimore H. French went into business in Troy, N. Y. For the ensuing year our prospects are very flattering indeed. A new brick house (just completed) in a desirable location, with elegant parlors, has been secured for the chapter. The house has been built at a cost of about $11,000, and will accommodate sixteen or eighteen men. It is heated by hot water, and new furniture for the entire house has already been purchased. Although Beta Omicron is the youngest chapter in Cornell, there are but very few that have better quarters. Thirteen of the active members of last year return to start the chapter going, and we expect several Deltas from other chapters to join us. No better outlook for new men could be asked. We hope to add three or four of our old friends to our number very soon.

W611 John Clarence Tunncliff

Necrology. '17 CE—John Clarence Tunncliff, president of Tunncliff Construction Co., Inc., killed in an automobile accident near Iowa City, Iowa, November 1, 1948. He lived at 223 Forest Road, Davenport, Iowa. Son, John F. Tunncliff '43.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 51, No. 8, 15 Dec 1948, p. 239.

Contractor Killed in Highway 6 Crash. Builder of New Hospital Wing Dies at Mercy. John Tunncliff Of Davenport on Way to Job Here. John Tunncliff, Sr., 55, of Davenport, died this morning at Mercy hospital of injuries received in a head-on automobile-truck collision on Highway 6, nine miles east of Iowa City. Mr. Tunncliff, owner and operator of the Tunncliff Construction Co, was on his way to Iowa City to supervise work on the Mercy hospital addition, a contract held by his company. His death was the ninth traffic fatality of the year in Johnson County, according to highway patrol records. The crash, occurring in dense fog just west of the Johnson county line, involved a 1948 Dodge club coupe driven by Mr. Tunncliff, and a 1945 Chevrolet one-ton truck driven by Leland D. Stock, 31, of Route 6, Iowa City. An ambulance, called to the scene, rushed Mr. Tunncliff to Iowa City, where he died 10 minutes after arrival at the hospital. According to Acting Coroner George D. Callahan the man's chest had been crushed in the collision, and this injury caused his death. Mr. Stock, although cut about the face, was not seriously hurt. The accident occurred at about 7:55 a.m. Highway patrolmen at the scene said Mr. Tunncliff was driving the last car in a line of several vehicles moving west toward Iowa City, while Mr. Stock was driving his truck east, toward West Liberty. After the rest of the westbound cars had passed the point where the crash occurred, highway patrolmen said the Tunncliff car apparently headed suddenly for the ditch on the opposite side of the road. Mr. Stock said he had been traveling about 35 miles per hour, slammed on his brakes, but the truck and coupe crashed head-on. Front ends were caved in and windshield glass was smashed on both vehicles, though neither overturned or went into the ditch. Following the farmer's truck was an unloaded Treloar automobile transport truck driven by James Hopkins, Des Moines. "I saw the hazy shape of the truck ahead of me stop suddenly," he said, "but with an empty unit like this, brakes won't stop you very fast." Mr. Hopkins said he then turned into the ditch to avoid a collision. His truck jackknifed and pushed over about 40 feet of fence on land owned by Glenn Burr. He estimated the damage to the transport truck as "about $300 in the form of broken saddle tanks, a bent cab and other losses. The mishap had an ironic side for Mr. Hopkins. Today he is to receive from his company a certificate for driving one full year without an accident. Highway Patrolman L. L. Smith, Iowa City, who assisted in clearing the wreck scene, estimated damage to the Tunncliff car at about $1,200 and to Mr. Stock's truck at about $1,000. The farmer's truck was not loaded. Highway Patrolman Lyle Dickinson, West Liberty, also assisted at the wreck scene. Ray Connor of the state bureau of investigation arrived shortly after the accident and radioed for help. Mr. Tunncliff, who was on his way to the Mercy hospital addition his company is building here, had been visiting Iowa City about twice weekly during progress of the job, which is now about 70 per cent complete. He was one of the outstanding construction men in Iowa. His company has other major projects currently in Davenport, at a Dubuque hospital site and elsewhere. Surviving him are a widow; a son, John Tunncliff, Jr., an engineer who also is with the company; and two daughters. Funeral arrangements are not yet complete.

BARTON - George Titus Barton (b. Dec. 26, 1895, d. Dec. 5, 1974) was the first child of George Fisher Barton and Mary Belle Titus Barton. Born in titusville, NJ and moved with his family to Montour Falls at the age of 7 in 1902. His family moved into the Charles Cook house at 203 South Genesee Street. George Titus graduated from Cornell in 1917 in civil engineering where he was a member of Tau Beta Pi and the Banjo Mandolin Club. Due to WWI, he was allowed to leave Cornell without completing his finals. He went directly to work in Wilmington, DE shipyard surveying lines on ships. Following his father's death he served as president of Seneca Engineering (1949-74). He married Evelyn Joyce (b. July 28, 1910, d. May 24, 1994) of Clifton Springs in 1946. They met at a dance at Odessa High School where she was teaching English. His sister, Ruth, may have "set them up." Evelyn later found a comment in his journal after their meeting "a fair dancer." For many years Evelyn served as the president of the Penn York Girl Scout Council and headed the local cancer drive. They lived in Montour Falls at 203 South Genesee Street. After a fire in 1972, they remodeled the whole house. They purchased a cottage on Peach Orchard Point in 1958 which is still owned by their son Charles Joyce Barton (b. Dec. 2, 1950). Charles graduated from Lehigh University (1973) in civil engineering and received his MBA from Syracuse University. Charles married April 7, 1984 to Anne Lee Everett (b. Aug. 18,

W611 David Hazen Blakelock

Alumni Notes. David H Blakelock's military career began on the Armory Green where he rose through the ranks of the Cadet Corps to captain in his junior year and to colonel elect as a senior. After making the army his career, he retired in 1950 as a brigadier general. Now residing in California, he is past master of the San Clemente Masonic Lodge, has served eight years on the City Council, and four years as mayor of San Clemente. Dave's son John is a Colonel USAF, and has five children; Dave's daughter Jean, a widow, has two daughters, one married to a Major USMC. Both daughters have three children, making Dave a great-grandfather six times. The General's son David, a 1st Lt. Engineers USA, was killed in action in Korea. Truly, we are proud of the Blakelock family who have done so much in defense of our country. In 1967 Dave and his wife Lula Ann celebrated their 50th anniversary by flying around the world. They attended our 50th reunion, and Dave was awarded a 50 year Masonic pin from lodges where he held membership in Kansas, DC, and Cal. A classmate, John (Swede) Vickers '17, wrote a short tribute to Elmer Sperry Jr. '17 earlier this year, which was passed along. Sperry died last December. My old roommate Elmer Sperry Jr. was a phenomenon in math. He read three books in two days on Solid Geometry, Advanced Algebra, and Trigonometry and passed all three entrance exams with 90-plus marks. He'd never taken any of the courses at Exeter. I saved him a seat in Differential Calculus one December day. He couldn't wake up in time to get to an 8 o'clock. Silverman, our prof, had three of those old slate blackboards covered with a proof. "Pop" came sneaking in on all fours and just as he was getting up at the seat I'd saved him, "Ah-ha, Mr. Sperry, perhaps you can do this," said Silverman. "Sure, I guess so, what is it." Silverman erased the boards, left the premise intact and handed Sperry the eraser and chalk. Pop went to the board, wrote down three lines. Put the eraser and chalk on the rail, dusted his hands, and said, "I think that does it." Silverman looked at the board, then at Pop, then at us and then back at Pop. "Well, Mr. Sperry, I've never seen it done like that, but it's right."

W616 Eugene Stuart Howe

Ag. Student Is Held For Forgery. Eugene S. Howe of Fleischmann's, N.Y., Charged with Passing Bad Checks on Ithaca Merchants, to Have Hearing Tomorrow. Another "check charmer," who during the last few months has been operating in Ithaca on an extensive scale, was arrested this morning. The young man is Eugene S. Howe of Fleischmann's, N.Y., a sophomore in the college of agriculture. Howe was defiant when arrested this morning, but later made a full confession to Detective Walter D. Helm and District Attorney John D. Collins. The arrest of Howe, who rooms in East Buffalo Street, is the result of an investigation which has been going on since Jan. 9. The first evidence which connected Howe with the series of forgeries was given by officials of the First National Bank. How Howe Operated. Howe's confessed plan consisted in making a small purchase in a store and giving a check for $12 or $15, taking the difference in cash. Fictitious names were signed to the checks in each instance. Among the business concerns victimized and the respective amounts are the following: E. B. Baxter, $15; Mrs. Dora Mayers, $2; Moritz Dicker, $2.95; John Mead, $18; Ithaca Boot Shop, $12; P. J. Herron, $12; Kline Pharmacy, $3. Howe will be given a hearing tomorrow, when his father arrives in this city.

Find Howe Passed 22 Worthless Checks. District Atty. John D. Collins has in his possession a total of 22 worthless checks, aggregating more than $100, said to have been written by Eugene S. Howe, a student in the college of agriculture, under arrest on a charge of forgery. At the preliminary hearing yesterday Attorney J. Alfred Kelly, who appeared for Howe, asked that the case be put over until today when Howe's father, a lawyer in Fleischmann, N.Y., would be in Ithaca. While Attorney Kelly and the district attorney were arguing over the amount of bail, Ben Sanford of the Cornell Co-Operative store strolled into the courtroom and handed the district attorney three more checks in the same handwriting as those already in the possession of the county prosecutor. Howe was given another hearing this afternoon.

EUGENE HOWE OUT ON $500 BAIL BOND Eugene S. Howe, the student arrested Monday morning on the charge of passing a number of forged checks on local merchants, was arraigned yesterday in City Court where he waived examination and was held for the grand jury. As the maximum punishment for the crime charged is more than five years, Howe was remanded to county court, where Judge Sweetland fixed the bail bond at $500. Bail was furnished. Howe's father, an attorney at Fleischmann's N. Y., was present at the hearing yesterday.

NEW LARCENY COMPLAINT AGAINST EUGENE S HOWE

When Eugene S. Howe, 40, a former insurance broker and treasurer of the C. C. Whittemore company, caterers, appeared in the Roxbury Court yesterday on a continuance, a new complaint which, police say, will supersede the old complaint, was issued charging the defendant with the larceny of $13,000 from Mrs Mary E. Whittemore, widow of the restaurant owner. The old complaint charged Howe with larceny of 325 shares of United States Smelting stock valued at $38,436. A recapitulation of stock dealings is said to have resulted in findings favorable to the defendant. The court granted a further continuance until June 8.

Boston—Eugene S. Howe, 40, former insurance broker, arrested on suspicion of larceny of $20,000 from Mrs. Mary Edna Whittemore, 63, widow of the founder of the C. C. Whittemore company, caterers and restaurateurs; Howe has been treasurer of the Whittemore estate since November.

Howe Stock Trial Scheduled April 11. Former Broker Pleads Not Guilty to Larceny Charge. April 11 was set yesterday as the date of the trial of Eugene S. Howe, 40, former insurance broker and treasurer of C. C. Whittemore Company, caretakers, who is charged with larceny of 325 shares of United States Smelting stock valued at $38,436.52 from Mrs Mary E. Whitmore, widow of the restaurateur. Howell, who was arrested Tuesday night outside the company's offices at 1270 Boylston st, pleaded not guilty, through his attorney, Leo P. Doherty, in Roxbury Municipal Court yesterday. Mrs Whittemore, the complainant, alleges that the larcenies occurred from April, 1933, to the present time. After his arraignment Howe volunteered to go to his safe deposit vault in the Village branch of the Brookline Trust Company and he was taken they are handcuffed to two officers. When the box was opened, a total of $4100 in bonds was found. Howe was then taken to the City Prison, while his wife sought to obtain bail. Attorney Doherty told the court that Howe had been granted power of attorney for Mrs. Whitmore and he said the case was of a civil nature and that the criminal court should not be used as a collection agency. He declared that the stocks were sold in order to create an annuity for Mrs. Whittemore and her sister. He would be able to prove the truth of this assertion, he said. Meanwhile, Mrs. Whittemore filed a bill in equity in the Suffolk Superior Court asking that Mason and Wrenn Brothers, Boston stockbrokers, be ordered to account for more than $50,000 in securities. Mrs. Whitmore, who is the executor of her husband's estate, says that last June she delivered $50,000 worth of stocks to Howe for safekeeping. It is her claim that without her knowledge or consent Howe sold some of the stock and used the proceeds and the rest of the securities to deal in his personal account with Wrenn Brothers & Co. Howe was released from Charles-st. Jail early this morning on $2500 bail.

Woman Charges $20,000 Theft. New Treasurer of Restaurant Company Under Arrest. Larcenies Alleged Since November When He Took Position. Larceny of $20,000 from Mrs Mary Edna Moore, 63, widow of the founder of the C. C. Whittemore Company, caterers and restaurateurs, was charged by police against Eugene S. Howe, 40, former insurance broker, last night, after his arrest at Mrs Whittemore's request. The thefts are alleged during the period since last November when Howe became treasurer of the Whittemore company. Just a year ago, according to Mrs Whittemore's story to Detective William J. Bonner, Howe approached her in the company's restaurant at 1084 Boylston st, Back Bay. He wanted a job. She gave him one. He appeared capable and so last November she made him treasurer. In a talk with Detective Bonner at Police Headquarters, Howe admitted, the officer said, that he had given $12,000, received in a sale of stock belonging to Mrs. Whitmore, to his mother and father in Albany, N.Y. he also admitted, Detective Bonner said, converting an additional $5000 in stock and $3000 in cash to his own use but he claimed all transactions were legitimate. Discovered by Auditor. The discovery of the alleged thefts was made by Charles Hennessey, an auditor, in the week prior to March 15 when he was auditing the books of the concern at Mrs Whittemore's request, preparatory to making out an income tax return. In March, 1933, according to Detective Bonner, Howe and his wife, both of whom have been living at 1322 Commonwealth av, Brighton, dined frequently at the Whittemore restaurant at 1084 Boylston st. Mrs Whittemore knew them as customers. On April 1, 1933, according to the police, Howe approached Mrs Whittemore and told her he was formally in the brokerage business in Albany, N.Y. He said he had heard that, since her husband had died, she needed someone to help her with her affairs. He said he needed a job and wanted to work for her. Promoted in November. Impressed by his appearance, Mrs Whittemore gave him a position in the company's offices at 1270 Boylston st., Back Bay. He worked for her there doing odd jobs until November, 1933, when she promoted him to treasurer. Early in March, Hennessey came to the office to audit the books. He first discovered that stock valued at $12,000 was missing. Mrs Whittemore said she had asked how to dispose of the stock and to add the proceeds to the company's cash. Hennessey spoke to Howe, according to the auditor's talk with Detective Bonner. Howell said he had the money and would produce it before March 14, the day before the books must be balanced for income tax purposes. Neither money nor stock was produced by Howe, police charged. Yesterday afternoon, Mrs Whittemore telephoned Police Headquarters. Detective Bonner and Sergts Arthur M. Tiernan, James V. Crowley and Detective Thomas J. Conaty went to investigate. While Detective Bonner and Sergt Crowley were in the auditor's office at the general offices, 1270 Boylston st, Howe entered his office. His secretary told him Hennessey and the police would like to see him. He told her he didn't want to talk to them, put on his hat and coat, took a briefcase and started from the building. Taken as He Enters Auto. Detective Bonner and Sergt Crowley ran down the stairway and arrested Howe as he was stepping into his automobile. He was taken to Police Headquarters and booked on a charge of suspicion of larceny of $20,000. He was taken to the City Prison for the night. This morning Mrs Whittemore, auditor Hennessey and police will appear against him at a hearing in Roxbury District Court. Howe, police said, has been living in Boston for eight years. He told Detective Bonner his wife is the daughter of a former chief of police of Hartford, Conn, who is now dead. Examination of the books of the restaurant business revealed that $3000 in cash was taken from the assets of the business, Detective Bonner said. The remaining $17,000 was stock sold by Howe at Mrs Whittemore's request, the proceeds to be put into the cash assets of the business. The police were seeking a bank account in Howe's name in Hartford, Conn, last night, in the belief that some of the missing money might be found there.

The Alumni Write. Cuban Exile Club? EDITOR: Imagining that you and other fellow Cornellians have of late read quite a little of the Cuban refugee problem that Miami has been confronting for the last year and a half, a problem that day by day gets worse and worse because of the at least 1,500 Cubans that are arriving here every week, I have thought it might be interesting for you to know that Cornell is quite well represented among those Cuban refugees that have been forced to leave their country and look for asylum in this land of the free. There are several Cornellians to be found among those refugees, some of whom have a "get together" once a week, have luncheon together, talk over old times as well as new times, and almost feeling as though a "Cuban Alumni Cornell Exile Club" is in the making, right here in Miami. Among Cornell alumni are the following: Francisco Fernandez Grau '17, Enrique Hernandez '18, Jose F. Cuervo Sr. '18, Enrique Molinet '20, and Miguel Ch. Varona '20. Jose F. Cuervo Jr. '50 was here until recently but has moved to Philadelphia (Oreland). There are several others also here whom I can't think of at this writing, such as Lawrence Daniels, etc., all waiting for the day when we can get rid of that bearded monster who took over our country and brought Communism to the hemisphere. —JOSE F. CUERVO '18.

German-American Alliance. It Seems that little Dan Cupid is a better hand at fostering good will than all the diplomats who are striving for international amity, his latest stunt resulting in a German-American alliance. Here is Consul William E. Beitz, of the U.S. Consulate at Berlin, with his bride, the former Fraulein Waltraut Elizabeth von Grohren, daughter of the late Admiral von Grohren of the German Navy, shown after their marriage in the German Capital. The bride is also a niece of General Cuno von Steuben, head of the famous family whose ancestor assisted the American colonists in the war for independence.

Gas Death Leads To Police Probe. Long Beach, July 21—Early today detectives of the Homicide Squad, Nassau County police, and of the Long Beach police were continuing their investigation into the death of John W. Peters, 49, of 109 Coolidge Ave., this city. He was discovered shortly after 5 p.m. yesterday unconscious in his home and was dead on the arrival of a physician from Long Beach Hospital. Death was due to illuminating gas poisoning, police reported. The body was viewed by Judge J. Charles Zimmerman, acting coroner, and taken to Long Beach Hospital on his orders for an autopsy. At Long Beach Police Headquarters details of the case were refused, although Police Chief Philip B. Kohut said he knew of no reason why they should not be disclosed if the investigation had been completed. It was learned, however, that a brother of the victim had requested "no publicity" be given the case.

Gas Fumes Kill Man in Long Beach Home. John W. Peters, Manhattan, Declared Suicide by Police, At His Summer Residence. The death of John W. Peters, 40, of 144 East 36th street, Manhattan, was listed officially as a suicide today by Long Beach police, following a report made by Dr. Jack Blimblum who performed an autopsy on the gas victim. Peters was found alone in his summer residence at 109 Coolidge avenue, Long Beach, dead from the effects of gas which came from two open jets in the kitchen stove. Detective Michael Vermilyea found the victim on the floor of the room, and Dr. Jack Blimblum pronounced Peters dead. The autopsy was ordered by Acting Coroner J. Charles Zimmerman. Police went to the Peters summer residence when Irving Eldredge of 22 East 26th street, Manhattan, who said he was a friend of the victim's, telephoned that he had not heard from Peters and feared that something was wrong.

W621, W640 Arthur Theodore Doremus

Why is the Standard Oil Company looking for Margaret Wall, the maid through whose revelations concerning her mistress, Lillian Nordica, Herr Zoltan Doehme unsuccessfully sought to obtain a divorce from the prima donna? That is the question suggested by the following personal in a New York newspaper Tuesday: "If Miss Margaret Wall, who was formerly in the employ of Mme. Lillian Nordica, will notify A. T. Doremus, box 523, general postoffice, New York, she will learn something to her advantage." At the Standard Oil offices, 26 Broadway, yesterday, Arthur Theodore Doremus, of West New Brighton, Staten Island, admitted he was the A. T. Doremus of the advertisement. He refused to shed any light on the mysterious advertisement. Miss Wall was formerly Mme. Nordica's maid. At the time of Herr Doehme's suit against her mistress for divorce she aided the plaintiff, among other things, it is said, supplying the plaintiff with damaging letters. She later sued Herr Doehme for $9,600 for these services, alleging she had received only $400 out of $10,000 promised. Her present whereabouts is unknown.

Andrew Dickson White married twice. He married first, on September 27, 1857, Mary Amanda Outwater (February 10, 1836 – June 8, 1887), daughter of Peter Outwater and Lucia M. Phillips of Syracuse. Mary's maternal grandmother Amanda Danforth, daughter of Asa Danforth, Jr. and wife of Elijah Phillips, Jr., was the first white child born in what would become Onondaga County, New York. Her greatgrandfathers included General Asa Danforth, an early pioneer of upstate New York and leader of the State Militia, as well as Elijah Philips, Sr., who had responded to the alarm to Lexington, Massachusetts, in 1775 and later served as the High Sheriff of Onondaga of Deming, who had become well-known in Otero county within recent months as a result of presiding over the Dr. Akopiantz suit against, Gerald Champion Memorial Hospital, died Friday in a Deming hospital of a heart attack. Judge Marshall was appointed to hear the controversial case here, and won wide respect for his impartial handling of the trial. Marshall, who was 60 and had been a judge in the Sixth Judicial District since he first was appointed in 1941, had entered the hospital earlier this week. He had been in a hospital in Lordsburg only about two weeks ago after he had traveled there on official business. Marshall, a direct descendent of the celebrated U. S. Supreme Court Chief Justice John Marshall, died about 8: 30 p.m. Archibald Warren Marshall was born Jan. 1, 1897, the only child of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshall. His parents moved from "the Old South" to New Mexico in 1885, settling at Deming, where the father was office manager for the Victorio Land & Cattle Co. He was senior district judge in New Mexico from the standpoint of continuous service. He was appointed in June, 1941, to the district judgeship by Gov. John Miles to fill the unexpired term of Judge George W. Hay, who had been killed in an auto accident in California. Marshall was elected to his first six-year term in 1942 and re-elected in 1948 and 1954. Besides his widow, he left a son, Tom, of San Francisco, and a daughter, Margaret, who was on her way home from Spain, where she had been studying art. Funeral arrangements are pending.

The Barton Baker collection contains original Lone Scout magazines and numerous newsletters, which were produced by Lone Scout tribes from 1915 to 1924. There is also some of Baker's correspondence and newspaper clippings that relate to his involvement in the program. Personal biographical material is also included. Barton Baker became involved with the Lone Scouts of America from their beginnings in 1915. The Lone Scouts were created for youth who lived in isolated in rural areas, so Baker created a "Universal Tribe" which they could join if they could not find a pack. From the age of 14, he contributed many articles to Lone Scout magazines and newsletters, and he was head of the New York state chapter. He was one of the early members of the Elbeetian Legion - the alumni club of the Lone Scout movement. Baker was born in 1901, and he graduated from Cornell University in 1922. He earned a Ph. D. in 1928 and he practiced law in Rochester, New York.

CHARLES FREDERIC CLEMONS, Lawyer and Jurist. Charles F. Clemons has been active for more than twenty years in the legal profession of Honolulu. He has assisted materially in the revision of territorial laws and has served on the federal bench. Much of his time has been devoted to writing, especially on public questions, and he has contributed articles to newspapers and law periodicals. Now engaged in private practice, he was elected president of the Bar Association of Hawaii in 1924, having been for many years a leader in its various activities, its secretary for several years and its vice president from 1921 to 1924. Since 1920 he has been a member of the local council of the American Bar Association for Hawaii, and for some years a member of the Hawaii commission on uniform laws and since 1923 its chairman. He has been actively interested in citizenship education and in reforming court practice in masterships. On coming to Honolulu in 1902, he became associated in practice with Judge W. Austin Whiting, former attorney-general and Supreme Court justice of Hawaii. In 1904 the partnership of Thompson (F. E.) & Clemons was formed, which in 1909 became the law firm of Thompson, Clemons & Wilder (Judge Arthur A.) Judge Clemons was admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court in 1907. He received an appointment as United States District Judge in 1911, and remained on the bench until his resignation in 1917. Until recently, he was associated with Judge E. M. Watson, in the firm of Watson & Clemons. He was secretary of the commission to revise the laws of Hawaii, 1903-1905, and member of a similar commission, 1913-1915. He was chancellor of the Protestant Episcopal church from 1907 to 1911 and is a member of the board of directors of that church. He has been a vestryman of St. Clements church for about twenty years, and a director of the Y.M.C.A. from 1913 to 1923. Born at Manchester, Vermont, Oct. 9, 1871, Judge Clemons is the son of Dr. Seneca S. and Anna (Danforth) Clemons, and a direct descendant of Deacon Edmund Rice, who settled near Sudbury, Mass., in 1638; and of Peter Harwood, prominent as an early settler of Vermont, and is also of the Sherman family. He was educated in the public schools of Vermont and at Vermont Academy, where he was editor-in-chief of the school monthly. He received a B.A. degree at Yale University in 1895, graduating with special honors in natural and physical science, and being an editor of the Yale Daily News, a position won in competition with the highest credit for both editorials and body articles of any man who ever "heeled" the "oldest college daily." He attended the Yale Law School in 1897 and part of 1898, was chairman of the Yale Law Journal in 1897-1898, and in 1897 was awarded the Yale Law School prize for an essay, "Competition in Restraint of Trade." He received from the National University Law School, Washington, D.C., an LL.B. degree in 1898, and an LL.M. degree in 1899. Judge Clemons was admitted to practice in Connecticut in 1898. He practiced law at Burlington, Vermont, for a short time, going to Butte, Montana, in 1900, where he remained two years before coming to Hawaii. Judge Clemons married Virginia Armstrong Patten of Butte, Montana, on Sept. 10, 1902. He is a member of the American Bar Association, Chiefs of Hawaii, University, Outrigger and Oahu Country Clubs, and the law school fraternity Phi Delta Phi.

Charles R. Clark; 1842-1920. Charles R. Clark was born in Plymouth, New Hampshire, on December 28, 1842, and died in Montezuma, Iowa, on November 7, 1920. His boyhood days were spent on a farm with his parents and at the age of seventeen he became a student in the academy at New Hampton, and later entered Kimball Union Academy at Meridan, New Hampshire, from which he graduated in 1863. After teaching for several years in his native state and in Massachusetts he came West, first locating in Janesville, Wisconsin, and in 1866 was made principal of the schools at Le Claire, Scott County, Iowa. In the fall of that year he came to Montezuma and for twelve years was Superintendent of Schools. At odd times he studied law and in 1878 was admitted to practice. He formed a partnership with Honorable W. R. Lewis, and this partnership continued until 1881, when Mr. Lewis was elected Judge of the Circuit Court. Then Mr. Clark became associated with Mr. Thomas A. Cheshire, and that partnership continued until 1887, when Mr. Cheshire removed to Des Moines. From that time on Mr. Clark practiced alone until his son, Charles W. Clark, was admitted to the practice and became a member of the firm of Clark & Clark. Mr. Clark did not confine himself to the practice of law. He became an extensive land owner; he assisted in organizing the electric light company, and was a bank director. He was Superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School at Montezuma for fifty-two consecutive years. He was also a member of the Masonic Fraternity. Mr. Clark was a splendid type of citizen. He typified the old-fashioned virtues. He was a man of strong convictions and tender sympathies. Mr. Clark was twice married, in 1869 at Davenport, to Miss A. E. Townley of Massachusetts, who died in 1902, in 1905 to Miss Marion Hall of Massachusetts. To the first union one son was born, Charles W. Clark, who, with the second wife and one brother, survive.

Major George C. Martin. No. Ferrisburg Boy Died in Jacksonville Major George Chipman Martin, a graduate of the University Vermont in the class of 1892, a member of the Sigma Phi fraternity, died in a hospital in Jacksonville, Fla., at nine o'clock yesterday morning. Martin was born in North Ferrisburg May 18, 1869, and his early years were spent there. He fitted for college at Vermont Academy, Saxton's River, and for three years after graduation from the University engaged railroad engineering work. When the Cuban war broke out he enlisted with the rank of second lieutenant. He served in Cuba two terms and afterwards went to the Philippines. On his return he married a Miss Davis of Petersburg, Va. Later he was again called to the Philippines and during this term his health became impaired. Although obliged to go on crutches, he became military instructor at the State Agricultural College at Amherst, Mass., and was there several years and left to take a corresponding position in Charleston, S. C, and later at Green Cove Springs, Fla. He remained in the service until he had won the rank of major. He is survived by his wife and son, George, Jr., whom he placed in University of Vermont last fall. The son was called home by the illness of his father just before Christmas. Martin also leaves brother, Carlos S. Martin of North Ferrisburg, Walter W. Martin of Middlebury, himself an old soldier, and who called the major his youngest cousin, attended the funeral.

Filamer Christian University or the FCU is a private university established 1904 by Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Robbins with the help of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. The college is located in Roxas City, Capiz, "Filamer" is the combined name of Filipino and American (Fil-Amer) who ventured together in providing Christian education in the Philippines. ...Filamer Christian University was a home for orphans and poor children. In August 1904, Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Robbins were entrusted with care of three little children. This situation of neglected homeless children touched their hearts which led to the establishment of Capiz Home School, with the first building as a gift from the American Baptist Foreign Mission society. Miss Margaret Suman joined the work and (t)he school which was designed for girls, had 26 children at the beginning. After the construction of the New Baptist Home School building, it started to admit boys. The school made progress and 1920 was notable for its record in high enrollment of 80 pupils.

Obituaries. SUSAN CAROLINE STRONG (MRS. LESTER CHARLES) RANDOLPH '89 died in Milton, Wis., on October 14. She was born in Hebron, Conn., on April 25, 1867, the daughter of Levi and Susan Backus Strong. She received the degree of A.B and took a year of graduate work. Her husband, Lester C. Randolph, grad. '88-89, died in 1918.

Susan Caroline Strong Randolph; Birth: Apr. 25, 1867, Hebron, Tolland County, Connecticut, USA; Death: Oct. 24, 1931, Milton, Rock County, Wisconsin, USA; Newspaper Obituary published in The Milton Junction Telephone (Milton Junction, WI, Thursday, Oct. 29, 1931, p 1. Susan Caroline Randolph, daughter of Levi H. and Susan Amelia Backus Strong, was born April 25, 1867, at Hebron, Conn. She died at Milton, Wis., October 24, 1931. Her younger days were spent at Hebron and at Owego, New York. She was graduated from Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y. in 1889. Her chief academic interest was in the field of biology. While at Cornell she was active in the religious organizations and held the position of secretary of the Young People's society of Christian

Endeavor—representing the combined Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association groups—at the same time that John R. Mott was president of the organization. During her last year at Cornell, she became acquainted with her future husband, Lester C. Randolph, who was a post graduate student at the university at the time. On December 25, 1890, she was married to Mr. Randolph. They moved to Chicago where she entered the Woman's Medical college of the Northwestern university and Mr. Randolph entered a theological seminary. She was graduated from the medical school in 1893, one and a half years after the arrival of her first child, Beatrice. She never entered into active medical practice, but she tried to apply her medical knowledge in the rearing of her family. She was an undiscouraged student throughout her life. She took a great interest in collecting books and papers of a cultural nature which were a great help to Mr. Randolph in his work as a pastor. In all they collected between three and four thousand volumes. She was an enthusiastic supporter of the Esperanto language, and by sending out material and talking about it she helped to create interest in which she hoped some day might become the universal language. She was a member of the school board for many years at Alfred, N. Y., and she was greatly interested in the public library. Besides her literary and public interests and her activities in caring for her family she conducted a lyceum bureau for several years which was active throughout the middle west. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Randolph: Beatrice, Victor, Paul, Kenneth, Howell, and Doris. Though she had heavy responsibilities in the home and through her public interests and activities were no small consideration she maintained an attitude of quiet and retiring simplicity. She always faced the future with intrepid courage, even in situations very difficult to bear. When within one month she lost two full grown sons and her husband, she bore up bravely and lived always usefully for the remainder of her family. Mrs. Randolph's husband, the late Dr. Lester C. Randolph, was for many years an outstanding minister in Seventh Day Baptist churches and for seven years the pastor of the Milton church. He devoted much time to the interests of Alfred university and of Milton college. He was a popular preacher in pulpits of many denominations. He was a strong champion of the prohibition movement and was well known as a chautanqua and lyceum bureau lecturer. Mrs. Randolph was keenly interested in his work and ever alert to discover materials of value which he could use. Mrs. Randolph was a member of the Seventh Day Baptist church and a woman of fine Christian qualities. Though she was not prominent in the work of her church, her abiding interest was evident to her friends. Mrs. Randolph is survived by one brother, Howard C. Strong, Owego, N. Y., and by one sister, Mrs. Geo. Story, Chicago. Another brother, Clayton C. Strong, Oakland, California, has passed on. She is survived by three children: Dr. Victor and Dr. Howell Randolph, Phoenix, Ariz., and Doris, Mrs. Ezra Vincent, Two Rivers, Wis. There are five grandchildren: Kenneth's daughter Jean Marie; Victor's son and daughter, Victor Jr. and Caroline Elizabeth; and Howell's son and daughter, George Frederick and Susan Charlotte. Mrs. Randolph has been afflicted for several years with gradually failing health and the loss of sight until she was nearly blind. She bore her distress with great patience and fortitude. Through the use of her radio she enjoyed worship and sermons, lectures on educational and cultural subjects and good music. She kept up her interest in good books and engaged one and another to come and read to her. When callers came in she had interesting subjects of which she loved to speak and she rarely mentioned her physical distresses unless questioned about them. In her passing she leaves not only her children who will miss the abiding interest and affection of a loving mother, but also she leaves a large circle of friends who have known her, loved her, and who will long cherish the memory of one who lived and served so unselfishly. The funeral was held from the Milton Seventh Day Baptist church on Tuesday afternoon, October 27, 1931. Mrs. W. E. Rogers was the organist. A male quartette consisting of Dr. A. E. Whitford, Prof. L. H. Stringer, Prof. W. D. Burdick, and Mr. Leslie Bennett sang appropriate selections. The funeral was conducted by Pastor James L. Skaggs, the Rev. John W. Findley, West Lafayette, Indiana, and the Rev. Edwin Shaw assisting. Burial was made in the Milton cemetery. nell '27 and Charles E. McConnell '29. The Passing of an Engineer [From the New York Herald-Tribune of January] The death of Ira W. McConnell in Buenos Aires removes a figure known to few of his home-keeping fellow countrymen beyond the engineering fraternity. Though he built the long Gunnison Tunnel in Colorado and the large Pathfinder Reservoir in Wyoming, he had the engineer's dislike of publicity, and the sight of great waters diverted or impounded for the service of men was all he asked of fame. Like the Roman engineer who left his name on a single stone in the bridge of Alcantara, he was satisfied to leave the glory of his achievement to those for whom he worked. In South America, the field of his later activities, few Americans have been so well known or so honored. Not only were his consummate technical abilities recognized all along the east coast of the continent, but a rare personality that made him more than a highly skilled engineer won him the strong confidence of governments and laborers alike. For he was diplomat as well as engineer, and had an extraordinary facility for working with strange peoples without offending their susceptibilities. When he set up his camps in the drought-ridden lands of northeastern Brazil, which he was to turn into another Egypt by a series of cyclopean irrigation works, and sufficient workers failed to appear, he summoned the famous Padre Ciceró, whose influence alone could move the minds of the people, throughout the dry country of the sertão. It was through the friendship and understanding which engineer and priest instinctively felt for each other that he was able to marshal the army of workers necessary for the vast enterprise. That it finally failed of fruition and left the desert country strewn with uncompleted dams was no reflection on the masterly hand of McConnell or the loyalty of his devoted associates, but was due to the exhaustion of the inadequate funds provided for the grandiose task by the Brazilian government. Ten years ago, as a diversion from his larger undertakings, he built the American Embassy building at Rio de Janeiro. The crowning achievement of his career was the completion last year of the Lacroze Subway in Buenos Ayres (sic) and when he died, a few days ago, it was in the harness as supervising director of the road which he had dug beneath the Argentine metropolis. This engineer, with the friendly twinkle in his shrewd eyes and the laugh that could disarm the suspicious reserve of high officials or the timid awe of a simple laborer, was in his way a more effective envoy of the best in his country than the generality of ambassadors hedged about by the formalities of protocol.

W700 Fred Asa Barnes

The Faculty. Professor Barnes '97 Dies. Professor Fred Asa Barnes '97, Railroad Engineering, Emeritus, former Director of the School of Civil Engineering, died April 5, 1950, at his home in Pleasant Valley Conn. Professor Barnes received the CE at the University in 1897, the MCE in 1898. After working for a year as a draftsman in Washington, D.C., and as an engineer with the US Navy in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, he returned in 1902 as instructor in Civil Engineering. He was appointed assistant professor of Railroad Engineering in 1905, professor in 1915, and professor emeritus in 1944. From 1921-30, he was Director of the School of Civil Engineering. He was a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, Tau Beta Pi, and engineering societies; and the author with the late Professor Charles L. Crandall '72, Civil Engineering, of Railroad Surveying and Railroad Construction. Besides Mrs. Barnes, other survivors include his daughter, Mrs. Charles Hall (Mary Barnes) '26, and a sister, Mrs. William S. Masters (Louise Barnes) '09.

Fred Asa Barnes June 17, 1876—April 5, 1950. Fred Asa Barnes, Professor Emeritus of Civil Engineering, died on April 5, 1950 at Pleasant Valley, Connecticut, where he and Mrs. Barnes lived since leaving Ithaca in 1949. He was born in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, June 17, 1876, the son of Albert W. and Una M. (Thompson) Barnes. He graduated from Cornell University, obtaining the C. E. degree in 1897 and M. C. E. in 1898. He was married on April 15, 1903 to Bertha Lula Birdsall, who survives him together with one daughter, Mary Louise Hall also of Pleasant Valley, and two grandsons, Nicholas B. and Stephen M. Eddy, both of whom attended the School of Civil Engineering to which Professor Barnes devoted more the forty years of his life. Before entering his real life work of teaching Professor Barnes spent four years in a variety of engineering positions, first in the District Engineer's Office at Washington, D. C., and later in Cuba, working successively for the Hydrographic Office at Santiago, for the Ponupo Mining Company, and for Hugh Reilly, consulting engineer. In September 1902 he was appointed an instructor in what was then the College of Civil Engineering, thus beginning a teaching and administrative career that continued until his retirement in 1944. He was promoted to the grade of assistant professor in 1905 and was made Professor of Railroad Engineering in 1915. When in 1920 the College of Civil Engineering became the School of Civil Engineering, Professor Barnes became the School's first Director which position he held until 1930. Throughout his many years of service he played a prominent part in solving the educational and administrative problems of the College and School, being particularly interested in his own department of Railroad Engineering. He was responsible for the initiating and organizing of many new courses in the curriculum, including Railroad Operation and Management, Railroad Construction and Maintenance of Way, Costkeeping and Management, Engineering Construction, and Transportation. Professor Barnes was joint author with Professor C. L. Crandall of two textbooks, one on "Railroad Surveying" and another on "Railroad Construction". He also wrote many articles dealing with the design, operation and management of railroads, and with other aspects of the transportation field. He was an enthusiastic and active member of numerous professional and honorary societies. The honorary societies included Sigma Xi, Tau Beta Pi, Phi Kappa Phi and Chi Epsilon; and his professional affiliations included life membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers, honorary membership in the Steuben Area Chapter of the New York State Society of Cornell University Faculty Memorial Statement Professional Engineers, and membership in the American Railway Engineering Association, the American Society for Engineering Education, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He was particularly interested in the Ithaca Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and it was through his personal efforts that this local section was founded in 1932. He was one of the Section's early presidents and his enthusiasm and wise counsel contributed in a large measure to its continued successful operation. One of Professor Barnes' remarkable characteristics was his ability to remember the names and faces of Civil Engineering alumni. For many years he kept up to date a file of their addresses and occupations. It is probably true that no member of the faculty has ever done more to create and maintain a strong bond between the alumni group and the School of Civil Engineering and Cornell University. As a consequence few faculty members were ever more popular with returning alumni on their visits in Ithaca. Cornell alumni have lost a real friend, and the faculty a highly regarded colleague, in the passing of Professor Barnes. He will be kindly and gratefully remembered for his genial personality, his warm sympathy, his willingness to advise and help all who came to consult him, and his strong loyalty to the School and to the University.

W700 Henry Neely Ogden

Ogden '89 Dies PROFESSOR Henry N. Ogden '89, Sanitary Engineering, Emeritus, died September 29, 1947, at his home, 416 Hanshaw Road, Ithaca. He was secretary of the Class of '89. Born in 1868, the same year the University opened, he entered Civil Engineering from his native

Henry Neely Ogden

Maine in 1885, received the CE and was appointed an instructor in the College in 1889. (Of the University Faculty that year, only three members are still living: Emeritus Professors Liberty Hyde Bailey, first appointed in 1888; Ernest Merritt '86 and Grant S. Hopkins '89, both appointed in 1889). Ogden was named assistant professor in 1903, professor in 1908, and retired with emeritus rank in 1938. Professor Ogden was a practicing engineer as well as a teacher. He designed and supervised construction of Ithaca's sewage works in 1893-94; on the Campus, the stone arch bridge over Cascadilla Gorge on Central Avenue remains a monument to his engineering skill. He was the author of four books on sanitary engineering and a member of Sigma Xi; served as engineer to the New York State Board of Health, 1906-13, and on the State's Public Health Council since 1913. After the death of Professor Estevan A. Fuertes in 1903, he became head of the Department of Sanitary Engineering. In March, 1946, he wrote a biographical sketch of Fuertes for the ALUMNI NEWS series on "Cornell's Educational Pioneers." His and Mrs. Ogden's children are Mrs. Alfred C. Dalmas (Priscilla Ogden) '20, Katharine Ogden, Grad '20-12, (sic) John B. Ogden '22, and William H. Ogden '27.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 50, No. 4, 15 Oct 1947, pp. 96-97.

Henry Neely Ogden April 30, 1868 — September 29, 1947. Henry Neely Ogden was born on April 30, 1868 at Dexter, Maine, the son of the Rev. Charles Talcott Ogden, and a descendant of John Ogden an Englishman, who emigrated to Long Island in 1640 and who finally settled in Elizabethtown, New Jersey, in 1664. As a boy Henry Neely Ogden attended Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia for two years, and Cheltenham Academy in Cheltenham, a suburb of Philadelphia, for five years. During these years he resided with an aunt, Miss Frances E. Bennett, principal of the Ogontz School, and had an opportunity of observing the daily life and problems and compensations of one engaged in teaching as a calling. At Cheltenham Academy he was awarded the Fold Medal for general scholastic excellence. In fact, when the time came for him to enter college his father and his mother would have preferred to have him prepare himself to enter the ministry, but while the idea appealed to him his interest in things mechanical and his diffidence about speaking in public at that time led him to matriculate in September 1885, in the College of Civil Engineering at Cornell University, from which he was graduated in June 1889 with the degree of Civil Engineer. From the time of his graduation in 1889 until the time of his death in 1947 his interest in Civil Engineering, particularly in the field of Sanitary Engineering and Public Health, and in the work of the Episcopal Church led him to undertake numerous and overlapping activities. In September 1889 he became an instructor in the College of Civil Engineering at Cornell University, remaining at such until June 1892. Having decided to obtain professional experience in Sanitary Engineering, he obtained employment with the Sanitary District of Chicago where, from June 1892 to June 1893, he gained experience as transitman, and in the office. From June 1893 to June 1894 he practiced engineering at Norfolk, Virginia, with J. E. Hill, under the firm name of Hill and Ogden. From June to October 1894 he was employed as City Engineer for the city of Deering, Maine. However, in October 1894 his interest in teaching as a vocation led him to return to Cornell University as an instructor and from that time until his death on September 29, 1947 he remained a member of the Civil Engineering Faculty at Cornell, serving as Asst. Professor from 1898 to 1908; as Professor from July 1, 1908 to July 1, 1938; and as Professor Emeritus from July 1, 1938 to the time of his death. During his period of service as a member of the Civil Engineering Faculty he availed himself of sabbatic leaves on three occasions: February to June in 1906 and in 1914, and from September 1925 to February 1926. Concurrently with his return to Cornell as an instructor in 1894 he began actively to engage in Sanitary and Public Health Engineering, and in the work of the Episcopal Church. From 1895 until the time of his death he was employed in numerous engineering and other activities, in addition to his teaching duties. As an engineer and a consultant he served the cities of Ithaca, N. Y.; Akron, Ohio; Binghamton, N. Y.; Grove City, Pa.; Sandpoint, Idaho; Groton, N. Y.; Richmond, Indiana; the New York State Health Department; the public Health Council of the State of New York; and the Government of Cuba. As an author, in addition to numerous articles of a technical character, he wrote three books: "Sewer Design" in 1899, "Sewer Construction" in 1908, "Rural Hygiene" in 1913, and was a joint author with H. B. Cleveland of "Practical Methods of Sewage Disposal for Residences, Hotels, and Institutions" in 1912. During his sophomore year in college, again in 1890 and a third time in 1910 he visited Europe going to England, Germany and France to study and inspect the construction and operation of sewerage works. Numerous lantern slides prepared from photographs taken on the last trip attest to his regard for European practice, and now form a part of the educational equipment of the Department of Sanitary Engineering at Cornell University. When he began his career as a teacher of Sanitary Engineering the engineers of this country depended largely upon the result of research at the Lawrence, Mass. Experiment Station and upon European experience and practice. Professor Ogden's high regard for foreign practice is further attested by his attendance at the International Congress of Hygiene held at Brighton, England, in 1890 and his membership in the Royal Sanitary Institute of England. The esteem in which he was held by his English contemporaries is evidenced by his election to honorary membership in the Association of Managers of Sewage Disposal Plants of England, and by his appointment by the Council of the Royal Sanitary Institute to be one of the delegates from the Institute to the International Engineering Congress at San Francisco in June, 1915. He claimed gardening and carpentry as hobbies, but considered Administrative Church Control as a special avocation. His service as a Trustee at St. Faith's School at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. and of St. Stephen's College, (now known as Bard College) at Annandale, N. Y.; his active participation in the life of St. John's Episcopal Church of Ithaca, over a period of sixty-two years, serving the church for forty-two years as vestryman and warden; his many years of service as a lay delegate to the annual conventions of the diocese, a delegate to the Provincial Synods, and a deputy from the diocese to six General Conventions; his membership in the Diocesan Council and on the Provincial Board of Religious Education; furnish ample evidence that he had a special interest in such work, and that his father's career exerted a marked influence upon his activity. As a teacher his success was unquestioned by those who knew him—Colleagues and students alike. Almost to the time of his retirement he was the fortunate possessor of a strong physique which enabled him to work long hours and to carry on numerous activities concurrently. His keen and energetic mind; his constant urge to more activity; his analytical ability and his varied experience which enabled him to present the subject matter of the occasion to his students in a stimulating manner; his early recognition of the value, to the engineer, of a training broader than technical subject matter, which led him to offer instruction in a course dealing with the association of engineers with municipal officials, and in another course involving the use of the written word and called "Technical Reports"; made him an outstanding member of the Faculty of the College during his long career as a teacher. The exhibit which he prepared for the Fifteenth International Congress on Hygiene held at Washington, D. C. in September and October 1912 received a Diploma of Merit awarded to the "Department of Sanitary Engineering, College of Civil Engineering, Cornell University" ... "for an exhibit of its practical methods of Instruction," and demonstrated his belief in an educational effort extending beyond the classroom. As a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and a registered professional civil engineer; as a member of the American Society of Municipal Improvements, the Royal Sanitary Institute of Great Britain and the New York State Sewage Works Association; as a member of the honorary scientific society of Sigma Xi; as a trustee of three colleges, including Wells College not previously mentioned; as one who assumed an active part and rendered much service to his College, his church, his home city, and his state, Professor Ogden leaves an enviable record of accomplishment and one which will serve as an incentive and a challenge to those who follow.

Long State Road Hits First Snag at Halsted Span. Only a Temporary Bridge Crosses Little Calumet. ...Last summer the old bridge fell into the river. It is claimed that some dredging near its base caused it to collapse, but it was admitted also that age contributed to its fall. A temporary bridge 115 feet to the east has just been completed. In supervising the reconstruction of it, F. H. Avery, a city engineer, lost his life last week.

W701 Frank Hiscock

Frank Hiscock. Frank Hiscock (September 6, 1834 – June 18, 1914) was a U.S. Representative and Senator from New York. Early life Hiscock was born in Pompey, Onondaga County, New York, September 6, 1834. He graduated from Pompey Academy and studied law with his brother L. Harris Hiscock. He was admitted to the bar in 1855 and commenced practice in Tully, Onondaga County, New York. L. Harris Hiscock and Frank Hiscock were founders of the Syracuse firm currently known as Hiscock & Barclay. Career In addition to practicing law, Hiscock became involved in politics, initially as an anti-slavery Democrat, and then as a member of the Free Soil Party. Hiscock became a Republican when the party was founded in the 1850s, and served as district attorney of Onondaga County from 1860 to 1863. He was a member of the State constitutional convention in 1867, elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his brother. In 1872 Hiscock supported Liberal Republican nominee Horace Greeley for President, and in 1876 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention. He was elected as a to the Forty-fifth and to the four succeeding Congresses and served from March 4, 1877, until his resignation on March 3, 1887, at the close of the Forty-ninth Congress, having been elected Senator. He was chairman of the Committee on Appropriations (Forty-seventh Congress). In January, 1887 Hiscock was elected to the United States Senate by the New York State Legislature, defeating incumbent Warner Miller and Levi P. Morton in the Republican caucus and Democrat Smith M. Weed in the vote of the full legislature. Hiscock served from March 4, 1887, to March 3, 1893, and was chairman of the Committee on Organization, Conduct, and Expenditures of Executive Departments (Fifty-first and Fifty-second Congresses). Hiscock was an unsuccessful candidate for reelection. After leaving the Senate, he resumed the practice of law in Syracuse. Death and burial He died in Syracuse on June 18, 1914 of apoplexy. He was interred in Oakwood Cemetery. Family In 1859 Hiscock married Cornelia King (1837-1908), and their children included sons Albert King Hiscock (1861-1908) and Fidelio King Hiscock (1869-1917). Frank Hiscock and his wife also raised their nephew Frank H. Hiscock following the death of his father L. Harris Hiscock.

W703 Volney Nelson McCarn

A letter from J F. Crooker, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, states that in the contest for the Cornell scholarship from this county, J. C. Hoyt of this place stands highest on the list, and that Volney N. McCarn, also of Andover, is fourth on the list. Score another for Andover Union School and Academy.—Andover News.

Death at Andover. Volney McCarn died at his home in Andover, Friday morning, aged 28 years. He had been a sufferer from consumption for some time, and had been in Denver, Colo., for several months, in hopes that his health might be improved. He was taken worse and his mother, Mrs. S. J. Mourhees, went to Denver and returned with him the day before he died. The funeral services were held in Andover, Monday, at 10 o'clock, and interment was made at North Bingham. Mr. McCarn was a fine young man and will be missed by his many friends.

Obituary. Volney Nelson McCarn, '98. Volney Nelson McCarn, '98, M.E. (E.E.) died at his home in Andover, N. Y., on Christmas morning. Mr. McCarn had been ill for some time and about four months ago went to Denver for his health. The change in climate, however, did not benefit him and he returned to his home in Allegany county to live only one day. Mr. McCarn was of quiet disposition but he made friends of all his acquaintances. He was a faithful, hard worker and stood high in his studies while in the University. He was conscientious and upright and promised to make a success of life had not illness overtaken him.

The capstone of Atwater's [Wilbur Olin Atwater] career came with his use of the respiration calorimeter to study human metabolism. Designed and constructed in the basement of Judd Hall from 1892 to 1896 with important help from Edward Rosa, Atwater's colleague in physics, and Olin S. Blakeslee, a mechanic in the physics department, the respiration calorimeter was a chamber with chair, table, and bed in which a man spent four or five days per experiment. By precise measurement of income and outgo of both matter and energy for the subject during this period, Atwater and his colleagues demonstrated that the law of the conservation of energy applied to the human organism as well as to inert matter.

One of the Borough's oldest hotels, the Ithanell started as a boathouse with two cottages in the 1880s. Shortly thereafter a large house was erected and an even larger annex was added in 1897, giving the hotel some 35 rooms. ... The name Ithanell supposedly came from the men who built the first two cottages on the property. They came from Ithaca, New York, and the name is a combination of Ithaca and the neighboring college, Cornell. The owner liked the name and kept it as the name for the hotel.

COLE, LOUISE HOOPER. Entered from I. G. S., Sept., 1893 ; graduated Com., '95. Stenographer, 1896-present. 975 N. Tioga St., Ithaca.

From: Twenty-five year book of the Ithaca high school, 1876-1900, Ithaca High School, Ithaca, NY, 1900, p. 46.

A Very Nice Lady. Louise H. Cole remained single all her life. She was very family oriented and often wished for marriage and her own family. Although she met several men during her life, they never proposed marriage. The eldest daughter of a Civil war veteran who was ill from catching measles in a Southern war prison from which he never recovered, Louise helped care for him in the last years of his life when he was bedridden and blind. During this time, she attended school and graduated from high school. After school she went to work for Cornell U. in the Chemistry Dept. where she worked many years as a secretary, becoming knowledgeable with chemical terms and work. In about 1918 she was offered a secretarial position at Dupont Co. in Wilmington, DE. She then began a 25 year career there before retiring in 1945. During her years in Wilmington, she lived in a single room there. She and her sister, Ethel Cole Keeler, had inherited the family home at 918 N. Tioga St. in Ithaca, NY. Ethel had married in 1905 after the death of her father in 1903. Their mother died in 1906. Louise lived with the young married Keeler couple until she left for Wilmington. She returned to Ithaca to visit on holidays and some vacations. She was very close to her sister, often exchanging letters. She loved her niece Eleanor after she was born in 1922. When Ethel became ill with heart disease in 1945, Louise retired to be with her in her last days. After Ethel's death, Louise gave her share in the family home to Eleanor in the care of a local bank until Eleanor's 35th birthday. Eleanor was only 23 years old when her mother died. Louise continued her close attention to Eleanor the rest of her life, often taking the family out to dinner on Sundays after church. She lived to age 94.

Robert Orton Moody, Anatomy: Berkeley 1864-1948. Robert Orton Moody, Professor Emeritus of Anatomy, died in Berkeley, California, July 28, 1948, in his eighty-third year. He was born in Buffalo, New York, October 18, 1864. After graduating as B.S. from Cornell University in 1891, he attended the medical school of Yale University which he served, while undertaking his professional courses, as Instructor in Histology and from which he received the degree of M.D. in 1894. Immediately thereafter he became Assistant in Pathology at Yale University, 1894-1900, and almost at the same time entered practice as a physician in New Haven, Connecticut. In 1900 he returned to Cornell University as Assistant in Anatomy. A year later, he came in the same capacity to the University of California and held successively the positions of Instructor, Assistant Professor, Associate Professor and Professor in which capacity he retired in 1935. Professor Moody's major scientific contributions were his studies on the topography of the abdominal viscera in the living and related topics. These studies he pursued not only in the United States but at University College, London, England, where he acted as Demonstrator in Anatomy while on sabbatical leave, and at the University of Erlangen, Germany. His work was characterized by thoroughness, care and common sense conclusions and has now been accepted as the classical contribution to the field by its incorporation into almost every textbook. As a teacher, he occupied a transitional position between the older generation of thorough, detailed morphologists and the new dynamic anatomy which was coming into being. He will be best remembered by the many generation of physicians who passed through his hands for his untiring personal interest in their welfare. Always approachable, sympathetic and sincere, he was outstanding in the personal accord he was able to establish with his students whose welfare invariably was uppermost. To his colleagues, he was always encouragement, helpfulness and kindness. Many will mourn the passing of a quiet, unassuming and kindly Christian gentleman. Surviving him are his widow Mrs. Agnes Mary Moody and four nephews to whom we extend our sincere sympathy in their grievous loss.

W726 Charles Joseph Arnold

Obituary. C. J. ARNOLD, '92. Charles Joseph Arnold, who graduated from Sibley College with the class of 1892, died suddenly of heart disease at his home in Geneva, N.Y., on October 12. He was the junior member of the firm of Howard & Arnold, proprietors of an iron foundry in Geneva, and he had been a resident of that city for about seven years. He was a member of the Common Council for two years and declined a renomination at the last municipal election owing to the pressure of business engagements. Mr. Arnold married a daughter of the late John M. Jamieson, of Ithaca, and she survives him, with a son and a daughter. Mr. Arnold was a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 11, No. 4, 21 Oct 1908, p. 43.

Obituary. Charles J. Arnold. Genevans received a shock this afternoon at learning of the sudden death of one of their well-known business men, Charles J. Arnold, who for six years has been associated with Walter Howard in the Catchpole Boiler Works. He came to this city from Latrobe, Pa., at the time the boiler works was purchased by the present owners. He was also identified in city affairs, having served for two years as alderman from 1905 to 1908. Mr. Arnold went to the office this morning apparently in his usual health. About 10:30 o'clock he was taken suddenly ill and was removed to a doctor's office, where heart restoratives were given and he was then taken to his home at No. 78 Hamilton street, seemingly much improved. Shortly after reaching home, though, he had a fainting spell and died soon after, at about 1 o'clock. Dr. J. Byington Covert pronounced that death was due to angina pectoris, caused by acute indigestion. For the last few years Mr. Arnold has also been suffering from rheumatism. Mr. Arnold was 39 years old and was born in Albany. He was a graduate from Cornell University. Besides his widow he leaves two children, Martha and Joseph; and several brothers and sisters who reside in Albany. The funeral arrangements have not been made as yet.

W728 Carl Eickemeyer

Eickemeyer Patent On Joint Creates Continuous Rail. Invention of Brooklynite Eliminates Shock to Cars. Announcement was made to-day that Carl Eickemeyer, consulting engineer, of 64 Church avenue, has been granted a patent, No. 1,640,985 dated Aug. 30, 1927 on rail joints. This patent is the first rail joint to support the car wheel in passing from the end of one rail to the forward end of the adjoining rail that eliminates all shock to the rolling stock, the road bed, bridges and elevated structures. This joint has been approved by many of the Class 1 roads and eventually rail road traffic will be free from the annoyance, noise and the shock and vibration that keeps 130,000 freight cars constantly in the repair shop. Mr. Eickemeyer is the inventor of an insulated steel tie that saves the railroads from $25,000 to $30,000 per mile of single track installed. The new invention is due to win widespread attention in railroad circles where Mr. Eickemeyer's inventions have won interest for a number of years. Mr. Eickemeyer is a member of leading engineering societies throughout the country.

Carl Eickemeyer, Engineer, Dies. Carl Eickemeyer, prominent engineer and authority on the history of the early inhabitants of the Southwest, died Thursday night at his home, 64 Church, ave., in his 59th, year. He is survived by his wife, Pauline Eickemeyer; a sister, Mrs. N. Rowling and a niece, Miss M. T. Eickemeyer of Yonkers. Mr. Eickemeyer was the son of the late Rudolph Eickemeyer, and, like his father, patented many inventions in the mechanical field, including a disappearing gun carriage, a high speed third rail, automatic pumps and an improved steel cross tie. After working as an assistant to his father for some years, he established the Eickemeyer Field Manufacturing Company, which later was merged with the General Electric Company. As consulting engineer, he helped solve engineering problems in various parts of the United States. Mr. Eickemeyer had a great fondness for travel and was particularly interested in the early history of the Southwest and its inhabitants. He brought back from that region a collection of historic relics that he presented to the American Museum of Natural History and he recorded the result of his researches in several books, among them "Over the Great Navajo Trail," "Among the Pueblo Indians" and "The History of the Apache." Mr. Eickemeyer belonged to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and Society of American Military Engineers. He was a 32d degree Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine.

Obituaries. Carl Eickemeyer '92 Carl Eickemeyer died at his home in Brooklyn on December 2. He was born in Yonkers, N. Y., on January 14, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Eickemeyer. He spent four years at Cornell, taking mechanical engineering. He was well known as an inventor, as a consulting engineer, and as an author. Among his inventions were automatic pumps, shockless rail joints to eliminate car vibrations, and a single-weight disappearing gun carriage. He organized the Eickemeyer Field Manufacturing Company, which was later merged with the General Electric Company. He served in the War on the Officers Reserve Corps with the rank of major general. He traveled extensively and was the author of "Over the Great Navajo Trail," "Among the Pueblo Indians," "The History of the Apache" and similar books, and "The Articles of Confederation for the Peoples of the American Continent." He was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Society of American Military Engineers, and of the American Museum of Natural History. NURSE FIGHTS WILL OF INVENTOR AS HIS COMMON-LAW WIFE. Charges Widow, as Fiancee, Unduly Influenced Eickmeyer. More Than $32,000 in Estate. Trial by jury in the contest of the will of Carl Eickemeyer, prominent engineer and authority on the history of the early inhabitants of the Southwest, who died on Dec. 1, 1927, was set for next Monday by Surrogate Wingate today. Eickemeyer left his entire estate, valued at more than $32,000, to his widow, Pauline Frances Eickemeyer. The contest is brought by Frieda Sadler, a 32-year-old nurse, who claims through her attorney, William Jacobs, that she was Eickemeyer's common-law wife before his marriage to Mrs. Eickemeyer. In papers filed with Surrogate Wingate Miss Sadler claims that Eickemeyer was incompetent and of unsound mind at the time he executed his will on April 5, 1927, a month before his marriage, and that his wife exerted undue influence on him. Charge He Was Incompetent. "We will prove," said Mr. Jacobs, at his office at 51 Chambers st, Manhattan, "that Eickemeyer lived with Miss Sadler for a year in his home at 64 Church ave., and that between the years of 1909 and 1918 he was confined in a hospital up-State. Moreover, the fact that his will, executed only a month before marriage, gives almost everything to the woman he later married makes the will almost a condition of marriage." A month after his marriage Eickemeyer became ill and six months later, at the age of 59, he died. Like his father, the late Rudolph Eickemeyer, he patented many inventions in the mechanical field, including a disappearing gun carriage, a high speed third rail, automatic pumps and an improved steel cross tie.

Elizabeth Brown Ide was born March 9, 1873 to Christopher c. Brown and Caroline Owsley Brown of Springfield, Illinois. Mrs. Ide attended the Bettie Stuart Institute and Monticello, and then spent one year at the New York finishing school of the Misses Peables and Thompson. After school her father discouraged her from seeking employment. She married Francis Pierce Ide, of A. L. Ide and Sons, in 1896. ...Q. Now, if you'll tell me when you were born. A. Parents' names were... Well wait, you've got to tell when you were born. A. Oh, 1873. And my parents' names were Christopher C. Brown--he was a lawyer, as I said, in the firm of Stuart, Edwards and Brown, and Mr. Lincoln examined him in law. That was one of the things that gave him ... And my mother's name was Caroline Owsley Brown. And my husband's name was Francis Pierce Ide. And my schooling was--! don't know why I should get any special prize in schooling. (laughs) I went to the Bettie Stuart Institute as long as it existed. I was then about fifteen years [old] when it collapsed. Mrs. Holmes died and there was no one to take her place. And then I went to Monticello and was there until I graduated. And after I graduated Monticello I went to New York to Miss Peables' and Miss Thompson's Finishing School. And I was there a year. In New York I spent that year. And then I came home ready to be married, which of course I was looking forward to as all girls were at that time. There were not many career girls. I had visions of it, of being a kindergarten teacher or a nurse, but my father discouraged them. So I didn't, and I became engaged and was married. And went ... well, there's nothing very interesting there. (laughs) I went to Wisconsin to live, at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, for three years. And then my husband's father died and we came back here to Springfield because it was necessary for him to be in the firm, he being the only technical man. His brothers were not educated and he was educated for electricity and that sort of thing, all that. He went to, oh, Cornell. And had Phi Beta Kappa, too. I can tell that; he would never had told it, though.

Cape May's Electric Light War. Special to The Inquirer. Cape May, June 27.—As a consequence of the demolishing of the office of the Franklin Electric Light Company on Saturday night in order to oust the recently discharged superintendent, James W. Taylor, there was more excitement to-day. Last night the new superintendent made a forcible entry into the plant. This morning Former Superintendent Taylor took possession of the floor of the demolished building, but this afternoon employees of the Atlantic City Railroad took forcible charge of the place and began building a fence around the premises. To-night on complaint of Taylor, Leonard J. Smith, of Philadelphia, the new superintendent, was held in $600 bail on a charge of complicity in demolishing the office.

Engineer Dies; Helped To Build Peace Bridge. Arvin J.

Dillenbeck, a civil engineer who helped design and build the Peace Bridge between Buffalo and Fort Erie, died in the Cupola Nursing Home, Brockport, Friday after a long illness. He was 84. He was the father of Mrs. William O. Prudden, 10 Morrow Ave., Lockport. Mr. Dillenbeck was born in Cincinnati, N.Y., and took his engineering degree from Cornell University. He settled in Buffalo after college and worked on the Peace Bridge as an engineer with the Lupfer & Remick Co. there. He later worked for the Tuller Construction Co. of Redbank, N.J. He retired in 1957. He served at one time as president of the Cornell Club of Buffalo and also was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. Mr. Dillenbeck's wife, the former Mary Benham, died in April, 1961. Surviving are two sons, Donald D. of Angola and Lt. Col. Harold A. Dillenbeck, a retired Air Force officer living in Colorado Springs, Colo.; three daughters, Mrs. Prudden, Mrs. DeWitt C. Kiligas of Wyckoff, N.J., and Miss Jean Dillenbeck of Brockport, and nine grandchildren. Private services will be conducted Monday afternoon in the Prudden & Kandt Funeral Home in Lockport. Burial will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Buffalo.

W738 Henry Feehan

Lauby's Cornell Recollections. This column will occasionally be enlivened by reproductions of pictures which may trigger memories. My first choice features the staff of the Department of Chemistry as of 1901. It includes men who were actively associated with chemistry at Cornell from 1887 through the 1930's. Many of you alumni will have known some of them or at least have heard of them. Fortunately, an accurate key is available so the names can be given, from the left, row by row. ...Henry Feehan: Last but not least in the memory of Cornellians, "Henry" was stockroom clerk from 1882 to 1936. His role in the Department was so unique that I propose to devote my column in the next issue to him. I invite those of you who knew him to send me anecdotes and pictures (these will be returned if requested) so I can do justice to him.

Lauby's Cornell Recollections. Henry Feehan. In his 46 years as stockroom clerk of the Chemistry Department, Henry Feehan achieved a unique place in the memories and affections of faculty, students and alumni. Born in County Lough, Ireland, in 1856, Henry came to the United States when he was 24 and joined the Chemistry Department in 1882. This was only four years after instruction in chemistry was initiated at Cornell and the budding Department was located in a temporary wooden building where Goldwin Smith Hall is situated now. So Henry was contemporary with Ezra Cornell, Andrew D. White and the original chemical faculty (see the picture in the March 1969 Newsletter). As new quarters for chemistry appeared, Henry moved his stockroom to Franklin Hall, then to Morse Hall and finally to Baker Laboratory. He retired in 1934 and died in 1936. Several generations of faculty and many, many generations of students visited his stockroom window and came to know this wiry, slightly built, genial man, and appreciate the twinkle in his eyes and dry wit, and to look forward to his stories about early Cornell told in a rich Irish brogue. His friendliness and strong loyalty to the Department made it a better place. I first visited his window in the fire-scarred remains of old Morse Hall as a bewildered freshman in 1917. When the move to the spanking new Baker Laboratory was made in 1923, I returned to start graduate work just in time to help Henry move. He introduced me to the catacombs under Morse Hall where dusty shelves held all manner of intriguing chemical ware: retorts, wicker covered demijohns, gas fired tube furnaces, Kipp gas generators, and even a few alembics. (Yes, most of this was junked.) Since the lab in which I did my graduate work and later, my office, were adjacent to Henry's stockroom, my association with Henry was close. I always looked forward to his cheery "Top of the marnin' to yez" on my way to my eight o'clocks. Henry was always a ready friend in need. In one winter's morning's last-minute rush to make my eight o'clock lecture, my wife discovered that I had left with one brown and one black shoe. (In those days professors dressed more meticulously than now.) So Grace frantically phoned Henry in the hope he could intercept me. But I was already lecturing (fortunately, behind the huge lecture table in Baker 200). After the lecture, Henry alerted me to the problem but he took great delight in adding the incident to his fund of "professor" stories. Henry always carried his lunch and in summer he frequently wandered around the campus, thriftily collecting mushrooms. The first time he offered me some I accepted with reservations, but then decided that Henry was well on his way to a healthy old age. In winter, after finishing lunch, Henry usually took part in a spirited card game of "500" with younger members of the faculty, Henry always took a very real interest in conserving his chemical stores. When a graduate student came for supplies, Henry would peer at him skeptically over his glasses and say "What does yez want it for? Yez don't need that much." The friends Henry made at Cornell always looked forward to seeing him again. "Dusty" Rhodes tells of a party, staged by Cornell alumni at a meeting of the American Chemical Society at Washington, D. C., to honor Henry shortly after he retired. When Henry arrived, the committee told him the city was his and he could go any place and see anything he wished. Henry allowed as how he would like to visit the Chinese Ambassador. Quite dumbfounded, the committee took Henry to the Embassy but were told firmly by the staff that the Ambassador was very busy and not available. Then Henry took over, telling the secretary to inform the Ambassador that Henry Feehan wanted to see him. Almost immediately, the Ambassador (Dr. Alfred Sze) came out, greeted Henry by name, shook hands, drew him to a divan and chatted with him for ten minutes. Dr. Sze, when a student at Cornell, had lived in Henry's home. The Ambassador regretted he could spend no more time with Henry but he placed an Embassy limousine and chauffeur at Henry's disposal for his stay. So Henry and his friends travelled in style and enjoyed great courtesy from the police. Sturdy, thrifty, and hard-working, Henry put his five children through college although his salary was always very small. He was always grateful for the opportunities available in his adopted country. I often wonder, in these uneasy, socialized days, what Henry's reaction would be? Any of you have other stories about Henry? A. W. Laubengayer.

W738 Arthur Wesley Browne

785 Arthur Wesley Browne. November 24, 1877—December

15, 1945. Arthur Wesley Browne, Emeritus Professor of Inorganic Chemistry, died in Ithaca on December 15, 1945 after a somewhat prolonged period of ill health. He had retired in June of that year, having been continuously at Cornell since 1901, either as graduate student or member of the faculty. Dr. Browne was born in Brooklyn, New York, on November 24, 1877. He attended Wesleyan University, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1900 and the degree of Master of Science in 1901. He came to Cornell University for further graduate work and was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in chemistry in 1903. In his forty-two years of service as a member of the staff of the Department of Chemistry, he held the following appointments: Instructor of Chemistry, 1903; Assistant Professor of Chemistry, 1906; Professor of Inorganic and Analytical Chemistry, 1910; Professor of Inorganic Chemistry, 1922. In 1925 he served as the Acting Head of the Department of Chemistry and for many years he was in charge of the chemistry courses offered in the Summer Session. He initiated an employment service for graduates in chemistry and maintained extensive connections with academic and industrial circles. He was visiting professor of chemistry at the University of Chicago during the Summer Quarter of 1931, lecturing on the hydronitrogens and their derivatives. In 1933 Wesleyan honored him with the degree of Doctor of Science. Professor Browne early gained a reputation among his students for his enthusiastic and stimulating lectures on introductory chemistry in which he combined a forceful and colorful spoken presentation with a skillful use of the blackboard and ingenious and striking experimental demonstrations. He was particularly successful in gaining and holding the attention of large lecture groups and was much in demand for popular science lectures throughout the state. Many science students were first attracted to the field by his interesting talks. As a graduate student at Cornell under the direction of Professor L. M. Dennis, he became interested in the compounds of nitrogen and hydrogen and subsequently, as a member of the faculty, he made this field his primary research interest. In nearly 100 scientific papers published in American and European journals he made substantial contributions to the understanding of this area of inorganic chemistry. As an expert on the hydronitrogen compounds, he was called during World War I to act as consultant for Army Ordnance on the use of the azides of the heavy metals as detonators. His phase rule studies of ammonia systems constituted one of the first systematic applications of phase rule theory and contributed much of fundamental importance. He worked on the oxidation of hydrazine by mono- and di-deelectronators, nitridation reactions, solvation and solvolysis in liquid ammonia systems, and perchlorides and chlorinates. He discovered azido-dithiocarbonic acid and made a thorough study of its properties and derivatives. An expert glass blower, he was particularly ingenious in the design of complicated apparatus and techniques which served admirably for investigation of very unstable systems where the hazard of explosion was frequently great. He was possessed of a lively imagination and did not hesitate to suggest and develop unorthodox ideas and methods which proved to be fruitful. A long list of successful and productive chemists who received their research training in his laboratory attests the soundness of his guidance. Dr. Browne was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, Tau Beta Pi, Alpha Delta Phi, Omega Epsilon Phi, Gamma Alpha, Alpha Chi Sigma, Aljebar, the American Chemical Society and the Savage Club. Professor Browne was a man of broad interests. He was an enthusiastic and proficient figure skater and enjoyed long walks over the country side. He was gifted with a splendid bass singing voice of remarkable range and was active in quartet and chorus groups until his retirement. For many years he served on the music committee of the University and vigorously supported and took part in the musical activities of the community. He was particularly interested in student activities and was in great demand as a speaker at student gatherings where his ready wit, large fund of anecdotes, and superb command of the spoken word were much appreciated. Arthur Wesley Browne will be remembered as a brilliant lecturer, a gifted scientist, and a kindly friend.

W738 Emile Monnin Chamot

Emile Monnin Chamot. March 4, 1868—July 27, 1950.

Emile Monnin Chamot was born in Buffalo, and attended the public schools of that city. He received the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1891 and the doctorate in chemistry in 1897, both from Cornell University. The following year was spent in Europe, studying at the Universities of Nancy and Delft. During his period of service at Cornell Chamot gave instruction in various branches of chemistry specializing in toxicology and sanitary chemistry, and later also in chemical microscopy. He was largely responsible for introducing the latter field to American chemists, by many lectures before scientific and technical societies, and by his pioneer book "Elementary Chemical Microscopy", published in 1915 and succeeded in 1928 by the "Handbook of Chemical Microscopy". During World War I he carried on extensive studies of small arms ammunition for the Ordnance Department, and was a consultant on explosives during World War II. In 1924-25 Chamot was appointed an exchange professor in chemical microscopy, visiting a score or more of French Universities, a representative of seven American Universities. In 1937 he was awarded the Longstreth Medal of the Franklin Institute, "for meritorious work in chemical microscopy". Chamot's interest in sanitary chemistry was the basis of invalable service in testing Ithaca's water supplies during the typhoid epidemic of 1904, and of a long association with the development and control of the purification systems for the city and the university. In 1906 he acted as consultant in a similar epidemic in Scranton. A large share of the planning and supervision of the construction of the Baker Laboratory of Chemistry was his responsibility—evidence of the engineering bent that was so useful in his technical consulting work. A lover of nature from his childhood, a student of the biological sciences as well as of chemistry, eminently practical and realistic in the application of his diverse knowledge, Chamot was ever generous with advice and experimental assistance to faculty and students in the Department of Chemistry. He particularly enjoyed his collaboration in border-line problems with colleagues in biology, geology, archeology, physics and engineering, and continued active in research after his retirement in 1938. He is survived by his wife, Cora Genung Chamot.

W738 Louis Munroe Dennis

Louis Monroe (sic) Dennis. Professor of Inorganic Chemistry—Dec. 9, 1936. The death of Louis Monroe (sic) Dennis, on December 9th, 1936, marked the passing of another of that small group whose long services to Cornell, beginning in the earlier years of the institution, have been constructive forces in the development of the University. Coming to the Department of Chemistry in the Fall of 1887 as Instructor, he was advanced to an Assistant Professorship in 1891, and to an Associate Professorship in 1893. In 1900, he became Professor of Inorganic Chemistry, and he served as Head of the Department of Chemistry from 1903 until his retirement in 1931: forty-five strenuous years of active service. These years saw the work in Chemistry transferred to Morse Hall from Franklin Hall which had previously been shared with the Department of Physics; the extension and additions to Morse Hall; and the disastrous fire which well nigh destroyed that building in the Spring of 1916. The laying of the cornerstone of Baker Laboratory was a memorable day for Professor Dennis. It marked the beginning of an adequate home for the Department of Chemistry, and to the planning and building and equipment of this Laboratory, he devoted years of intensive study and expert knowledge. The Baker Laboratory of Chemistry is a monument and a memorial to the wisdom, the vision, the resourcefulness, the energy, and the inspiration of Louis Monroe (sic) Dennis. During these years and under his able guidance, the department showed steady progress, not only in material things, but also in academic work and in productive scholarship and research. The establishment of the "George Fisher Baker Non-Resident Lectureship in Chemistry" is the direct outgrowth of the plan, conceived and executed by Professor Dennis, of bringing to America each semester one of Europe's leading scientists. The wide studies of his undergraduate days in literature, languages, and music were developed and enriched by a highly sensitive and refined taste in artistic values. Blessed with rugged strength and a love of sport, he was no mean antagonist in competition with those who were many years his juniors. This joy of a life that was clean, and fair and generous, led to his long and devoted service to athletics at Cornell, to the inception of the annual musical festivals at the University, and to the support of other causes for the welfare of his fellows to which he gave himself persistently and unselfishly. To those whose chief contacts with Professor Dennis were along professional lines he will be remembered as the accurate, painstaking investigator, exacting and rigorous in his demands upon himself, and equally insistent that all who were under his direction should exhibit the same high standards and ideals. It is a source of gratification to his colleagues that, during the period of his retirement, he was able, with unimpaired vigor and industry, to continue the high quality of the scientific research in his chosen field which had brought him great distinction both at home and abroad. To those who were privileged to know him in more intimate ways, Professor Dennis was the gracious host, the welcome friend, the fair and generous sportsman, the tasteful connoisseur and gifted performer in various forms of art, the patron and supporter of many a fine endeavor, the ardent advocate of freedom in all its phases, loyal to the institution which he had served so long, devoted to the welfare of the community in which he moved. The world is finer and fairer because he lived.

W738 William Ridgely Orndorff

William Ridgely Orndorff. Professor of Organic Chemistry. 1862—Nov. 1, 1927. Through the death of William Ridgely Orndorff, Cornell University and the scientific world have lost an able and inspiring teacher and an eminent investigator. Born in Baltimore in 1862, he attended Baltimore City College, and in 1887 received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Johns Hopkins University, where he had held the position of personal assistant to Professor Remsen. He came to Cornell in 1887 as instructor in organic chemistry, was advanced in 1890 to an assistant professorship of organic chemistry, and to the professorship of organic and physiological chemistry in 1901, his title being changed to professor of organic chemistry in 1923. Professor Orndorff was the author of a Laboratory Manual of Organic Chemistry, and he translated Salkowski's Laboratory Manual of Physiological and Pathological Chemistry. He was also the coauthor, with Professor Remsen, of one of the leading text-books on organic chemistry. He was a member of the International Jury of Awards, Paris Exposition, 1889, the St. Louis Exposition, 1904, the Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, 1915, and was a special agent, U. S. Census, 1890. He was a member of a number of scientific and honorary societies. The organization of the Summer School of the University (now termed the Summer Session), and also of the Town and Gown Club of Ithaca, were largely due to Professor Orndorff's initiative. The lectures of Professor Orndorff were unusually clear, logical and comprehensive, and displayed a wealth of information concerning all branches of chemistry as well as of sciences other than his own. His published investigations comprise seventy-four articles, each of which embodies the results of very thorough and accurate experimental work. He was a steadfast supporter of sound scholarship and was severely critical of superficial or inconclusive experimentation. His influence upon many generations of students, both graduate and undergraduate, was profound, and he inspired them with much of his own enthusiasm and devotion for the science. This is attested by the high standard which his former students have continued to maintain in their later work. Both to his colleagues in the Department of Chemistry, and to those working in other scientific fields, who came to him for advice and assistance, Professor Orndorff was always ready to give freely of his time and of his abundant store of information and experience. The willingness of one so fully occupied with his own important work to be of help to others aroused among his colleagues a feeling of most sincere and grateful appreciation. One of his outstanding traits was his loyalty: loyalty to the Department of Chemistry and to the University which he served unselfishly and without thought of public acclaim, loyalty to his family, to his colleagues and to his friends. By all who knew him his passing is sincerely mourned.

was known among his many students as a very stimulating and forceful teacher. Gifted with imagination, dignity of manner and a keen sense of audience feeling, Professor Briggs' lectures were models of good organization, precision and clarity. Many graduate students in the fields of chemistry, biology and soil science for more than a quarter of a century have cited him as an inspiring influence during their years of training at Cornell. One of them said of him recently, "He made science dynamic, and research an exciting adventure. He was a teacher." His advent into the field of physical chemistry coincided with the rapid development of the field of colloidal chemistry. His work on electroendosmose and his summation of knowledge in the field was an important contribution to the field of plant physiology and soils technology, as well as to chemistry. His research work in the field of phase equilibria and emulsification was extensive. His contributions in these various fields were of immediate value in the development of industrial processes. He recognized the practical application of his research work and served effectively as consultant to various corporations. Professor Briggs was an ardent fisherman and loved to take a fishing trip with friends or his sons to some local stream or to some distant lake or stream in Canada or his summer camp in New Hampshire. As a hobby, he became very interested in the history of American railroads and maintained an extensive library on the development of the various systems. He was a member of Phi Kappa Tau and Alpha Chi Sigma fraternities and of the American Chemical Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Francis Ingalls Briggs, and his four children, Lynton and Adelaide, of Ithaca; George, of Cambridge, Massachusetts; and Gifford, of New York City, all of whom graduated from Cornell. In the death of Professor Briggs, Cornell has lost a devoted alumnus and teacher, whose passing has brought a deep feeling of personal sorrow to his former students, his colleagues in chemistry and to other friends on the campus.

Melvin L. Nichols. November 30, 1894 — March 29, 1981. Melvin L. "Pete" Nichols, emeritus professor of chemistry, who died March 29, 1981, at the age of eighty-six, enjoyed a career that almost perfectly characterizes a true-blue Cornellian. He was, in fact, a member of that very small group of our faculty that had been personally acquainted with every Cornell president. As Melvin Nichols, he left his home town of Dayton, Ohio, in 1914 to enter Cornell as a freshman. He remained in Ithaca, known to his many friends as Pete, until 1978, when, in failing health, he moved to California to be close to his only daughter, Sally. After receiving his Bachelor of Chemistry degree in 1918, he was appointed an instructor in chemistry at Cornell and simultaneously embarked on a graduate study program under Professor Orndorf, majoring in organic chemistry. He was awarded a Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1922 and was promptly appointed assistant professor in chemistry. He remained on the chemistry faculty until his retirement in 1962. Nichols's field of teaching and research was analytical chemistry, and for many years he was unofficial head of the analytical teaching group of the Chemistry Department. He wrote two textbooks on analytical chemistry, Gas Analysis, coauthored with L. M. Dennis, and Laboratory Manual of Analytical Chemistry. In 1950 Nichols agreed to become executive director of Cornell's Chemistry Department, a new position which involved supervision of the support facilities and the nonacademic staff of what had become a large and complex establishment. He held this position until his retirement in 1962. The forty-eight years of Pete Nichols's life as a student and teacher at Cornell were years of great change for Cornell chemistry. The science itself became more physical and more theoretical. Applied fields such as agricultural chemistry, sanitary chemistry, and chemical microscopy, which had once been central at Cornell, were spun off or phased out. Industrial chemistry was transformed into chemical engineering and moved into the College of Engineering for its separate and independent development. There was a disastrous fire in 1916 which destroyed Morse Hall, the chemistry building; fortunately, a splendid new Baker Laboratory building opened in 1922. That chemistry at Cornell survived these changes and indeed grew stronger and more effective over the years was due in large measure to the successful adjustments and continuing contributions of Pete Nichols and other faculty members of his generation. Cornell is in their debt. In 1926 Nichols married Mary Bancroft, the attractive and lively-minded daughter of one of Cornell's eminent chemistry professors, Wilder D. Bancroft. When newcomers to Cornell first learned of this marriage, they were prone to mutter something about "marrying the boss's daughter," and were chagrined to learn that the true situation had been almost the exact opposite. Nichols was a coworker and protégé of the other strong-willed Cornell chemist of the time, L. M. Dennis, and Dennis and Bancroft had a long-established and well developed dislike of each other. Hence, to Dennis, a Nichols involvement with a Bancroft was akin to joining up with the enemy. It is a tribute to his tact and his persistence that Pete Nichols rode out the storm and kept his Cornell position. Mary Nichols died suddenly in 1967, and Pete Nichols lived on alone in Ithaca, actively involved with his wide circle of friends. He will be missed by his Ithaca friends and colleagues as well as by the hundreds of Cornell students that he taught..

SSgt John J. Downey, III; Birth: unknown; Death: Oct. 30, 1944, Germany; USAAF WORLD WAR II Gunner S/ Sgt John J. Downey III KIA; Hometown: Jersey City, New Jersey; Squadron: 506th Sq. 44th Bomb Group Service# 12193464; Target: Hamburg, Germany; Mission Date: 30-Oct-44; Aircraft Model B-24; Location: vicinity of Hamburg; Cause: prop wash causes loss of control due to weather conditions at the IP and interference by preceding Wings, our formation integrity was broken, forcing 19 aircraft to bomb the Hamburg Oil Refinery by PFF and eight others to attack Uterson, Germany. No enemy aircraft were encountered, flak at the target was heavy but inaccurate. One 506th Squadron aircraft did not return, with flak being suspected as the cause. MACR #10139 states, in part, "Immediately after bombing, at 1318 hours, in vicinity of Hamburg, this aircraft went into a very steep bank. Heavy flak was encountered at this time. Aircraft came out of the 90-degree bank and was last observed flying apparently under control on 180-degree heading. Poor visibility, due to high clouds, made further sightings impossible. No chutes were seen." Lester Griffin, engineer, said that three men survived: Fuller, Capps, and himself. "We were a radar crew and flew only in bad weather. We were on our 23rd mission. The plane exploded, knocking or blowing me out, and I came down by parachute after regaining consciousness. I am writing this letter from the V.A. Hospital in Gainesville." Sgt. Clint Fuller sent other brief statements, "Bentcliff, Gempel, Fiskum, Barefoot, Celentano, Maschmeyer, Downey and a man of Mexican descent (Garza), went down with the plane. Ralph W. Capps and I bailed out over Hamburg, but I don't know how Lester Griffin managed to get out. "We flew into a heavy front while leading the high, right squadron. Soup was so thick that we had to fly on instruments. Someone crossed over in front of us, with the prop wash flipping us over, and the plane spun into the ground from approximately 28,000 feet. "On the contrary, our plane did not explode – it hit the deck. We did drop our bombs, but only to get rid of them. We saw no fighters or flak! In my opinion, there was no explosion as the German interrogator discussed our tail markings, base, Group, Squadron, town, Base Commander, etc." S/Sgt John J. Two die after wave flips boat. May 17, 1998. By Mary Callahan, Press Democrat Staff Writer. The deadly waters off the Sonoma Coast claimed two more lives Saturday when large sleeper waves struck a 16-foot fiberglass fishing boat, tossing four Sacramento County men into the chilly Pacific near Bodega Head. Two of the victims drowned. Two others managed to swim to Bodega Rock and were later rescued. The Sonoma County Sheriff's Department identified the dead as Harold Oliver Barfield, 66, and Keith J. Hausman, 75. Nawe Tira, 31, was taken to Palm Drive Hospital where he was treated for exposure and released. Unhurt was Marty Arne, 42. All four were from Rancho Cordova. The two drownings bring the season's death toll to seven since January, authorities said. "It's been a pretty rough spring out here for us," said Bodega Bay Fire Capt. Michael Elson. Five other drowning victims, including a 5-year-old Sacramento boy killed two weeks ago, were swept to their deaths while walking or playing on local beaches. Oddly, the sea was "like a lake" Saturday, Elson said. "It is really calm." However, he said the latest accident occurred in an area just beyond the harbor where the waves around Bodega Rock can be tricky. Coast Guard and sheriff's officials said the fishermen had been camping at Doran State Beach and were out fishing when their boat was struck by a 15-foot sleeper wave around 9:30 a.m. Impact of the wave tossed Hausman and Barfield into the water. Neither wore a lifevest and they drowned, Coast Guard Chief Boatsman Timothy Grant said. The other two men were thrown into the water when a second wave tipped over the boat and smashed it into nearby Bodega Rock. One of the survivors managed to cling to a life vest, and the other grabbed an ice chest. They made their way to Bodega Rock in about 30 minutes. They waited there for an hour until they could flag down a passing vessel. A Coast Guard vessel and a fishing boat recovered the drowning victims declared dead at the scene. The wife of one drowning victim was on shore when her husband was killed and had to be assisted by medical personnel, authorities said. The survivors were plucked from the rock by Henry One, the sheriff's department's rescue helicopter.

Besides his wife and son, Mr. Peck is survived by two brothers, Fred R. Peck of 525 Oak Street, and Frank J. Peck of Cortland, and one sister, Mrs. Louise P. Albee of Minneapolis. Mr. Peck, who was intimately identified with business in Syracuse for many, was born in Aurora, Ontario, Canada, on March 28, 1862. He first came to Syracuse about 1890. He established the Peck

Autographic Cash Register plant here. The firm, which marketed one of his inventions, was already established in Cortland. About five years later, in 1895, Mr. Peck sold out his interests and became general manager of the Barnes Bicycle Company, which manufactured the famous "White Flyer." Turns To Real Estate. Mr. Peck married Miss Carrie Aldrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce S. Aldrich of 432 South Salina Street. One of his first real estate ventures was the construction of the Peck Warner Building upon the site of his wife's old home. In 1909 and 1910, with C.M. Warner, he erected the Union Building. He was connected with the Aldrich Land Company. He was director of the Syracuse Trust Company. On behalf of that institution he purchased the Florence Apartments at South Salina and Onondaga Streets. Mr. Peck was interested in Lyons Beet Sugar Factory. The affairs of that concern caused him and his family to move to Los Angeles in 1912. Mr. Peck had been in the California city two years before that time, having offices in the Spring Arcade Building. The plant there was known as the Anaheim Sugar Company. Its growth was largely responsible for the place now bearing that name. Mr. Peck also formed the Crystal Chemical Company, which manufactured alcohol as a by-product of the plant. He later sold the sugar plant to the Holly Sugar Company, and the alcohol plant to the United States Industrial Alcohol Company. He then devoted his time to the development of California Real Estate. Figured Expansion. Mr. Peck was interested in the Los Angeles Speedway, which was torn down in 1924 to allow the land be developed as home sites. He was also instrumental for much other land development in California. Mr. Peck, while residing in California, made frequent visits to Syracuse. At the time of his last visit, which was in the spring, his friends noticed he was not in good health. His condition, however, was not considered serious. While residing in Syracuse, Mr. Peck took an active part in civic affairs as well as looking after his many business interests. He was member of the Century Citizens Club and the Onondaga Golf and Country Club. Friends and business associates grieved by the news of today united in paying tribute to memory of the man who played such an important part in the business life of Syracuse. W751 Charles Farrar Blood

Charles Farrar Blood Birth: Jan. 12, 1826 Death: Apr. 24, 1898 (Ithaca Daily News; Ithaca, NY. Tuesday, April 12, 1898.) General Charles F. Blood One week ago Monday

Gen. C.F. Blood went to Spencer to consult with Dr. Davis concerning his physical condition and while there was taken suddenly ill. It was thought at first that his sickness was not of a serious nature, but as time progressed he became gradually worse, until this morning he quietly passed away, at the age of 73 years. He leaves a widow and one son, District Attorney Charles H. Blood, who were at his bedside when the end came. Word was received here this morning and undertaker J.R. Comings drove to the place of death and will return this afternoon with the remains. The notice of the funeral will be given later. General Charles F. Blood was born in Bath, Steuben Co., N.Y., Jan. 12, 1826. In June, 1838, he came to Ithaca, taking advantage of the educational facilities offered by the county seat of Tompkins county, until he reached the age of 19, when he entered the mercantile business in the store adjoining the Culver block on East State street, in which location he continued business until the year 1872. In the spring of 1872, he erected the store No. 9 North Tioga street, being a part of the Masonic block, where he continued in the mercantile business for the next ten years, disposing of his business in 1882, after an almost uninterrupted business career of forty years. About the year 1883, he engaged in the manufacture of window glass and was one of the promoters of, and a stockholder in, and treasurer of the Ithaca Glass Works, during its existence and until it merged into the United Glass Company. For years he took an active interest in the militia of the state, was a charter member of Co. A, 50th Reg., N.G.S.N.Y., known as the DeWitt Guards, which was organized in Jan., 1852. On May 28, 1856, he was elected 2nd Lieutenant, and on Aug. 25, 1862, its Captain. His company was not mustered in special service during the war until Aug. 25th, 1864, when under special orders, promulgated from general headquarters of the State of N.Y., he, as Commander of Co. A, proceeded at his command to Elmira, after which they were mustered into service for 100 days. The command was detailed on special and important duties during practically the entire period service, until having served the period of enlistment. In Dec., 1864, Mr. Blood was elected Lieutenant-Colonel of the 50th Regiment, on Dec. 11th, 1866, was elected Colonel, on Sept. 20th, 1875, was elected to the position of Brigadier General of the 28th Brigade, N.G.S.N.Y., serving in that capacity until his retirement from the service after a military service of fully 25 years. He was for years a member of Tornado Hook and Ladder Co. No. 3 and afterwards and for several years Captain of the Protective Police. He was a member of the G.A.R., a member of the Masonic Fraternity and twice its Eminent Commander, a director of the Ithaca Savings Bank, a stock-holder and director of the Ithaca Trust Co., and for many years an elder and trustee in the First Presbyterian church of this city. He was also a member of the first paving commission of the city, was appointed by Mayor St. John, and re-appointed by Mayor Bouton. His various real estate and building enterprises have always evidenced his interest in the growth and material prosperity of the city of Ithaca. Obituary. Mrs. Ezra Cornell. Although she was quite unknown to the later university generations, the news that Mrs. Ezra Cornell, the widow of our honored founder, has passed from this life, will be received with sincere sorrow. She died at her residence on East Hill, Sept. 2. She was the daughter of Benjamin Wood, of Dryden, N. Y. Married to Ezra Cornell March 19, 1831, she was a true helpmeet to her husband in the troublous times of his active life.

Considered Marriage a Success. Ezra Cornell was a mechanic when he married, in March, 1831, Mary Ann Wood, of Dryden, Tompkins county, who died in Ithaca, Wednesday evening. In after years he frequently referred to his marriage as the most fortunate venture of his life and attributed much of his subsequent success to the encouragement and inspiration of his wife. Nine children were born, but only the five mentioned arrived at the age of maturity..

W759 Isaac Phillips Roberts

Isaac Phillips Roberts. First Director of the College of Agriculture and Professor of Agriculture. July 24, 1833 — March 17, 1928. Isaac Phillips Roberts was born at East Varick, New York, July 24, 1833. He became Professor of Agriculture in Cornell University in 1873. Was made first Director of the College of Agriculture in 1896 and retired Professor Emeritus in 1903. He died at San Francisco, California, March 17, 1928. For thirty years Isaac Phillips Roberts was the exemplification of Agriculture in Cornell University. He taught the subject wisely, managed the farms successfully, directed the students in their many activities with sympathy and good judgment, bore the difficulties of a pioneer period with courage and unfailing hopefulness, and was a trusted counselor and leader with his colleagues. He was admired and trusted by the farming people of the State, and became an acknowledged master throughout the country of the subjects associated with agricultural education. In the period when the rural subjects were unorganized pedagogically and when the way was not plain, he planned the work clearly and definitely for agriculture and had always in mind the welfare of the farming people; and in so doing he made a basic and enduring contribution. He lived to see his faith justified and established. His memory will occupy a large place in the history of the University. For these reasons and for all the associations that cluster around such an upright and devoted life, the members of the Board of Trustees and of the University Faculty now place on record this expression of their profound regret at Professor Roberts' death and extend to his family and friends their heartfelt sympathy.

Whiton, for half a century a prominent cracker baker and confectioner of Ithaca, and one of its foremost citizens, died on Saturday. John was educated in the public schools of Ithaca, New York, and then learned the baker's trade and the baking business. While still a young man he established his own bakery, which he operated in connection with a grocery and confectionary store. He was regarded as a man of sound judgment, keen discernment, and strong initiative. He was one of the founders of the Ithaca Savings Bank in 1863, and from 1883 until his death in 1896 was its president. He one of the founders of the Incorporated Schools of Ithaca in 1874, and in 1875 became a member of the school board. He was a trustee of the Village of Ithaca, first elected in 1849. In 1862 he was elected a supervisor of the town, and in 1868 became an incorporator of the village's waterworks. In 1881 he purchased a fine brick mansion on South Aurora Street in Ithaca. He died in that home. A published obituary in the Ithaca Journal said of him: "To the needy he was a liberal giver, as hundreds of poor people in the City can testify, and his acts were always performed without ostentation. In his habits and manners he was exceedingly plain. In his domestic relations he was generous and loving. He was greatly respected by all who knew him. He had an abhorrence of deceit in every form, and for honesty and fair dealing he had no superior. As a mark of respect every store in the City closed during the hour of his funeral." W763 Charles Cardoza Poindexter

The "Precursor" of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. Mr. Poindexter had expressed the idea that the Negro in America had no cultural background upon which to build a framework of a college Fraternity, and that this should be work for a later period. Charles Cardoza Poindexter (March 10, 1880- June 2, 1913) was born in Pennsboro, West Virginia to the parents of Joseph A. and Lucy Jordan Poindexter. After attending school there, he went to West Virginia Colored Institute, then to Ohio State University, where he secured the degree of B. S. in Agriculture in 1903. Today Poindexter is known as the precursor of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity because of his leadership in the developing stages of Alpha. As the only graduate student during the original social studies club meetings, he acted as the group President and continued in office during the formation of its early policies and the first initiation of Alpha Phi Alpha Society. On Tuesday, December 4, 1906 C.C. Poindexter would later step aside, in a spirit of self-sacrifice, due to the society's intent to become a full-fledged fraternity as originally suggested by Nathaniel Allison Murray (Tuesday, November 6, 1906). C. C. Poindexter's Letter of Resignation discussed on 12/4/06 was not accepted until January 8, 1907.

"Prof. Poindexter Dead" Charles C. Poindexter, who was Professor of the Agriculture Department and Biology at Fisk University, died at Hubbard Hospital shortly after 12 o'clock Tuesday morning. He was operated on by Drs. Stewart and Welker Saturday and made good progress until an unfavorable change came Sunday afternoon, resulting in complications and ending in his death. Prof. Poindexter was born in West Virginia March 10, 1880; he was a graduate from the Ohio State University in 1903 and did post graduate work for two years at Cornell University. Upon completion of his work at Cornell, he became director of Agriculture work for both St. Paul School at Lawrenceburg, Virginia and St. Augustine School at Raleigh, North Carolina under the Episcopal Church. From there he was called to Fisk University four years ago was assistant professor of Agriculture and Biology. In recognition of his efficiency and character, two years ago he was elevated to full professorship. During his residence at Cornell he married Miss Florence Mercedes of Ithica (sic), New York, March 31, 1905. A son was born to them in the summer of 1909. These two with three sisters and a brother survive him. The funeral was held Thursday morning at 9 O'clock in Fisk Memorial Chapel, and the remains were interred at the Greenwood Cemetery. The following young men of Fisk student body acted as pallbearers: Messrs. Nelson Glover, Raymond Powell, Charles Lewis, Overton Carter, Atwood Wilson and Henry Ferguson.

W766-W767 Romeyn Beck Hough

Obituary. Romeyn B. Hough '81 Romeyn Beck Hough, noted as an author and naturalist, died at Brantingham Lake near Lowville, N. Y., on September 2 of tuberculosis. He was engaged in writing fifteen volumes on natural history and had completed thirteen. Overwork is believed to have hastened his death. He was born in Albany, N. Y., on March 30, 1857, the son of Franklin B. and Mariah Kilham Hough. Later his family moved to Lowville and after getting his early education in Lowville Academy, he entered Cornell in 1876 and was graduated in 1881 with the degree of A. B. He was a member of the Curtis Literary Society. He invented a process of making and preparing sections of wood, be to used in lieu of pictures for illustrating the various species in a publication on American woods and was awarded grand prizes for them at the international expositions in Paris, Chicago, Buffalo, St. Louis, Seattle, and San Francisco. He also was given the special Elliott Cresson Gold Medal of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, Pa. He was a member of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, the Torrey Botanical Club, the American Forestry Association, the Washington Academy of Sciences, and the National Geographic Society. He was the author of "American Woods" and a handbook of "The Trees of the Northern States and Canada," and had furnished illustrative material of trees and woods for various dictionaries and encyclopedias. He was married on January 19, 1892 to Anna Maria Galloway of Lowville, who survives him together with a son, Romeyn B. Hough, Jr., '19.

Romeyn Beck Hough (1857–1924) was an American physician and botanist best known for creating The American Woods, a 14-volume collection of wood samples from across North America. Life and work Hough acquired an interest in forestry and natural history from his father, Franklin B. Hough, a physician and botanist, who spent much time with his son in the outdoors. He attended Cornell University in Ithaca, New York and studied medicine, later qualifying as a physician like his father. His passion however, was for botany. Hough developed a specialized veneer cutter capable of slicing wood to a thickness of 1/1200 inch. He started a business cutting and printing flexible, translucent wooden cards "for all fancy and business purposes", and also sold magic lantern and microscope slides made from the thinnest transverse sections. After seeing German botanist Herman von Nördlinger's volumes of European tree cross-sections, Hough was inspired to make his own representing “all of the American woods, or at least the most important”. Between 1888 and 1913, Hough published thirteen volumes of The American Woods: exhibited by actual specimens and with copious explanatory text, a collection of wood samples from North American trees, presented as paper-thin cross-sectional slices. To each tree he dedicated a cardboard plate which contained three slices—transverse, radial, and tangential—of the wood, accompanied by information about its botany, habitat and medicinal and commercial uses. The first volume of American Woods, focusing upon trees of Hough’s native New York, was available by subscription for five dollars. Hough had originally planned to publish fifteen volumes, which would include samples of all of the important trees found in North America, but he died in 1924 before the full set was completed. A final, fourteenth volume was published in 1928 using samples and notes made by Hough that were compiled by his daughter, Marjorie Galloway Hough. In total, each volume contained at least 25 plates and the complete 14-volume collection comprises 1,056 slices representing 354 tree species. Hough’s botanical work was widely acclaimed in his time. In 1908 he won the Elliott Cresson Gold Medal for his contribution to the understanding and uses of American woods, and American Woods won the top prizes at the 1889 Exposition Universelle in Paris, the 1893 World’s Columbian Exposition in Chicago, the 1901 Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, the 1904 Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis, and the 1909 Alaska–Yukon–Pacific Exposition in Seattle. Reviews of American Woods described it as “one of the most valuable contributions to the literature of forestry” and “absolutely without rival”. In 2002, it was republished by Taschen under the title The Woodbook, compiled by Klaus Ulrich Leistikow including a selection of lithographs of some trees’ leaves and berries by Charles Sprague Sargent. For antiquarian booksellers American Woods is “one of the most sought-after sets of the 20th century”. In 2000 art auction house Christie’s sold a complete set for $92,100.

W768 Henry Bird Lord

Obituary. Henry B. Lord. Henry Bird Lord, who had been a trustee of Cornell University since 1876, died on July 14 at his home in Ithaca. He was ninety-four years old. He had been a friend, adviser, and helper of the University during a full half-century, giving service which was valued until the very end of his life, for he lost none of his mental vigor in his old age. He was elected to the Board by the alumni in 1876, and when his term expired in 1881 he was re-elected by the Board itself and was continued in office every five years until last June, when he was returned for another five-year term. He was the eldest member of the committee on finance when the standing committees of the Board were reorganized last year. Although he was engaged in trade and banking from his eighteenth year Mr. Lord was a student throughout his life. His scholarship was such as to gain him the respect and fellowship of the scholars who were his neighbors. The first service which Mr. Lord rendered Cornell University was given in 1865. He was the member of Assembly from Tompkins County in that year, when the bill to charter the University and give it the state’s portion of the educational land grant was pending, and he was an active ally of Senators Ezra Cornell and Andrew D. White in advocating that bill. He had charge of it in the Assembly. President White has written in his Autobiography: “The Cornell bill was advocated most earnestly in the House by Mr. Henry B. Lord: in his unpretentious way he marshaled the university forces, and moved that the bill be taken from the committee and referred to the Committee of the Whole.” Mr. Lord succeeded in that effort after one of the many struggles which preceded the passage of the bill. Mr. Lord was born at Ancram, Columbia County, N. Y., on January 18, 1821. His parents afterward moved to Ulster County and then to Castleton, Vermont, where he attended the Castleton Academy. The family moved to Tompkins County, N. Y., in 1836, and settled at Ludlowville. Henry Lord went to work in a general store. He became the owner of the store and conducted the business until 1866. That was the year he completed his term in the Assembly. He returned from Albany to become cashier of the First National Bank of Ithaca and a resident of the county seat. He held the office of cashier till he was eighty years old. After his retirement he continued to be a director of the bank and he attended board meetings until within two weeks of his death. He was equally faithful in attendance upon meetings of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the University. When he was crippled by a fall the finance committee of the Board held meetings at his home so as to have his valued advice. The last time he was seen in public was at the Commencement exercises last June, when he was seated on the platform. Mr. Lord was a wide reader. He was a critical student of English literature, read Browning in companionship with the late Professor Corson, mastered Greek in order to know the classics, and took up the study of Arabic when he was more than eighty years old. He was well informed in botany and other sciences.

W768 Alonzo Barton Cornell

Death of Ex-Gov. Cornell. Eldest Son of Ezra Cornell Passes

Away at His Home in Ithaca. Alonzo B. Cornell, former governor of New York State, and for many years an honored member of the University Board of Trustees, died Saturday, October 15th, at his residence in Ithaca, after a lingering illness. Following a stroke of paralysis several months ago, Governor Cornell rallied for a brief period, then began sinking, and for almost a month his family had despaired of his recovery. The deceased was 72 years of age, and was the eldest son of Ezra Cornell, founder of Cornell University. He was born in Ithaca January 22, 1832, and was educated at the old Ithaca academy, now the high school. By reason of his father's association with Professor Samuel F. B. Morse, the young man early began the study of telegraphy, and after several years spent in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company became its general manager. Later he succeeded to the position of senior vice-president and for a time was acting president of the corporation. His public career began with his election as supervisor in 1864, and during the twenty years that followed, Mr. Cornell was a prominent figure in public life. After serving as surveyor of customs for the port of New York and then as member of assembly, he was chosen chairman of the Republican State committee, in which position he rendered valuable service in the reorganization of his party. In 1876 and 1880 he was delegate-at-large from this State to the Republican national conventions, and for four years served as a member of the national Republican executive committee. Elected Governor. Mr. Cornell's reputation and standing increased rapidly during this period, and in 1879 he was elected governor by a large majority, serving in this capacity three years. His administration was one of the most beneficent that the State has ever known. At the expiration of his term of office, Mr. Cornell retired from public life and devoted several years to his financial affairs. At length he decided to withdraw from active business and took up his residence in Ithaca, where he spent the majority of the time during the remainder of his life. Though in failing health for a number of years preceding his death, Governor Cornell retained his deep interest in the University, of which he was then senior trustee. University Honors His Memory. Upon receiving the news of the death of former Governor Cornell, President Schurman issued an official order, directing that the University flag be placed at half mast and remain so till after the funeral ceremonies on Tuesday. President Schurman also ordered that all University exercises be suspended after 2 p. m. on that day. Impressive Funeral Services. The funeral services were conducted in Sage Chapel Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the presence of a large gathering of University and townspeople. All exercises on the Campus were suspended for the afternoon and during the service the chimes were tolled at intervals. Not only in the University was the occasion solemnly observed but in the city nearly every business house closed its doors during the funeral. The Rev. Charles McKnight of St. John's Episcopal church read the impressive burial service over the remains of the deceased. He was assisted by Professor Charles Mellen Tyler, who spoke briefly concerning the forceful life of the deceased and drew a lesson from the last words of Governor Cornell and the simple faith in which he died. The honorary pall bearers present were former President Andrew D. White, President J. G. Schurman, George R. Williams, Charles S. Francis, Dean T. F. Crane, Mynderse Van Cleef, E. C. Stewart, R. H. Treman, C. M. Titus, Professor J. L. Morris and Roger B. Williams. The active pall bearers were the following students: R. R. Drake, '05; B. F. Lies, '05; C. H. Tuck, '06; M. S. Halliday, '06; H. H. Van Fleet, '07; F. B. Hooper, '07; W. S. Yard, '08; and E. J. Booth, '08. A quartet of students, composed of E. D. Button, '92, Edward Holmes, '05, rendered several hymns during the services. Immediately after the benediction by the Rev. Mr. McKnight a private burial service was conducted in the memorial chapel, where rest the remains of Ezra Cornell, father of the deceased and founder of the University. The body of the former, governor will repose there beside those of his parents.

Alonzo Barton Cornell (January 22, 1832—October 15, 1904) was a New York politician and businessman who served as 27th Governor of New York from 1880 to 1882. Early years. Born in Ithaca, New York, he was the eldest son of Ezra Cornell, the founder of Cornell University and Mary Ann (Wood) Cornell. He was educated at the Ithaca Academy. Family. He was married to Esther Elizabeth Covert, a native of Auburn, New York on 9 November 1852. Career. At the age of fifteen, he began a career in the field of telegraphy, later serving as a manager in telegraph office in Cleveland, Ohio. Afterwards, he owned steamboats on Cayuga Lake from 1862 to 1863. From 1864 to 1869 he was a cashier and vice president with the First National Bank of Ithaca. He was a director of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which had been co-founded by his father, from 1868 to 1876 and was its vice president from 1870 to 1876. He was town supervisor of Ithaca in 1864-5. From 1858 until 1866, he served as chairman of the Tompkins County Republican committee, and in 1866-7 was a member of the Republican state committee. He was one of the first commissioners for the erection of the new state capitol at Albany from 1868 until 1871. He was the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor of New York in 1868, but was defeated by Democrat Allen C. Beach. He was appointed by President Ulysses S. Grant as Surveyor of the Port of New York. From 1870 to 1878 he was chairman of the state Republican Party. He resigned his position as Surveyor of the Port of New York to become a member of the New York State Assembly (New York Co., 11th D.) in 1873, and was elected Speaker, one of the very few times a first-term member was chosen. He was influential at the 1876 Republican National Convention which nominated Rutherford B. Hayes. In January 1877, he was appointed naval officer of the Port of New York by Grant. Hayes, upon becoming president, directed the Treasury Department to notify Cornell that he must resign from the state and national Republican committees as a condition of remaining naval officer. Regarding this as an invasion of his civil and political rights, Cornell declined to obey the mandate, whereupon a successor was nominated, but was rejected by the Senate. After the adjournment of the Senate in July 1878, Hayes suspended both the collector (Chester A. Arthur) and the naval officer, and their successors were finally confirmed. At the subsequent elections, Cornell was chosen Governor of New York and Arthur became Vice President of the United States. Cornell was governor from 1880 to 1882, elected in 1879. His administration was noted for economy in public expenditures, and his vetoes of appropriation bills were beyond all precedent. Upon his recommendation, a state board of health and the state railroad commission were created, women were made eligible for school officers, a reformatory for women established, and the usury laws were modified. The resignation of the New York senators from the U. S. Senate in 1881 provoked a bitter contest for the succession, by which the Republican Party was divided into hostile factions, the Stalwarts and the Half Breeds. Cornell's opponents prevented his re-nomination for governor. Death and legacy. Although he lived in New York City during his latter years, Cornell died in Ithaca, New York, aged 72, and was interred with his father and mother in Sage Chapel on the Cornell University campus. He wrote a biography of his father in 1884. His papers are held in Cornell University Library's Division of Rare and Manuscript Collections.

W. Klise, A. E. Hough, M. Irvin Dunlap, a popular attorney of Greenfield and regarded as one of the most promising of the younger members of the bar, comes of a family long prominent in Highland county. He is a son of William and grandson of Milton Dunlap, M. D., for many years a physician of high standing at Greenfield. The latter's brother, Dr. Alexander Dunlap, was one of the most prominent surgeons in southern Ohio. After finishing the sophomore year at Wooster college, Irvin Dunlap matriculated at Cornell university and received the degree of Ph. B. with the class of 1891. Having made up his mind to enter the legal profession he became a student in the Cincinnati law school, where he was graduated as bachelor of law in 1894. Immediately thereafter he began the practice of his profession at Greenfield and has continued it to the present time. He is regarded by his friends as a young man of fine promise and one of the best lawyers of his age in southern Ohio. He served a term as city solicitor of Greenfield with entire satisfaction to all concerned and is looked upon as in the line of promotion to much higher honors. He is a young man of studious and exemplary habits, a member of the Presbyterian church and connected with the Masonic fraternity. "The Press Gazette", Hillsboro, Ohio 11/19/1957, Greenfield Attorney, Public Leader, Is Claimed Friday, Milton Irwin Dunlap, 88, a prominent figure in the legal profession, the real estate business and public affairs in Greenfield for 65 years, died at 3:30 A.M. Friday, November 16, 1957, in Good Samaritan Hospital, Dayton. He had been in failing health for several years but remained active in real estate development until recent months. Dunlap entered the practice of law in Greenfield in 1892, and retired from active practice in 1946. He won considerable prominence by his conduct of an inheritance suit on behalf of Elizabeth Ann McCafferty against the estate of her uncle, Edward Lee McClain, in the late 1930's. The prolonged litigation, which was carried to the Ohio Supreme Court, resulted in a settlement reported to be in excess of $3,000,000 for his client. Since curtailing his activity in the law, he had devoted much of his time to developing his subdivision properties just northwest of Greenfield. He was born in Greenfield Oct. 10, 1869, a son of William K. and Mary J. Irwin Dunlap. He was married to Miss Nelle James on Nov. 18, 1903. She died in 1946. He also was predeceased by a son, Lowell Dunlap, who died Jan. 9, 1939, and a sister, Elizabeth, who died in 1913. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Madelaine Dunlap, of Dayton and a brother, Walter H. Dunlap, of Greenfield. He attended the Greenfield schools and at the age of 17, matriculated at Wooster College, later graduating from Cornell University and the Cincinnati College of Law. He entered law practice in 1892. During the period 1910-1920, he operated the Dunlap Pony Farm, raising Shetland ponies and selling them throughout the country. Following the dissolution in the 1930's, of the Greenfield Country Club, which was located on his Hillcrest holdings, he subdivided the property and lived to see it become a thickly populated residential section. He also was associated in establishing Mayfair as a subdivision which subsequently was annexed to Greenfield. Dunlap in his earlier years attained considerable stature as an orator, and took a prominent part in many of the patriotic rallies held during World War I. Services were held Monday at 2 P.M. in the Murray Funeral Home, in charge of Rev. Clair S. Emerick. Burial was made in Greenfield Cemetery. W792 & W793 William Russell Dudley

Obituary. W. R. Dudley '74. William Russell Dudley, B. S. '74, M. S. '76, emeritus professor of botany in Leland Stanford Junior University, and formerly for many years a member of the Cornell faculty, died at Stanford University on June 4. He had been in poor health for several years and he retired from active teaching a few months ago. Professor Dudley was born in Guilford, Conn., on March 1, 1849. He entered Cornell University in 1870, taking the course in science. A pupil of Agassiz while here, he caught the enthusiasm for the study of natural history which that teacher brought to Cornell. He studied in the Agassiz School at Penikese Island during the summer after his graduation in 1874. While continuing his studies here as a candidate for the master's degree in science, he served as instructor in botany. In 1876 he was appointed assistant professor of botany and in 1883 assistant professor in charge of cryptogamic botany. In 1887-8 he spent a sabbatic year in study at Strassburg and Berlin. He remained at Cornell until 1892, when he accepted a call from President Jordan, then organizing the faculty of Stanford University, to take charge of the department of botany in the new institution. He taught at Stanford until the middle of the present college year, when he retired from active work in the hope of regaining his health, which had been weakened by a severe illness. Professor Dudley was the author of "The Cayuga Flora," "Lackawanna and Wyoming Flora," and (with Professor M. B. Thomas) "Manual of Histology." He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, vice-president of the California section of the American Forestry Association, and secretary of the California Redwood Park Association. He was associate editor of the Bulletin of the Sierra Club. An appreciation of Professor Dudley's work at Stanford was published in The Stanford Alumnus for February and reprinted in the Alumni News for March 8. It spoke especially of his interest in forest preservation. During the summer vacations the pursuit of his botanical studies took him into the mountains and forested areas of California, where he was impressed by the constant waste of forest resources. He became one of the pioneers in the movement toward conservation, and rendered valuable services to the state and the nation through suggestions and advice to the Forest Service and other authorities. The establishment of the California Redwood Park, a tract of forested land set aside by the state for the purpose of preserving a forest of the coast redwood in its primitive conditions, was accomplished largely through his efforts. He was secretary of the first Park Commission. He also labored for the establishment of courses in forestry at Stanford, and this project was in a fair way to success when the earthquake of April 18, 1906, brought serious financial embarrassment to the university and, prevented the realization of his plans. Soon afterward he contracted a serious illness which left him physically weakened.

William Russel Dudley (March 1, 1849 – June 4, 1911) was an American botanist. He headed the botany department at Stanford University from 1892 to 1911. His collection built at Stanford is considered to be one of the most important contributions to knowledge of the flora of California. This became the nucleus of what is now known as the Dudley Herbarium. He was born in Guilford, Connecticut. He grew up on a farm, where he developed an interest in plants. He became a student at the new Cornell University in 1870, graduating in 1874, and paying his way by milking cows at the university's farm. His college roommate, David Starr Jordan (who later wrote an obituary for him in the journal Science), wrote of his demeanor, saying that Dudley was "a tall, well-built, handsome and refined young man, older and more mature than most freshmen, and with more serious and definite purposes." He studied natural history under Louis Agassiz on Penikese Island in 1875, and in the Harvard Summer School in 1876. In 1873 he became instructor of botany at Cornell, and in 1884 assistant professor of cryptogamic botany, and also professor of botany in the Martha's Vineyard summer institute during its sessions in 1878–79. He was appointed botanical collector for the university, received his master's degree in 1876, and was promoted to assistant professor of botany. In 1892 he took a position as head of the Stanford department of systematic botany. His important published works include The Cayuga Flora (1886), A Catalogue of the Flowering Plants and Vascular Cryptograms found in and near Lackawanna and Wyoming (1892), The Genus Phyllospadix, and Vitality of the Sequoia gigantea. Sarcoscypha dudleyi He was an early forest preservationist, often consulting for US forester Gifford Pinchot, regarding developing national forests in California. He became an activist in the Sempervirens Club, devoted to protecting the coast redwood (Sequoia sempervirens), and was key to establishment of what is now Big Basin Redwoods State Park in the Santa Cruz Mountains. In 1901 the California Legislature passed an enabling act whereby 3,800 acres (1,500 ha) of land were purchased by the state in the next year to preserve the coastal redwood forest throughout the Santa Cruz Foot-hills area. Dudley was one of four men appointed to the first state board of commissioners. Big Basin Redwoods State Park was established in 1902, the first of many in that state created since then. Dudley contracted an illness while studying trees in Persia. He contracted a severe cold or bronchitis in Egypt, and later died of tuberculosis in 1911, in Los Altos, CA. In 1913, Stanford University published a "Dudley Memorial Volume" containing a paper by the then late Professor and appreciations, and contributions by friends and colleagues.

One of the students in this stereo view appears to have lowered his trousers, perhaps to “moon” the photographer. It is difficult to be sure of such an interpretation as there is insufficient resolution detail in the images.

Appendix E

William Benjamin Bowler, Class of 1873

William Benjamin Bowler was born on 2 Dec 1851, the son of D. B. Bowler of 68 Rue Fron Fort., Port au Prince, Haiti. (See below.) He attended the Polytechnic College in Port au Prince before coming to Cornell for the 1869-70 academic year, taking the optional or elective course. He was a member of two literary societies during 1869-70: Irving and Adelphi. He was enumerated in the 1870 US Population Census for Ithaca, NY, and was listed as “white.”

The other student from Port au Prince, Haiti who attended Cornell during the same year and left at the same time as Bowler was Arthur Bird, Class of 1873. Bird was the son of Mark Baker Bird, an English clergyman and missionary, who lived and worked in Haiti. Mark Bird authored a book entitled The Black Man; or, Haytian Independence that argued for Haitians to be free and self-governing. A copy of this work is in the Cornell collection, and was inscribed as follows: “Ezra Cornell Aug 19, 1869 Paid W Bird son of the Auther two dollars for this Book. The son intending to enter as a student of Cornell University. I purchased the book to aid him without examination on a case as it merits— EC.” (See right.)

Mark Baker Bird’s approach to encourage social progress in Haiti was described in: Mark Baker Bird and His Early Defense of Haiti, by Joseph A. Boromé, October 1970, in Bulletin of the New York Public Library. (Cornell University Library Z881 N6 B93) and is quoted as follows: “Having pondered the possible methods of training the young, Bird opted for first influencing the children of the ruling class and then, eventually, the masses." (ibid. page 502) Given their simultaneous arrival in Ithaca it is likely that Arthur Bird and William Bowler were acquainted, and given Mark Bird's interest in the Haitian people it is possible that Bowler was encouraged to attend Cornell by the elder Bird.

The timing of his son's arrival at Cornell (and possibly that of William Bowler) is noted in the same article: "In 1869, having wed a colored woman of Jamaica during a visit to that colony, he [Mark Bird] sailed with his family for England, passing through New York." (ibid. page 505)

Arthur Bird's Cornell Alumni News obituary mentions William Bowler, but draws no connection between the two men:

Obituary. Arthur Bird '73, who was one of the oldest newspaper men in the country, died February 26 at his home in Sidney. He had suffered a stroke of apoplexy on December 10 and another four days before his death. His parents were English missionaries in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, and he was born there, entering the University in the Natural Science Course in 1869 and remaining one year. A statement made by Ezra Cornell in a University assembly which he attended that "now we have a foreign student enrolled, we can rightfully lay claim to being a college," Bird took to mean that he was the first foreign student ever to enroll. In the first year, however, according to the Register, the University had three students from England and one each from Brazil, Russia, and Nova Scotia. In 1869-70 the Register showed ten others besides Bird from outside the United States, including one, William B. Bowler '73, from Port-au-Prince. After leaving the University, Bird received the MD degree from Columbia, was for a time interpreter for the State Department, and in 1878 was secretary of the American legation in Port-au-Prince. In 1882 he founded the Sidney Record, a weekly, and was its editor and business manager until his death. From: Cornell Alumni News, Vol. 37, No. 20, 7 Mar 1935, p. 9.

While no evidence has been located to show that William Bowler had African ancestors, his physiognomy suggests that he did. If so, he was the first Cornell student of African descent. Information concerning Bowler's potential genealogy is detailed below.

Right: records retrieved for the surname “Bowler” from the Association de Généalogie d’Haiti’s web site, which features access to records transcribed from the Archives Nationales d’Haiti. Records transcribed to date:

- David Bowler, born 16 Oct 1832
 - William Bowler, born 16 Oct 1832
 - William Bowler, married 19 Dec 1835
 - William Bowler, died 29 Mar 1835
 - William Bec Bowler, born 24 Mar 1834
 - William Bée Bowler, married 14 Aug 1833
 - William Bee Bowler, died 7 Jun 1837
 - William Bee Bowler, died 7 Jan 1838
 - William Bee Bowler, died 15 Jan 1838
- Not sure if any of these are related to William Benjamin Bowler, born 2 Dec 1851. David Bowler, born 16 Oct 1832, may be his father (i.e., D. B. Bowler).

use of sugar, that they would find a ready market for all they could produce, as hundreds and thousands would prefer sugar made by the hands of freemen, even at a higher price, to that which had been mingled with the tears of the slave. Cincinnati Journal.

EXPECTOR SLAVERY IN VIRGINIA.—In 1790 this State contained one fifth of the political power of the Union, was twice as large as New-York, and one third larger than Pennsylvania. The opposite of this is her present situation. She must now rank below Ohio, a State that was not in existence when she was in the zenith of her prosperity.

PROSPECTUS OF THE GENIUS OF UNIVERSAL EMANCIPATION.

VOL. XII.

The object and character of this work are well known. It has been published nearly ten years, and circulates in all the States of this Union, Canada, the West Indies, Europe, and Africa. It is exclusively devoted to the subject of the Abolition of Slavery, on the American Continent and Islands.

Within a few years, the proprietor has travelled much, and has to deplore somewhat upon the assistance of others to conduct the work. He pledges himself, however, that the publication shall not cease, but will the cessation of his natural life, provided, the public patronage, or the labor of his own hands, will furnish the means of issuing a new short series of numbers. He further pledges himself, that he great fundamental principles, hitherto advocated in this work, shall be eternally maintained. The course to be pursued hereafter, will not materially vary from that which he marked out in the beginning. The corrupt sources of the horrid evil of slavery shall be traced; this fatal gangrene upon the body politic shall be peeled; and the healing balsam will be applied when the painful mass is removed. Every possible investigation will be made as to the state of the slave-system, and what is doing relative to its perpetuation or abolition, particularly in the various parts of the United States and the West Indies. Every exertion will also be made to show what can be done, with propriety and safety, towards eradicating this enormous and increasing evil from the American soil.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The work will, henceforth, be issued monthly. It will be neatly printed, on fine paper, and folded in the octavo form, each number making sixteen large pages.

The price of subscription will be One Dollar per annum, always to be paid in advance.

Subscribers who do not particularly specify the time they wish to receive the work, or notify the Editor of a desire to discontinue it before the expiration of each current year, will be considered as engaged for the next succeeding one, and their bills will be forwarded accordingly.

Agents will be entitled to six copies for every five dollars remitted to the Editor, in current money of the United States.

All letters and communications, intended for this office, must be addressed (free of expense) to BENJAMIN LUNDY, Washington, D. C. May, 1831.

POSTAGE.

The postage of the Genius of Universal Emancipation is now the same as that of weekly newspapers. One cent and a half, for each paper, is the highest that can be legally charged within the United States. If the distance be less than one hundred miles, but one cent can be deducted. 3¢ Post-office will please attend to this notice. The Post-Office in Washington forwards the paper under this regulation.

Bird, Mark Baker (1807–1880), Methodist missionary in Jamaica and Haiti. Born in England, Bird served with the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society of London. After four years in Jamaica (1834–1838) and a few months as the first Methodist missionary in the Cayman Islands, he was moved to Haiti in 1840. There he endured the 1842 catastrophic earthquake in Cap-Haïtien (in which two of his children died) and survived revolutions and several natural disasters. But he always believed in the country and its people. His two books, The Black Man or Haitian Independence Deduced from Historical Notes (1869) and Un paradis terrestre (published posthumously in 1881), analyze events in Haitian history and culture in a critical but supportive way. He and his mission colleagues decided to concentrate resources on the towns and cities rather than on rural areas. They focused particularly on education. Throughout Bird's time in Haiti, emblazoned over the portal of his Port-au-Prince schools were words penned in 1816 by President Alexandre Pétion when he invited Methodist missionaries to come to Haiti: "L'Education lève un homme à la dignité de son être." Bird's educational work survives to this day. The present Methodist Church's prestigious high school is named "Nouveau Collège Bird." In July 1879 Bird left Haiti after 39 years and died a little over a year later on the island of Jersey, England.

W114 William Bradley Breed

While the photograph of Dr. W. B. Breed is captioned “Tallest and Shortest in Class 79 Cornell” Breed entered Cornell as a member of the Class of 1878:

The Freshman Class. The entering class this fall is somewhat smaller than usual. The evil disposed consider this a result of coeducation; but we are inclined to regard it as the result of additional requirements for admission—nearly fifty candidates having been rejected. Although few in numbers '78 seems to possess good material and we hope every member has come with the intention of taking a complete four years' course. We congratulate the class on their good appearance and comparative freedom from what is known in all colleges as the “rowdy element.” Knowing by experience how desirous Freshmen are of learning some thing of their classmates before the appearance of the Register, we have obtained for their especial benefit the following list:
...Breed, W B, Optional, Phoenix, N Y.

From: The Cornell Era, Vol. 7, No. 1, Sept 1874, p. 7.

Although his name was associated variously with the Classes of 1879, 1880, and 1881 in several documents, he graduated with the Class of 1880:

Even though William Breed was short, at 5 feet 2 1/2 inches, he was not the shortest person in the Class of 1879 or the Class of 1880. For 1879, that distinction went to Minnie M. Fleming at 5 feet; for 1880, the shortest was C. D. Smith at 5 feet 1/2 inches.

Obituary.

WILLIAM B. BREED '81.

Dr. William B. Breed a prominent physician and a member of the class of '81 died at his home in Syracuse, Tuesday, Oct. 24.

Dr. Breed was born in Phoenix, N. Y. in 1858. He attended the Phoenix high school and entered Cornell with the class of '81. He was a hard student and a prominent man in college and was a member of the Chi Phi society. After finishing his college course, Mr. Breed took a course in the college of medicine at Syracuse. After graduation from this institution he settled down to practice at Syracuse and rapidly rose to a high position in his profession. He was wholly devoted to his work and was always an earnest student and a follower of new and advanced methods. Dr. Breed recently went to New York to undergo an operation for abscess of the brain. His system was weakened by the operation and meningitis set in resulting in his death.

The faculty of the college of Medicine of which Dr. Breed was a member, adopted the following resolutions in his memory :

WHEREAS, The faculty of the College of Medicine of Syracuse University, has learned with profound sorrow of the death of one of its co-laborers, William B. Breed, M. D., and desires to record on the college archives its estimate of his character and its appreciation of his services, therefore be it

Resolved, That in Dr. Breed we recognized a man of high ideals of character and of noble conduct; that we admired his scientific methods as a student, his conscientious devotion to his chosen profession, his gentle and modest demeanor, and the broad liberality that characterized his life; that as a teacher he has left behind a record of faithful work and helpfulness; that it extends to his family its deepest sympathy; and that out of respect to his memory the faculty attend his funereal in a body; and that on that day the college work be suspended.

CORNELL'S OARSMEN AT WORK.

THE CREW TO ROW AT SARATOGA—THE QUARTERS ON THE LAKE.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 14.—At no time since the season of 1876 has there been so much interest shown in boating matters as now. This has been awakened by the entry of a Cornell four for the college races, which are to form a prominent feature of the regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen at Saratoga next month. The apathy, however, which usually prevails after a succession of victories, has not yet been wholly dispelled here, and though this college was the first to enter a four-oared crew, the men were not selected and put into quarters until May 15. Since then, however, they have been pulling together daily, and much improvement is noticeable in every part of the boat. Thus far they have been under the supervision of no regular trainer, and have paid little attention to practice time, laying particular stress on form and unity of action. Capt. Ostrom will soon be in Ithaca; then the real work of the season will commence, and continue until regatta day.

The crew that will represent Cornell at Saratoga this year is a remarkably strong one. The members are: No. 1, J. W. Warner, Rock Stream, N. Y.; No. 2, J. G. Allen, Aurora, Ill.; No. 3, N. D. Shinkel, Rochelle, Ill.; No. 4, Capt. J. F. Lewis, Ithaca, N. Y.; substitute, G. M. Mann, Milwaukee, Wis. No. 1 pulled starboard stroke in the victorious Saratoga Freshman crew of 1876, and port bow in the Watkins four of 1878; he is 21 years of age, and weighs 165 pounds. No. 2 handled the sweep at No. 6 in the Freshman crew which defeated Harvard at Owasco last year, and by many was considered the best man in the boat, though he is only 18 years old. No. 3 was Captain of 81's victorious freshman eight, and is regarded as the strongest man in the present four. No. 4 was Captain and stroke of Cornell's victorious Freshman crew in 1875, and starboard stroke of the University crew of 1876. He is the oldest oarsman in the boat. He weighs 170 pounds and is 24 years of age. The diet of the crew is very liberal, and, though meat, vegetables, and milk predominate at their table, every kind of food is allowed, and the men are only refused tea, coffee, and stimulants. They are at present rowing in a cedar shell with the old style of oar-locks. Their new paper boat, built on the English model, by Waters, of Troy, will be ready for use about the 20th.

The finances of the navy are in rather a depressed condition, but students and townspeople, as well as Alumni, are coming to the rescue with substantial aid. President White has presented the navy with $50, and B. Morgan, one of the Trustees of the university, with a like amount. The expenses of the crew are estimated at $1,500, but at the present writing not half of this amount has been raised. Snake Hill Cottage has been secured for the use of the crew while on the lake. The cottage is situated on the edge of a bluff projecting far out into the lake, and commanding such a view of the course that with the aid of a telescope the practice time of every competing crew can be taken and compared. The members of the crew are at present in good spirits, and prepared to do much heavy work during the next few weeks.

THE CORNELL CREW BEATEN FOR THE STEWARDS' CUP—OTHER CONTESTS.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, June 30.—This was the first day of the Henley-on-Thames Royal Regatta, the most important gathering of amateur oarsmen in England. The weather was beautiful, with a soft, cool breeze, and the water was in splendid condition. The river was crowded with craft of every description.

In the first heat for the Grand Challenge Cup, for eights, the Hertford College crew, having the Berks station, defeated the Dublin University crew. There was a good struggle until within a few lengths of the bend of the river, when the Hertfords won easily. In the second heat the London, Thames, and Kingston crews finished in the order named. The London men had the Centre station and the Kingstons the Bucks station. The London crew led from the bend of the river and won by two lengths. In the third heat the London crew defeated the Eton College crew.

In the first heat of the race for the Visitors' Challenge Cup, the first Trinity College crew, of Cambridge, defeated the third Trinity College crew, of Cambridge. The time of the winning crew was 8:59.

In the race for the silver goblets, for pairs, the first heat was easily won by the London Club crew's pair, consisting of Messrs. Adcock and Playford, who had the Berks station, defeating a French pair. The Hertford College pair, consisting of Messrs. Brown and Buck, who had the Bucks station, were out of the race before Poplar Point was reached.

In the race for the Diamond Sculls for scullers, Lowndes, of the Hertford College crew, defeated his two opponents, who are members of the London Rowing Club. The second heat was won by Wild, of Frankfort, defeating Pattinson, of Newcastle, and Lieu, of Paris.

The first heat in the race for the Stewards' Cup was won by the Thames Club crew by a length, they having the Berks station. The London Club crew came in second, four lengths ahead of the Cornell University crew, who finished third. At the start the Cornell crew sprang away splendidly, and was ahead in a few strokes, when the boat of the London Club fouled them, cutting a hole in the canvas of the Cornell's boat. The umpire at once stopped the race, and much delay ensued. It was found that one of the seats of the Cornell's boat had been displaced, and it had to be remedied with some string from the umpire's boat. At the second start the London Club got off first. The Cornell crew, to avoid another contretemps, made for the bushes on the Bucks side. They rowed very well to the Rectory, but there began bad steering, which utterly destroyed their chance. The Thames Club crew, rowing in grand form from that point, forged persistently ahead, ultimately winning the heat. The time of the heat was 8:56. Another account gives the first heat for the Stewards' Cup as having been won by two lengths, and declares that the Cornell crew were six lengths behind. The order of the Cornell crew in their boat was as follows: Cowles, bow; Lewis, Allen, and Shinkel, stroke. The Cornell men are despondent. Their opponents are too good for them. The question of the Cornell crew rowing the match with the Hertford College crew over the Henley course on Saturday is not officially settled.

From a comparison of various accounts it appears that the Cornell crew were in front for half the distance of the course, and it appears that the boats were closer together at the finish than stated in the first accounts, the Cornells being from two to three lengths behind the London Club crew. The wind (as well as their station) were unfavorable for the Americans. Unfortunately, their new and lighter boat, which was expected a week ago, only arrived this morning, and was, consequently, unavailable.

In the second heat for the Stewards' Cup the Hertford College crew, having the Berks station, beat the Leander crew by three lengths. Of 11 heats in the various events rowed to-day it is notable that not one was won by a crew having the Bucks stations. Nine heats were won by holders of the Berks station and two by holders of centre stations. The disadvantage of station is strongly shown in the case of the Leander crew, who were the pick of old university oarsmen.

LONDON, June 30.—Mr. Gillig telegraphs from Henley that the Cornell crew are confident of beating the Hertford College crew in the four-oared race on Saturday.

The crew of the Lady Margaret Boat Club rowed over the course for the second heat for the Visitors' Cup.

LONDON, June 30.—A Henley correspondent says the Cornell crew fouled with the London crew after the first start was effected. Although beaten, the Cornell crew have the satisfaction of knowing that they were beaten by good crews. The Hertford College crew was scratched for the Visitors' Cup.

The Daily Telegraph says a tremendous reception awaited the Cornell crew on their paddling down to the starting post. They used a very long wind-sail and a rudder in proportion. The foul was caused by one of the London Club's bow-side oars cracking the top side of the Cornell's boat.

THE CORNELL CREW'S DEFEAT.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—A Vienna correspondent says: "The Presidents of the various Vienna rowing clubs were most hospitable to their foreign visitors, and many Americans availed themselves of the privileges afforded. A splendid course was kept. Both crews were much cheered, especially the Americans. After a mile had been traversed, Shinkel was seen to falter, and in a moment or so the Cornells were in complete confusion. Shinkel then fell forward, and it was ascertained that he had fainted. The Viennese crew was composed of very muscular and powerful men."

TOPICS OF INTEREST ABROAD.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Advices from Rio Janeiro to July 26 state that a dispatch from La Paz, Bolivia, announces that the Bolivian Convention has decided to continue the war against Chili.

A Vienna dispatch states that Mr. Shinkel, the stroke oar of the Cornell crew, was out of health for several days before the race, but is now better.

THE OARSMEN ALLEGE THAT SHINKEL SOLD THE RACE AT VIENNA.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Messrs. Cowles, Lewis, and Allen, of the Cornell University crew, state that they have indubitable proof that J. N. D. Shinkel, the other member of the crew, sold their race with the Austrian crew at Vienna, on Aug. 11. They have personally charged him with the fact to-day, and say they intend, on their arrival in America, to publish the evidence in their possession. Suspicion was awakened at the moment of his pretended faint, and the suspicion has since been amply confirmed.

J. N. D. Shinkel is of the class of '81, and his residence is at Rochelle, Ill. He rowed stroke. He is 23 years old, 5 feet 10½ inches high, and weighed 173 pounds at the time the crew left this country. He rowed stroke at Enslenore in 1878; No. 3 at Saratoga in 1879; same at Lake George in 1879; stroke at North Hector, July 3, 1880, and the same at Lake George, July 16, 1880.

A SHINKEL THEORY.

The Cornell men—the four who cannot row—are very exasperating. Just after their sincere friends had convinced themselves that the real object with which the Cornell crew went to Europe was to show how well American oarsmen could bear defeat, this pleasant theory is upset by the announcement that one of the crew is accused of having sold the Vienna race to the Germans, and that his comrades have quarreled with him and are on their way home. This is quite irreconcilable with the theory that the Cornell four are humble and consistent martyrs, thirsting for defeat and ready to accept it at the hands and oars of the humblest German boating men. We are, therefore, forced to invent a new explanation of their extraordinary conduct, and in this hot weather the task is by no means easy.

The three Cornell men who accuse Mr. SHINKEL of having been bribed to pretend to faint away during the Vienna race must not expect to be believed unless they produce evidence in support of their charge. It is, to say the least, very improbable that the Germans, who are proverbially thrifty, took the trouble to win a race by foul means which they were morally certain to win by fair means. When the Cornell men went to Vienna they had already been beaten in every race they had rowed. Every rowing man who had read the account of their English races knew not only that they could not row, but that the harder they tried to row the more certain they were to run into the bank. In these circumstances the German crew must have felt perfect confidence in their ability to row over the Vienna course before the Cornell men could flounder over half the distance, and they must also have known that the more earnestly their antagonists could be induced to contest the race the more hopelessly the Cornell boat would be beaten. Instead of hiring Mr. SHINKEL to faint and drop his oar, the astute Germans would rather have encouraged SHINKEL and each one of his comrades to row their very hardest. If Mr. SHINKEL's alleged illness really was a pretense, it is quite possible that he stopped rowing in the rational hope that the crew would run into fewer banks without him than with him.

Whether SHINKEL was bought or whether he pretended to faint as the best method of helping his comrades, it remains equally clear that the Cornell men are not pure-minded, unselfish martyrs. As they have quarreled among themselves because they were beaten at Vienna, it is quite possible that bribes have been paid to some of their number. Is it not, however, conceivable that Mr. SHINKEL is the one simple-minded, earnest oarsman, and that his three comrades have been bought with British and German gold? The Cornell crew was beaten in England without any fainting on the part of SHINKEL, and undoubtedly would have been beaten at Vienna had SHINKEL rowed his best—or, to speak more accurately, his worst. Suppose that Mr. SHINKEL should assert that, in his belief, the three other Cornell men were hired by the effete despots of Europe to lose races in order to bring American oarsmen into contempt, would not this accusation seem at the least very plausible? Consider the wretchedly bad rowing of these unfortunate young men. It must have taken months of hard labor for them to learn to row so exceptionally badly, and it seems improbable that they would have attempted the task had they not been well paid for so doing. They must have known when they left this country that there were not four small-boys in Europe outside of a hospital for cripples who could not beat them in a fair race, and unless they were hired by the despots aforesaid to give exhibitions of bad rowing, how can we account for their willingness to go abroad? Assuming that three of the crew were thus hired to be beaten, we may imagine that Mr. SHINKEL was the one man of the four who really fancied that he could row, and who went to England in good faith. This simple-minded man may have discovered at Vienna, while in the very act of rowing a race, the true character of his companions, and the shock may have caused him to fall unconscious in the bottom of the boat. Finding themselves discovered, the three other men may have hastened to forestall public prejudice by accusing the innocent SHINKEL of the boating crime of which they themselves were guilty. Thus we arrive by a series of gentle assumptions at a clear explanation of what would otherwise be inexplicable.

Of course, it would be unjust in the absence of any conclusive evidence to charge these Cornell men with having been hired to lose races, but they themselves must see that the human mind imperatively demands some explanation of their conduct. If they went abroad in good faith, expecting to win races, then the conclusion is inevitable that they ought to have represented an asylum for weak-minded youth instead of an American college. If Mr. SHINKEL is really the sort of man who sells races, then the three other men who have associated with him for several years and never discovered his character need to be provided with careful governesses and sent into remote rural towns where they can be kept from falling in with more bad boys of the Shinkel pattern. If they honestly meant to uphold the credit of Cornell University, and, in order to do so, announced that a representative Cornell oarsman is a wretched "welcher," then the best thing that can be said of them is that—well, they are the kind of men who are capable of that sort of thing. Either the intellect or the honesty of Mr. SHINKEL's three comrades must be called in question, and perhaps the kindest course would be to permit them to decide to which they attach the greater value.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL ACCOUNT OF HIS ALLEGED TREACHERY IN THE VIENNA RACE.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—This evening's issue of the Journal contains the following: "Information has gradually been oozing out and percolating through this community for some days that Shinkel had arranged before leaving Ithaca to throw such races as Cornell might row after the first one. Since Saturday last a Journal representative has devoted himself to gathering the threads, and an ugly tangle they make for Shinkel and some local sporting men. It appears that a regular tripartite agreement was made before the crew left Ithaca for New-York, and while it was still making practice pulls on Cayuga Lake. This agreement was to the effect that the crew should win the Visitors' Cup if possible, but if not admitted to this, to strain every nerve for victory in the Stewards' race—this in order to boom Cornell into favor with betting men, and elevate her in the pool-box; that after winning the first race, every subsequent one should be systematically thrown by Shinkel; the high contracting parties being Mr. Shinkel, stroke oar, would-be captain, and betrayer of his fellows; Michael Casey, who keeps a drinking-place at No. 23 East State-street, and whose prospective brother-in-law Shinkel is; and Samuel W. Reed, wholesale liquor-dealer, Clinton Block, North Cayuga-street. Shinkel is said to have taken with him to England $800, although it was well known here that he had no money of his own, and that he even took a suit of clothes from Straussman Brothers which is yet unpaid for. The programme was that Casey should go to England to do the betting, while Reed was to supply the capital, and Shinkel the treachery. On the afternoon of the embarkation at New-York Shinkel wrote to Casey to disregard all discouraging newspaper statements, and that the crew were going to England and were going to row. The failure to get into the 'Visitors' Race, and, later, the loss of the Stewards', demoralized and bewildered the conspirators.

"Casey wrote, or had written, to Shinkel a letter stating the impossibility of his coming to England because of his (Casey's) wife's objection, asking advice as what to do by cable. Shinkel cabled, 'It is all right,' meaning, presumably, that the subsequent races were to be lost as though the first had been won. Casey caused duplicate letters to be written to Shinkel, one of which was addressed to him care of the American Exchange, Liverpool, the other care of the American Exchange, London, simply because the writer and sender were alike uncertain in which city the Exchange was, and there was insufficient time before the steamer mail closed to ascertain. These letters advised Shinkel of Casey's wife's strenuous objections to his making the trip to England, and asked Shinkel to advise him how to act in order to accomplish the end and remain here. Shinkel in response to one or both of these wrote to Casey from the American Exchange, London, before the crew had started for Vienna from London: 'Bet that Cornells will lose Vienna race.' This advice was received here from three to five days before the Vienna race was pulled, and in the face and eyes of the freely expressed judgment of all Englishmen that the Americans had a certain thing at Vienna it was acted upon to the best of the ability of the conspirators here, although they were unable to get many or large wagers. We are warranted in making these facts public upon the assurance of a gentleman who conducted correspondence in behalf of parties here and the corroborating word of a trusted friend of his to whom, as a matter of self-protection, he confided from time to time the steps being taken to coin a crooked dollar. It is now believed that Shinkel did not rely alone, or, perhaps, at all, on his agreed share of what his friends might be able to gather in here but that he himself made bets against the crew in Vienna, or sold out for a lump sum to Viennese or London gamblers. It is rumored that in Shinkel's baggage criminating proof was found by his infuriated associates, who suspected him of simulating the exhaustion which lost them the Vienna race. It is also stated that the Boating Club of Vienna furnished to the Cornell boys proof positive of their betrayal by Shinkel. The fact that he was publicly accused where he could best defend himself, and that he has not offered a word of protest, is placed to his discredit. For the honor of Ithaca and the university, and those connected with the sending off and managing of the crew, be it said that an investigation is being carefully and thoroughly pushed, and in due time the dirty details will be given to the world, and then the subject will be consigned to the contempt and detestation so richly merited and fully won."

SKETCH OF THE OARSMAN ACCUSED OF SELLING OUT CORNELL AT VIENNA.

From the Buffalo Express, Aug. 26.

The press is just now full of quips and slurs at the renegade college oarsman, Shinkel, many of which reflect very unjustly upon the Cornell University. Shinkel is no more a representative of the Cornell student, or of the average college boating-man, than is Guiteau, or any other rascal, a representative of the Republican Party. Although the subject of much holy horror on the part of some newspapers, very few facts seem to have been given the public in regard to this man Shinkel. He was born in New-Rochelle, Ill., in 1857. His full name is John Newton Dexter Shinkel. When quite a young boy he acquired considerable local fame by athletic performances at county fairs. He was billed on these occasions as "the great tight-wire walker of the North-west." He is also said to have filled a short engagement as rope-walker and tumbler for a small circus, but for this we cannot vouch. He was connected for a short time with the North-western University at Evanston, Ill. He went to Cornell in 1877, and has there pursued a four years' course, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science after a special examination last Spring, just before the crew went abroad.

He is quick-witted, and though by no means a "dig," was a fair student. Physically he is superb. He said to the writer once: "I went to Cornell more for the sake of winning a boat-race than anything else." Unlike many college youths, he took capital care of himself. He is absolutely free from bad habits, except profanity—and that weakens neither back nor biceps. He is said to be of Irish parentage, but looks like a handsome Indian; has black hair, a keen eye, high cheek-bones, stands as straight as a pine tree, and has a neck and chest like a Roman gladiator. His biceps measure last Spring was a fraction over 15 inches, and he weighed, just before leaving this country, 173 pounds. Although rather heavy, he is quick as a cat. He excelled in gymnastic performances, especially on the trapeze. All things considered, he

His boating record at Cornell is as follows: He was stroke of the Freshmen eight that defeated the Harvard eight on Owasco Lake, July 17, 1878. It was a hard three-mile pull under a broiling sun. At the finish some of the men nearly fainted from exhaustion; but Shinkel, as soon as he could free himself from his enthusiastic friends, turned a series of somersaults and hand springs on the grass in front of the hotel, which remain the wonder and delight of the rural youth of Eusenore to this day. July 9, 1879, he rowed No. 2 in the four-oared race at Saratoga—the Cornells having a walk-over—and in the same position at Lake George, July 18, 1879, against Wesleyan and Columbia, the Cornells losing the race by bad steering. Shinkel was again stroke at North Hector, (Seneca Lake,) July 3, 1880, beating the Watkins crew out of sight; and stroke at Lake George later in the same year, winning against University of Pennsylvania and Columbia. Up to the time of his going abroad his ambition to win a boat-race was amply gratified.

Shinkel, or, as his associates invariably called him, "Shink," was popular, and rather admired, especially by thin-limbed youth, at his college. He spent his vacations chiefly at Ithaca, having apparently no home ties elsewhere. Toward the latter part of his Cornell career he became enamored with a Miss Casey, a bright and very independent Irish girl well known in Ithaca, and their betrothal was publicly announced in the Catholic church of that town last Spring.

Shinkel was known to be without any strict moral principles, but nothing ever showed itself during his four years at Ithaca to prepare his friends—and he has many—for what is now alleged against him. His comrades on the crew are men of good family and social standing without exception, and a charge from them should be given great credence. If Shinkel sold the race it is because he was corrupted by Casey and Reed, of Ithaca, and was "hard up" for funds. It is far more likely that he sold out than that he fainted.

WHAT HIS ALLEGED ACCOMPLICES IN ITHACA

HAVE TO SAY.

From the Binghamton Republican, Sept. 1.

It is a singular fact that the citizens of Ithaca appear to have paid but little attention to the recent failures of the Cornell crew, or to the subsequent charges preferred against Shinkel. A number of prominent citizens, however, in conversation with a Republican reporter, expressed their belief in the truth of the charges against Shinkel, and the probability that there would be some startling facts revealed by the other members of the crew in this connection on their return home. The defeat of the crew and the disgrace which Shinkel's alleged treason has brought upon it and the university it represents, seem to have deadened all further interest in home boating matters with the people of Ithaca, who manifest a decided apathy to the mere mention of "The Cornell crew."

Anxious to learn what the men who are charged as being Shinkel's accomplices had to say for themselves, the reporter stepped into Mr. Casey's restaurant and inquired for the proprietor, who came from behind his bar and conversed freely on the subject in question. Casey is a rather finely proportioned man, of perhaps 35 years of age, though he does not look it, and rumor says that he is Shinkel's future brother-in-law. In the course of the conversation and in answer to questions, he made the following statement, which is taken verbatim: "When Shinkel went away I had a talk with him and asked him if he thought he could win the race in England. He said there would be two races and that he could win one of them sure. I told him if he had time to write me, using his own judgment about betting, to do it, and if a letter did not have time to reach here to cable 'come' if he thought they could not win, and 'stay at home' if he thought they could. A cablegram came 10 or 12 days before the English race, saying 'come.' There was not $10 bet on the races one way or the other here. I bet just $1 on the Vienna race, and gave the man his choice. I received two letters from Shinkel—one from New-York before he started for England, and one after he got there, the first stating that the crew would sail anyhow, and that he thought they would be admitted to the race, and the second that he thought they would be admitted. That's the whole, the long, the short, the thick, and the thin of it. I have not made a single dollar on the race. Have destroyed Shinkel's letters, but wish I had kept them now to publish. S. W. Read is also implicated in the charges in connection with me and Shinkel's throwing the race. I never had any conversation with him in regard to the matter. Don't think he knew a thing about it. Don't see why Shinkel couldn't come home, or what he has to be afraid of here. I don't know that he threw the race."

The reporter next called upon Read, who keeps a wholesale liquor store in connection with his other business of speculating in produce. He was highly indignant at the charges against him, and said that he had not a dollar on any of the races of the crew in any shape whatever. As for Shinkel's throwing the race, it looked as though he did it, but it was as much news to him as to any one else. He barely knew Shinkel, who had been twice in his store to purchase small quantities of liquor, but had no conversation with him relating to the race more than a casual mention of it in the ordinary course of conversation. He predicted, however, that there would be a thorough sifting of the charges and said he hoped the bottom facts would be reached.

THE CORNELL BOAT CREW

THEIR ARRIVAL FROM EUROPE ON THE STEAM-SHIP SPAIN.

WHAT THE MEN SAY ABOUT SHINKEL'S SUSPECTED TREACHERY—A STRONG FEELING OF CONDEMNATION AGAINST HIM—REASONS FOR BELIEVING THAT HE SOLD THE RACE—THE CREW'S TREATMENT ABROAD.

The National Line steam-ship Spain reached her dock at the foot of King-street at about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, and among the first of her passengers to land were the members of the Cornell crew, who have so recently created such a genuine sensation in boating circles. One only of the crew, J. N. D. Shinkel, was absent, and he is the man whom the rest accuse of having sold the races, or at least one of them, in which Cornell has been defeated. He remains in London. The party which landed from the Spain comprised A. H. Cowles, bow; John Lewis, No. 2; J. G. Allen, No. 3; J. E. Read, substitute; Mr. Chase, the business man of the crew, and E. W. Catchpole, a Cornell man who accompanied the rowers home from Europe. These gentlemen were driven to the St. Nicholas Hotel, where they indulged in a bath and a breakfast, and then scattered themselves over the City among their friends. They had none of the appearance which usually characterizes men suffering from the disappointment of defeated ambition. All were jolly and sociable and apparently in good spirits. Early in the afternoon Mr. J. G. Allen returned to the St. Nicholas, and talked freely to a Times reporter in regard to the European trip of the crew and the causes of the continued defeat which attended them in their contests. He said:

"When we arrived in England, on June 10, we met Mr. Gillig, of the American Exchange, who had been attending to our business. He informed us that we could enter for the Stewards' Cup at Henley, but not for the Visitors', which is the college race, and the one that we went over to engage in. The reason given for excluding us was that we came from a university and not from a college, and the Visitors' Cup was open to competition by college crews only. Of course, we had to accept the decision of the Stewards, although we thought that the distinction made between a university and a college was a little far-fetched. However, we went into training for the Stewards' Cup, and rowed in the race, which occurred on June 30. The Henley course is notoriously an unfair course on account of the bend in the river, and we had the worse position, on the outside, which was made still worse by a head-wind. I don't want to claim that we could have beaten in this race had we been more fortunate in our position. We were defeated, and it is never the proper thing for a beaten crew to assert that they might have won. But to show you how unfortunate our position in this race was, I need only say that out of 17 races rowed on that day but one was won by a crew having the outside. The course to be rowed over, owing to the bend in the river, is longer, and the current is worse. That is why I call Henley an unfair course."

"I believe that he acted perfectly square in that race, and we had no cause to suspect him. On the following day, July 1, we engaged in a private match with the Hertford College crew, and this we lost by an unfortunate accident. On the day before the Hertford crew had won the Stewards' Cup, the Thames crew, which was on the inside in the final heat, running into the bank. In one race we had the inside position, and we ran into the bank at the same place. There are a number of little bays in the river on the inside course, and it is desirable to keep as near to the shore as possible in order to take advantage of the slack water and avoid the current. When the Thames crew, which is familiar with every inch of the river, met with such an accident it is not so very surprising that a crew of strangers to the course should miscalculate their bearings. In the Metropolitan regatta at Putney, July 14, we were also beaten for first position, but I say now, as I said then, that we should have made a much better record if Shinkel had rowed such a stroke as he should have rowed. He refused to make a spurt at the end of the race, and would not run the stroke up. He explained his refusal afterward by saying that if he had increased the stroke it would have broken us up. I thought at that time that it was a matter of bad judgment on his part only, and possibly that is the right view to take of it, but after the developments at Vienna we are pretty nearly of one opinion, and that is that he sold us out on this race. We can make no charges against him, because we have learned of nothing as yet to justify us in doing so, but we have very strong suspicions on the subject."

"Are you willing to make public the grounds on which the charges against Shinkel have been made?" asked the reporter.

"Certainly I am. The entire crew has been maligned and laughed at on account of his treachery, and I see no reason why our side of the story should not now be told. We had no suspicions that Shinkel was a bad man until after the race at Vienna. He was a very troublesome man all the time, continually quarrelling and endeavoring to manage the crew in his own way. We had trouble with him in the beginning about the election of a Captain. He wanted to be Captain himself, and the rest of the crew did not want him. We finally compromised that question by deciding to elect no Captain. There were other matters in which he was constantly making trouble, and at one time we seriously thought of putting him out of the crew. He injured us a great deal in this way, but we never thought of his betraying us until the affair at Vienna. He had complained for two days before the race of constipation. We all suspected then that his illness was pretended, but on the day of the race he said that he felt well, and we had not the slightest doubt of winning. The course was a mile and a half up the Danube, against a strong current, around a buoy, and a mile and a half down the river to the starting point. We had very nearly reached the buoy, which, considering the current against which we were pulling, was quite three-quarters of the race, and we were four lengths ahead of the Donaubort crew and rowing easily, when Shinkel suddenly rowed a half-dozen strokes faster than the time, and then stopped and leaned forward with his head upon his hand. I threw water over him and asked him what was the matter. He said that he had a pain in his chest and could row no more. In the meantime the German crew pushed ahead, and we allowed our boat to drift down to the boat-house. Here Shinkel was wrapped in blankets and given brandy, and a doctor was called in. Shinkel pretended to be suffering greatly, but the doctor said that he could not see that anything was the matter with him. That night he appeared all right again, and attended the banquet given us by the Donauhort crew, drinking wine as freely, if not more so, than any of his companions. He was anything but a sick man after his sickness had lost our last race in Europe for us."

"And is that the only ground upon which you base your charges against him?" asked the reporter.

"Our suspicions," was the answer, "are based entirely upon his actions, and upon certain facts which came to our knowledge after the race. We remained in Vienna two days after our defeat, and during that time we worked up what we believe to be a pretty conclusive case against Shinkel. We discovered that he had made appointments with and met several sporting men who were interested in the race and were betting against us. Twice he had gone to the office of Mr. Silberer, the referee, who, with his friends, was betting heavily against us. He had also met the trainer of the German crew by appointment in one of the gardens of the city, and had a long consultation with him. He received notes from these different parties, which were brought to him by their servants. We have not captured any of these notes, but we have seen them delivered. On the day after the race a gentleman called to see us in regard to the purchase of one of our boats, and found Shinkel alone. He went out with him, and when he met us on his return he told us that he had just shown Shinkel a bank where he could purchase a draft on America. Now, Shinkel had repeatedly told us that he had not a cent except £2, which was in the custody of Mr. Chase, and had explained his failure to bet on the success of the crew in this way. If Shinkel was going to purchase a draft on America he must have had money, and there was but one way for him to get it—by selling our race."

"Did you discover whether he purchased a draft or not?"

"No. We had to leave Vienna the next day, and we left this part of our case in the hands of a banker to work up. Upon learning these facts we seized an opportunity when he was out of his room to search his satchel. We found no money, but we discovered a new diamond ring in a new case, which had evidently been purchased in Vienna. It was a lady's ring and worth about $75. He must have had money to buy that with. We left Vienna the second day after the race, and were accompanied as far as Frankfort by a party of gentlemen who were going to the regatta. On leaving us, one of them, whose name I cannot make public now, warned us to beware of Shinkel, and said that he knew that Dr. Forager, the Captain of the Donauhort crew, had given him 1,500 florins (about $700) the day after the race. This gentleman was one of the Regatta Committee. We stopped that night at Coblenz, and Chase, Shinkel, and I slept in the same room together. We two had arranged to search his clothes as soon as he was asleep, but we were foiled in that. He waited until he thought us both asleep, and then got up, crept to where his coat was lying, took his pocket-book from it and carried it to bed with him. He had to pass between the window and me to do this, and I distinctly saw every movement that he made. The next night we stopped at Rotterdam, and on this occasion he took his vest into the bed with him. Such guilty actions as these, coupled with the information which we had received, made the case against Shinkel so plain that none of us could longer doubt his treachery."

"Did you accuse Shinkel of selling out the race?"

"We did, and his actions then only confirmed our suspicions. We reached London Aug. 17, and two days later Mr. Chase, Mr. Cowles, and myself, of the crew, and Mr. Catchpole and Mr. Gwynne, of the crew, and Mr. Catchpole and Mr. Gwynne, two Cornell students, visited Shinkel at his lodging. Mr. Chase told him of the strong evidence against him, and asked him if he was able to clear himself of the charges. He asked him if he would allow us to search his trunk, and Shinkel at once said that he would. He was then asked if he would allow his clothes to be searched, and he then affected indignation and refused to allow either trunk or clothes to be examined. He neither admitted nor denied the charges, but contented himself with telling us to produce our proofs if we wanted to establish his guilt. Of course, there was nothing more to be said, and we left him."

"Have you seen him since?"

"We have met him in the streets, but we have never spoken to him since. After our interview with him he went to the American Exchange, and Mr. Gillig tried to induce him to either admit or deny the charges, but without success. He had the impudence to ask Mr. Gillig for his ticket home, but it was refused to him. I suppose he is in London still. He will never get back unless he buys his ticket with some of the money paid to him as the price of our defeat. The general public may not be convinced of his guilt, but I am sure that none of the students of the university who knew him will doubt it. He was never considered a man of good morals, but he is as fine an oarsman as there is in the country, and we felt compelled to take him along with us. Before leaving London we mailed a statement of our case against Shinkel to Major Burbank, the military Professor of the university. I don't know what he has done toward adding to it here, although I understand that some developments have been made at Ithaca."

"How were you treated in Europe?" asked the reporter.

"We were treated very fairly by the rowing men, especially by the English clubs. Of course, we didn't take very kindly to the actions of the Henley Stewards and the Vienna Regatta Committee."

MR. SHINKEL INDIGNANT.

THE ACCUSED CORNELL OARSMAN RETURNS HOME.

Mr. J. N. Shinkel, the stroke of the Cornell crew, arrived at this port on the steamer Abyssinia, of the Gulon Line, yesterday morning. To a Times reporter who met him last evening, he said: "I have seen the reports made by the Cornell crew. I saw them in the papers which were placed on the steamer before I arrived here. So far as I am concerned, the reports are simply lies. The men who have reached here in advance of me have told their own story. I simply ask now that you will make my statement public. I have been maligned and held up in this country as a treacherous scoundrel who sold out a race and betrayed a university crew. It is time that my side of the story should be told. The charges made against me are the result of a trouble which took place among the crew before they started for Europe.

The question arose as to the selection of a Captain. There were but five votes, and out of those five I received three. Mr. Lewis, the defeated candidate was not satisfied, and I, not wishing to embarrass the club, agreed to withdraw from the contest. The moment I withdrew Mr. Lewis withdrew also, and there being no candidates then for the Captaincy of the club, we went to Europe without a Captain."

With regard to the charges preferred against him by the other members of the Cornell crew, Mr. Shinkel had a great deal to say. He admitted that from the time of the sailing of the crew until the first race upon the Henley course, he had been the one bone of contention with the crew. "Everything was, to all appearances, satisfactory," said Mr. Shinkel, "until the first race took place. Then we found that the Davis patent oars would not work in the waters of the Thames, and to the fact that we were given these oars by Major Burbank I attribute our defeat in this race for the Stewards' Cup. I was opposed to the use of these oars from the first, but every proposition which I made was opposed by Lewis, and as a general thing the propositions of Lewis were accepted. Had Major Burbank sent us over to London on the 1st of March there would have been no question about our being entered for the Visitors' Cup. As it was, we were ruled out of the race, and only allowed to enter for the Stewards' Cup."

"When we got to England," continued Mr. Shinkel, "instead of training us as they do in this country, we were given vegetables, fruit, and beef, and the crew began to drink freely of English ale. The result was that at Henley the crew weighed 50 pounds more than it ought to have weighed. The fact is that we were kept back in order to give Davis a chance to experiment with us. We did the best that we could, and for an American crew on an English course with which we were not familiar, I think that we did very well."

"Mr. Shinkel," said the reporter, "the other members of the Cornell crew have accused you of selling out the race at Vienna. What have you to say in answer to that accusation?"

"I have never sold out any race in which I was engaged," was the answer.

"In the Vienna race," said the reporter, "the friends of Cornell claim that the Cornell crew had the advantage of their opponents, that you were the only man who could have thrown the race, and that you did sell it to the Captain of the Vienna Club."

In answer to this Mr. Shinkel said: "I knew that the crew were all broken up, and I was opposed to our going to Vienna at all. We went there against my protest. On the course over which we rowed the Danube River is very swift. We rowed one and one-half miles against the current and one and one-half miles with it, coming down the river. I had been sick for three days before the race, and on the day of the race I told the crew that I was not able to row. They all said that I was able, however, and I took their word, and tried to do my best. I had not rowed 40 strokes before I felt that I could not hold out. I told Mr. Allen that I was sick, and that I could not give the stroke, but he laughed at me. I collapsed just as our boat came to the buoy, and I could not have done otherwise if the whole world had been waiting for me as a reward for our victory."

"That is a lie made out of whole cloth," said Mr.

Shinkel.

"Mr. Allen says that you declined to either admit or deny that you had thrown the race when he called on you in London."

"That is another lie. I did refuse to allow them to search my trunks. I thought that their demand was an outrage. But I did deny their charges when they were first made, and no man knows this better than Mr. Allen."

"Where did you get the money to purchase the diamond ring in Vienna?" asked the reporter.

"I had the money with me," was the prompt answer. "I did give Commodore Chase £2, and I told him that this was all the money that I had. This was a white lie, but I feel that I was justified in telling it. Chase had been borrowing money from all the crew, and I thought that if I gave him this and told him that it was all that I had I should be relieved from his importunities. The fact is I had a check for $350 besides $100 in cash when I left this country for Europe. I bought a diamond ring for my sister in Vienna, for which I paid $85, but that money was paid out of my own pocket, and I have learned now for the first time that my classmates in Cornell University discovered this ring by searching my sachel. I pity my classmates. That is all that I want to say on that subject."

Mr. Shinkel, in bidding the reporter good-bye, said: "I am going to Ithaca to learn, if possible, just what the charges against me are. If I find that they are as strong as those reported in the New-York papers I shall engage an attorney and sue the crew for damages. From Ithaca I shall go home to Chicago and study for the medical profession. I have had enough of the Cornell men. After this I propose to train with people whom I know."

Mr. Shinkel started for Ithaca last evening on the 7 o'clock Erie train.

VIEWS OF EX-MINISTER ANDREW D. WHITE.

INDIGNATION AT THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT GARFIELD—THE JEWISH CRUSADE—SUPERIORITY OF GERMAN UNIVERSITIES—POLITICAL IMPORTANCE OF THE MEETING BETWEEN THE EMPERORS.

Andrew D. White, President of Cornell University, and ex-Minister of the United States to Germany, arrived in this City on the German steamer Elbe yesterday afternoon. To a TIMES reporter, who met him at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel last evening, Mr. White said: "The German people

"I suppose," said the reporter, "that you have heard the reports about Mr. Shinkel and the Cornell crew. Are you willing to say anything about the matter?"

"I want to say this," said President White. "I cannot believe that Mr. Shinkel is guilty of the acts charged to him. I should have to receive very strong proof before I could believe him to be the man that the crew say that he is. His reputation was always good in the university, so far as I know, and I had the advantage of hearing about all there was to know of every man in the university. I am afraid that the boys lost their heads in Europe, and after their continued defeats they wanted to throw the blame on somebody, and poor Shinkel was selected as the victim. If I had been here I should have entered a strong opposition to the crew going to Europe at all. The life of the Cornell crew went out with John Ostrom, and until we have another Ostrom we don't want to row."

THE CORNELL BRIBERY CASE.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The letter to the Sportsman from the Vienna Regatta Committee repudiating the insinuation that one of its members was concerned in bribing Shinkel, of the Cornell crew, says further: "As no answer has been received to the request forwarded to Commodore Chase a month ago asking him to communicate the proofs of the alleged bribery, the committee regrets its inability for the present, and until the arrival of the desired particulars, to take any other measures than to declare the statements published in the New-York Tribune of the 6th of September, and alleged to have proceeded from Mr. J. Al. G. Bray – Excursion & Cremation

The Sophomore Excursion. Shortly after five o'clock of Friday afternoon last a jolly crowd of Sophomores, with a goodly number of upper classmen, started on the long-anticipated excursion to Aurora. The day was beautiful, and as the boat left the pier amid the loud cheers of the boys and the melodious strains of the Fiftieth Regiment Band, nothing that would contribute to make the trip a pleasant one seemed lacking. Just beyond the Light house, the party overtook the crew taking their daily spin. The eight showed their enthusiasm by making a fine spurt alongside of the boat for a short distance, and were then left, after exchanging salutations to the tune of the Cornell yell. The journey down was passed very pleasantly with singing, dancing, playing cards and viewing the beautiful scenery which surrounds the lake. Not the least happy, by any means, was "Uncle Josh," whom the boys had kindly invited to join in the festivities. "Mutch.," too, came in for his share of the fun. At half past seven or thereabouts, the party sighted Aurora, and soon made known their advent by a series of Cornell yells which might have waked the dead, if noise could do it. As soon as the pier was reached, the students, led by the band, marched in double file through the village, and headed for Wells College, which seemed to be the great point of attraction. Surely, our approach must have been heralded, for the balconies and windows were lined with pretty faces. Arriving here, the students arranged themselves in line, and, with hats off and upturned faces, stood quietly by while the band played. Turning back to the hotel, it was found that the committee in charge had made excellent arrangements, and that a fine banquet awaited the hungry excursionists. The menu was complete and, in quality, pronounced "unsurpassable" by all who partook. After supper the toast master, Bering, took charge of the ceremonies with an appropriate speech. The first toast, on "The Excursion," was omitted owing to the absence of Mr. Overton. To the "toast on '82," McClelland, '82, responded in a speech which showed that he thoroughly appreciated the greatness of his class; "'83," was responded to by Mr. Avery, '83. The other toasts were responded to as follows: "Cremation," by R. H. Ware; "The Girls of Wells," by Bacon, '82; "The Club," by Randolph; "Behind the Bars," by Lewis; "The Unexpected Vacation," by W. Hamilton; "The Absent Ones—'85," DeForest; "Plugs," by Cassedy, and "Our Sophomore Year," by President Weed. At twelve the party boarded the steamboat and started for Ithaca.

"Rho Kappa Tau" soon made her appearance, and kept a number of the boys busy during most of there turn trip. Now and then Uncle Josh would regale us with one of his peculiar songs. The run from Aurora to Ithaca was made in two hours and a half. With the band at the head, the procession marched up town, gradually diminishing in numbers, by the falling out of the wearied ones. When the Ithaca Hotel was reached, it was found that some of the musicians were absent, so that the proposed serenade was given up. Here the company disbanded, and the Sophomore excursion was over. Much praise is due the committee, Messrs. McMillan, Randolph, Carpenter, Hamilton and Cassedy, for the excellent manner in which the excursion was managed; also to the landlord at Aurora, for the supper, which many declared was far better than the suppers we get here.

LAST Friday night the Freshmen had an excursion down the lake. The Sophomores were angry at the innocents for usurping a Sophomoric privilege. They tried to break it up and went at it in so quiet and so foxy a manner that long before the day of the excursion every student in the University, Freshmen included, knew every scheme evolved by the wily ones for the breaking up of the trip. Mr. Sophomore told all his society friends, (Freshmen excluded, of course) and requested them to keep very "mum" about it. The plot began to thicken when, at one o'clock at night a band of bloodthirsty K. K. K's awoke the whole town in their efforts to put through scheme No. 1. Sundry kegs were filled with aqueous fluid, to be substituted for a fluid not so aqueous, and intended to make the excursion slip along smoothly. The project failed because some deck hands would prefer to keep an all summer job to selling out for enough to keep them for a week. Strange to say the captain and engineer would not sell out at all, probably waiting for a raise of a dollar or two apiece on the price offered. To make a long story short every plot failed much to the chagrin of the Sophomores, and to the delight of the Freshmen. A lack of savoir faire, as Mrs. Florence would say, made the Sophomores the laughing stock of the University. But now comes the disagreeable part of the affair. Full of resentment for their failure, the Sophomores ran their tug boat near the excursionists and threw rotten eggs among the crowd in which there were many upper classmen This act was unworthy any college student and is not upheld by any of the cooler minded among the Sophomores, to say nothing of the indignation felt by members of the other classes. Even Sophomores should remember that there is a certain boundary to actions beyond which they assume the nature of indecency.

FRESHMAN EXCURSION AND CREMATION. Eighty-six deserves the credit of having conceived and carried out a scheme which has been found to be eminently happy in the entire success it had and in the good time it afforded. When it was first mentioned that Eighty-six was to have an excursion and cremation it was natural that failure should be predicted, for the idea was new and untried, and there was supposed to be a formidable competition in the excursion business. But from the time the neat invitations were issued to the moment of starting there was plenty of evidence even to the casual observer that the management was in the hands of men who would make failure impossible. On Friday, the 18th inst., at 6:15 p. m., the steamer Frontenac left the landing at Ithaca with about ninety students on board, the majority of whom were Freshmen. They were accompanied by Uncle Josh and the Fiftieth Regiment Band. The weather was favorable enough to satisfy the most hopeful Freshman. The air was warm and a clear sky promised a good moon for the return trip. The ride to Aurroa [sic] occupied about two hours and a half, this time being filled by various amusements, such as dancing, singing, and romping in general. When waltzing and gig dancing became tiresome, "walkarounds" afforded amusement, especially those in which "Uncle Josh" headed the line. In the midst of this vigorous exercise it was noticed there was a good deal of running to and from the forward part of the boat. The attraction there was found to be a large man with sleeves rolled up and with brow perspiring under his efforts to supply the boys with a refreshing beverage. The Cornell slogan and the class yells of '86, '83 and '84 were freely given until some howled themselves hoarse. Those of a more quiet turn of mind found enjoyment in the pretty scenery and in one of those beautiful sunsets for which Cayuga Lake is famous. Aurora was reached in great éclat amid fireworks from the boat, a cannon salute by the Military Academy, numerous Cornell yells and music by the band. The excursionists were met at the landing by the cadets of the Cayuga Lake Military Academy, who kindly offered to escort them through the town. At the same time a telegram was handed to President Alexander which conveyed the information that the Sophomores had started from Ithaca with the intention of breaking up the supper. A few minutes were now occupied in forming the procession and in costuming the Freshmen in their funeral habits. Robes de null, with black skull and cross bones on the back, and black masks were the most common costumes, the officers of the cremation having appropriate robes and hats. The procession, consisting of the Military Academy cadets, the band, the Freshmen in costume, followed by the remaining excursionists, moved on to Wells College. Both sides of the avenue were filled by crowds of Aurora people who followed the students to their destination, and were much amused by the odd crowd and the artistically and mathematically humorous transparencies. At Wells College the boys were evidently not unexpected. For the windows and doors of the pretty college building were alive with fair humanity. After several songs and selections by the band between each of which the ladies manifested their approbation in the shape of flowers, handkerchiefs, ribbons and gloves, for all of which there was a vigorous competition among the students, the procession moved away to the scene of the cremation. The pyre had been erected in an open square near the steamboat landing. As the procession reached this mournful cries of the friends of the deceased Al. G. Bray were heard. The sorrowful and wailing throng formed a circle around the pyre and tearfully performed the obsequies of the occasion, which were as follows: Carmen cum Ululatis, Oratio Funebris, Conflagratio Pvae, Carmen Laetum, Sloganum Cornellianum. The particularly affective parts of the Supplicatio and the Oratio were accompanied by colored lights and increased wailings. The songs, which were composed for the occasion, were well rendered by the Freshman Glee Club. At 10:15 the event marked on the programme as iter ad grubbum took place, and a hungry throng set to work vigorously at the repast that mine host Le Grand had prepared for them. When the clash of dishes ceased the toast master took possession and announced the following toasts, which were responded to in all cases in a very happy manner: Class of '86, - C. D. Alexander. Aurora, - W. H. Riley. Wells and Sage, - H. E. Summers. Bray's Funeral, - E. H. Doud. Boarding Houses, - A. H. Grant. The Sophs, - H. C. Charpiot. Bohn, - A. D. Weil. Symposia, - H. Goddard. Little Hill for a(s)cent, - F. M. Newton. College Dudes, - A. T. Emory. The Four, - W. G. Barnev. Midnight Oil vs. Snaps, - H. H. Gadsby. After the toasts the crowd repaired to the boat which left at 1:00 a. m. The return trip was the scene of much merriment, Rho Kappa Tau's membership was considerably augmented and the initiations were the occasions of much boisterousness and broken-glass. At 3:30 the excursionists reached home a tired and sleepy crowd. All united in their praise of the excursion, declaring that it was a complete success in every particular. Much credit is due to the committee of arrangements, E. H. Doud S. A. Norton, H. Goddard, W. B. Vischer and H. H. Gadsby, who exhibited much enterprise in their successful efforts to make the financial ends meet, and much shrewdness in outwitting the sophomores. H. C. Charpiot as Pontefex Maximus, A. S. Norton as Orator and D. M. Hinman as Undertaker acquitted themselves admirably. The Sophomoric schemes to annoy the Freshmen failed utterly. The coffin was stolen but was immediately replaced, and the majority of the Cremation Programmes were captured but copies were made from those that remained and no particular annoyance was caused. In the evening about twenty Sophomores hired a tug and went to Aurora with evil intentions, but only succeeded in throwing asafetida and eggs upon the deck hands of the Frontenac. Major Flint of the Military Academy and Messrs. Henry and George P. Morgan, contributed not a little to the pleasure of the boys. The trouble they took which was all the more welcome because unexpected served to make [sic] the short stay in Aurora all the pleasanter.

'80-'90 EXCURSION-CREMATATION. A Successful and as Usual Happy Affair.—Aurora Visited and Interesting Exercises held at Sheldrake. Rho Kappa Tau, "Gone but not Forgotten!" The classes of '89 and '90 were fortunate in selecting Friday of last week as the day upon which to hold the annual excursion and cremation. The afternoon upon shore was exceedingly warm, but upon encountering the lake breeze many found overcoats desirable. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a crowd of about one hundred students made up chiefly of underclassmen, started from State St. for the steamboat landing. The frequent repetition of the Cornell slogan and the enlivening strains of Noble's comet band attracted considerable attention throughout the line of march, and "ye small boy" followed the procession in generous numbers. Pontifex Maximus, W. Nelson Smith, headed the procession, carrying a black flag artistically decorated with skull and crossbones. Following him were the four bearers and the coffin, upon which was inscribed the following lines: AL. G. BRAY KILLED 33, MARCH 19, 1887 REQUIESCAT, ETC. Arriving at the steamboat landing the party immediately boarded the "T.D. Wilcox" and at 5 o'clock started for Aurora. The trip down the lake was a pleasant one, the monotony of the ride being relieved in ways peculiar to the college student "out for a time." Hardly had the boat touched the dock, before all were landed, eager to start for "Wells." The line was soon formed, and two by two the expectant students tramped through the dust to the alma mater of Mrs. President Cleveland, where they were received with smiles and flowers. The usual programme having been gone through with here, the "Wilcox" was again boarded Sheldrake was reached at half-past nine, and the funeral procession immediately formed. Arriving at the spot selected for the cremation, the coffin was placed upon the pyre, and the funeral oration pronounced by Mr. Ford. This oration was notable for being brief and right to the point. It was a neat parody on Antony's oration over the body of Caesar. It was well delivered and vociferously received. The pile

was then lighted and as the flames leaped heavenward a dirge, the words of which were exceedingly well fitted to the occasion, was chanted by the assembled students. The first and last stanzas of the dirge are here given, space forbidding us to print it entire: I. :|| There are three profs, on yonder hill, ||: :|| Oliver, Wait and Jones. ||: There are three profs, on yonder hill Who put the freshmen through the mill Of Mathematics— bitter pill!—! VI. :|| Now, classmates, give the 'Ninety yell ||: :|| For Oliver, Wait and Jones; ||: Now, classmates, give the 'Ninety yell, The shout that freshmen love so well, For that shall be the parting knell Of Oliver, Wait and Jones! The exercises of burying the hatchet were short. P. S. Lyon, in a brief but pointed oration recounted '89's victories and defeats. Mr. Chester was to have done the same for '90, but failing to respond, Mr. McDowell kindly consented to fill his place. At the close of these exercises a rush was made to the Sheldrake House, where the banquet was to take place. The dining room was soon filled and the hearty appetites of 150 students, whetted by the long ride, made sad havoc with the viands. After all had finished eating, Mr. Jones, the toastmaster of the evening, announced the first toast, Rho Kappa Tau, "Gone but not forgotten." The subject of each toast on the programme was accompanied by a suitable line of poetry. We give one here which may interest the Sophomores. Optics: "Fourscore and a half at the start, But where are the eighty and nine? At one o'clock the Wilcox started for home, bearing a tired, but well satisfied crowd. The home trip was uneventful, every one being contented to rest, after having a very successful excursion and cremation. The following are the names of the officers: Cremation: Pontifex Maximus, W. Nelson Smith (pro tem.); Orator, John Ford; Undertaker F G Fisher; Bearers, Webster, Flack, Abbott, Ehle; Chief Mourners, McDowell, Ballou, Shapleigh, Alexander, Benton, Dunn, McReynolds, W. S. Young; Mourners, Fragner, Sands, Whitney; Torch-bearers, May, Day. Hatchet Burial: Orator, '89, P. S. Lyon; Orator, '90, L.E. Chester. Banquet: Toast-Master, C. Jones. Committee of Arrangements: '89—Leon Stern, P S. Lyon, R. E. Steinberg, W. F Rackemann, W. M. Dollar: '90—F. H. Callan, W. H. Morrison, R. B. Whittlesey, J. H. Sheldon, D. Upton.

Nostalgia by the Pound, by Elisabeth Varak '77. ...The Department of Manuscripts and University Archives in Olin Library has roughly 100 scrapbooks kept by Cornell students between 1869 and 1928. These scrapbooks (sometimes called stunt books) contain pressed flowers, pictures of trolley cars, a garter, and even a lock of Davy Hoy's red hair (of "Give My Regards to Davy" fame). One woman saved a marshmallow on a charred stick from the Freshman Class of 1916 picnic at Beebe Lake. Napkins, handpainted menus and a tobacco pouch with matches from a 1906 Junior Smoker are among the memorabilia. Also, a scrap of paper carried by a pigeon announcing the winning of the 1897 boat race by Cornell. ...In 1910-1911, a season ticket for minor sports cost $3.00 while the same ticket cost $5.00 in 1914-1915. The students also held a "funeral" for Al G. Bray, the second son of Matthew Matcis. Somehow, someone managed to get a piece of the coffin and it was glued into a person's scrapbook.

Court Proceedings. A regular term of the Supreme Court and Court of Orer and Terminer was held at the Court House, in Canton, commencing on Tuesday, June 18. ...Francis Kiah vs. Rosa Gornier and others.— This was an action brought for the plaintiff by E. C. James, his Attorney, to procure a judicial construction of the last will of A. G. Cadier, deceased, lately of Ogdensburg. It appears that Cadier, who was formally a merchant of Ogdensburg, died last year, leaving property of the value of $30,000. He made a will, whereby he willed the bulk of his property to D. C. Judson and J. F. Rosseel, As trustees, to hold the property for one Lewis Cadier, and illegitimate son of the deceased, during his life, and to pay over the principal to the heirs of Louis. Other clauses having reference to a further disposition of the property, were in the will. It is claimed by the heirs of Cadier that the will is void. Half a dozen Attorneys for as many contestants, Appeared. After some evidence, mostly of record, the Court took the papers.

Kiah v. Grenier et al. Will—construction of—suspension of power of alienation—meaning of “heir”—costs on cross appeal. The testator, by the second clause of his will, gave all his property, real and personal, to his executors in trust for the support and education of an illegitimate son, but not to be sold or conveyed. By the third clause he directed the property, after the decease of the sun, to go to such son’s heirs, when they should become of age, and if he died leaving no heirs or widow to go to testator’s niece. By the fourth clause he directed, if said son should die leaving widow, heir or a heir’s, that the widow, heir or heirs should have the use of the property during her widowhood and while the heir or heirs should live, and that after her death or marriage, and after the decease of the heirs, if any, of his adopted son, the property should go to the testator’s niece. Held, the brother of testator, he having left surviving no father, mother or child, could maintain an action for the construction of the will. Held, also, that the provision in the second clause was valid, and created a trust to receive the rents and profits of the testator’s estate, and apply them to the use of the illegitimate son during life. The provisions in the third and fourth clauses, in respect to the widow and errors of the illegitimate son, were invalid by reason of an unlawful suspension of the power of alienation. Why the word “heir” the testator meant the heirs of his son’s body not heirs generally. The niece took the remainder of the estate, after the life estate of the sun, contingent upon the death of such son without widow or heir of his body surviving, and that contingency failing the estate passed, after the death of the son, to the heirs and next of kin of the testator. ...The defendant, Rosa Grenier, was his niece, and Lewis G. Cadier his illegitimate son by the defendant, Delia Jerby, the mother of the defendants named Jerby, and was an infant and unmarried at the time of the death of the testator. The said defendant, Rosa Grenier, was appointed administratrix, with defendant, Merriam, with the will annexed, by the surrogate of said county, after the renunciation of the executors named in the will, and the said Merriam was appointed trustee in place of Seymour and Rossell, trustees named in said will, by an order of this court. All the defendants appeared and answered, and the case was tried before Mr. Justice Bockes, at special term, March, 1873.

ΔXE, Delta Chi Epsilon Fraternity, 1890 A.D. – May refer to the Delta Chi Fraternity, which was founded at Cornell in 1890. The fraternity “Delta Chi Epsilon” was not in existence prior to 2000, and no chapter has been at Cornell.

Hebs-sa, CU, 1907 – A senior honorary society of the College of Agriculture. In 1930, Hebs-sa and another secret society in the College of Agriculture, Helios, were merged under the name of Honundekah (later, Ho-Nun-De-Kah), which was the name of a Native American secret society in the Cayuga Lake region.

ΣKYAA, Cornell University, Feb. 5, 1901 – Skull Fraternity.

In 1901, a small group of men at Cornell were looking to start an organization that would allow them to work cooperatively in campus activities. These men joined together to form a fraternity that they called Skull in a house that was rented on Wait Avenue to the north of Cornell’s campus. Almost simultaneously, eight other men at Cornell formed an organization that came to be known as Bandhu in 1902. Bhandu’s work was based around its name, which means “good fellowship.” They lived in a home at the corner of Seneca and Stewart Avenues and were known for their outstanding scholarship. Eventually, they bought the house where the Alpha Tau Chapter stands today at 106 The Knoll on August 30, 1910, from John and Clara Tanner. Mr. Tanner was a professor of mathematics at Cornell and had built the house for his wife and himself in 1901. Both of these organizations grew independently until the outbreak of World War I, when most of the members of Skull and Bandhu went off to serve in the war. Cornell, in fact, became a training camp for soldiers and the house on The Knoll served as barracks. Fearing that their organizations would soon close as a result of dwindling numbers, Skull and Bandhu merged to form Phi Delta Sigma in 1918. This newly formed fraternity resided in the house on The Knoll and existed for the following 12 years as a local, independent fraternity. In 1930, it selected Phi Kappa Tau as the national fraternity with which it would affiliate and became the Alpha Tau Chapter. This small group of 11 men quickly grew to over 20 members, and the brothers of the Alpha Tau Colony were associated in March 2000.

The Cornell Sunday Night Club, 1901

The Sunday Night club is an organization of upperclassmen. Its objects are both educational and social. Nearly all the members belong to fraternities, and the meetings are held on Sunday evenings at different fraternity houses. A limited number of Juniors are elected to membership each spring and a few Seniors are elected each fall. At the club meetings are present one or two persons of prominence, usually faculty members or distinguished visitors. They speak very informally upon some subject within their especial knowledge. A good part of the evening is then given over to a general “quizzing” of the speakers, this feature of the club being the one that has afforded the members greatest benefit. In the five years that the club has been in existence some of the best known faculty members and University preachers and lecturers have been entertained at its meetings, and the club is generally regarded as filling an important place in undergraduate life.

NAYATI, Cornell University, 1907

NAYATI has sold its lodge on Cayuga Heights, with five acres of land, to the Phi Epsilon Pi Fraternity. The purchase price is reported to have been $31,000. The house, originally built for Professor John V. VanPelt, a former head of the College of Architecture, commands an unobstructed view for miles down the lake. Nayati, a local fraternity, has been unable to maintain its organization and headquarters because the members have been scattered by the war.

Sigma Upsilon, Cornell, 1915

THE CORNELLIAN has announced the demise, in these difficult times, of certain campus clubs which you may remember with affection. These are Chi Alpha, honorary medical club; Goldwin Key, honorary Arts and Sciences fraternity; Scalpel, premedical; Thumb Tack Club, architectural; Anvil Club, of Manual Training H. S. alumni; Totem, a social club; Tau Epsilon Phi and Sigma Upsilon, fraternities; and Druids, unidentified. These casualties are, however, replaced by the Football Club, the Polo and Riding Club, the Hellenic Club, and Curia, a legal society.

Gargoyle Society In Architectural Competition. Through the efforts of Gargoyle, the Cornell chapter of the Intercollegiate Architectural Federation, a novel competition in architectural design is being arranged among Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Cornell, where the federation has chapters. This federation was founded last spring, taking as its primary objects the promotion of the interchange of ideas, the advancing of the interests of architectural education, and the furtherance of intercollegiate competitions. The faculties of the universities mentioned are co-operating with the undergraduates by making these competitions regular college work.

YCNAN, Cornell University

In the 1913 Cornellian there were listed twenty-six clubs, twenty-six organizations existing either solely or in large measure for social purposes. This figure is of course exclusive of all the organizations characterized as societies; and also of clubs within the different colleges. It embraces merely general clubs, clubs to which any undergraduate is eligible. It is not the intent of the writer to go into an exhaustive discussion of each and every one of these clubs; but merely to throw light on the glaring features of a system which the writer believes is wrong. The twenty-six clubs above mentioned may be classified in three groups, as follows: 1. Those which are active in the furtherance of a legitimate purpose. 2. Those which merely exist, and accomplish nothing. 3. Those which, though active, are actively harmful. There is no need here to dwell on the first group. The second and third will be discussed in the order named. The second group designated above might be characterized as clubs of the Lethargic Type. Their year's work consists in holding an initiation banquet, which most of the initiates attend, collecting the initiation fee, and having a club picture taken. Sometimes you will find in the constitution of one of these organizations a very laudable purpose; but nobody ever reads the constitution. As specific examples of this type of club, Ycnan, Gemel Kharm, Bench and Board, and Mermaid might be cited, not to mention several clubs of the same type in the different colleges in the University. Ycnan, it is said, was founded by several undergraduates who, in a spirit of frivolity, reversed the letters of their landlady's name to get the name for their club. Gemel Kharm has the same raison d'être in the even-year classes that Ycnan has in the odd. ...As Dr. Andrew D. White recently said, "organizations which have any legitimate purpose, which exist for any literary or other intellectual entertainment, are a great good in the community, and should be fostered and given every encouragement." Book and Bowl and Sunday Night Club are of this nature and are estimable indeed; but organizations like the ones described above are an appendix in our undergraduate anatomy which could be removed, with benefit the only possible result.

Λ, Finch Chapter, Cornell University – Theta Lambda Phi Fraternity.

Three Professional Fraternities Unite Theta Lambda Phi, Delta Phi Delta and Alpha Kappa Phi Form Delta Theta Phi. Theta Lambda Phi, with 24 chapters, Delta Phi Delta, having 12 chapters, and Alpha Kappa Phi, with 8 chapters, all Law fraternities, were consolidated into one national professional fraternity to be known as Delta Theta Phi at a joint session held at the Hotel LaSalle in Chicago, September 25, 26, and 27. The consolidated fraternity begins with a chapter roll of 44, and a total membership, counting both active and alumni members, of over 3,000. The local chapter of Theta Lambda Phi, is known as Finch Senate, being named after the late Justice of the Court of Appeals, Francis Miles Finch, former Dean of the College of Law. Finch Senate was organized in 1903, and at one time owned the house at 112 Edgemoor Lane, now occupied by the local chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon, an outgrowth of Theta Lambda Phi. There are now 14 active members of Finch Senate. The local chapter was represented at Chicago by B. W. Hendrickson, '14. Harry C. Baldwin, '06, of Ithaca, was elected vice-chancellor of the national body. This instance is the first in history of three national professional fraternities amalgamating.

Bandhu House Partly Destroyed By Fire Smoke From Early Morning Blaze Arouses Inmates In Time to Permit Escape. Total Damage Of $5,000 Hill Fire Company Prevents Total Loss— Repairs Completed By Thanksgiving. Five thousand dollars worth of damage was done by a fire which broke out in the Bandhu fraternity house, on The Knoll, Cornell Heights, early yesterday morning. The loss is fully covered by insurance. While the house is uninhabitable at present, local contractors say that it can be completely repaired by Thanksgiving. In the meantime the members of the fraternity will live in different places, no house being available for the short period of two months' rental. Dense clouds of smoke pouring into the dormitory on the third floor awakened the occupants of the house at about 6:30 a. m. Rushing to the stair-case that leads to the second floor, they found it impassable because of the heavy smoke. Escape from the burning building was made by means of a fire escape on the west side of the house. On reaching the second floor they found the fire blazing fiercely in the northwest wing of the building, the side-walls and ceilings being completely enveloped in flames. While one of the members ran to turn in the alarm the others made use of the fire fighting apparatus belonging to the house. This consisted of two lengths of small hose attached to a stand pipe on the second floor. By the time the students got the small hose into action the fire had broken through the ceiling into the dormitory above. The combustible materials of the mattresses quickly caught fire and the entire story was soon ablaze. The timely arrival of the College avenue fire company probably saved the building from total destruction. Several streams of water were soon playing on it and the flames were quickly under control. Three of the down town companies also responded to the alarm. Two companies from the City Hall were on the scene shortly after the College avenue apparatus. The auto fire engine, however, was delayed on the heavy grade because of the slippery pavement. The Thurston avenue bridge is considered too light to support the weight of the new truck so the company proceeded on foot from Rand Hall. The out bell was sounded at about 8:30.

The Cornell Civil Engineer

"Cornell Civil Engineer." First Number of New Publication Appears Today – Permanent Success Assured by

Many Subscribers. "The Cornell Civil Engineer" the new magazine organized by undergraduates of the Department of Civil Engineering will make its first appearance as a University publication today. The work was planned over a year ago, and will take the place to a certain extent of the yearly magazine "Transactions," formerly published at the end of each college year by the Senior class in Civil Engineering. The publication will be in regular magazine form and will in number of pages be somewhat larger than the other Cornell monthly magazines. The plan of the magazine is to make it principally, though not strictly a publication pertaining to civil engineering affairs, and of interest to undergraduates and alumni civil engineers.

Cornell Women's Dramatic Club

Women's Dramatic Club The Cornell Women's Dramatic Club gave an excellent performance of J. M. Barrie's "Quality Street" at the Lyceum Theatre on February 25. It was successful in more than one way, for the house was sold out. The Club has been acting plays almost every week throughout the year in the small theater of Risley Hall. The practice thus gained resulted in a performance of "Quality Street" which held the interest of the large audience.

James Duncan Upham – Writing Analysis

Items W550 through W587 were purchased as a lot, and appear to have been owned by one individual with the following connections: (a) Kimball Union Academy in 1870, (b) Cornell University in the mid-1870s, (c) Zeta Psi Fraternity in the mid-1870s, (d) Claremont, NH in the 1870s. Of the identified or potentially identifiable individuals in the photographs only two—George Baxter Upham and his brother James Duncan Upham—share all four connections. There is a portrait of George Baxter Upham in the collection (W556) that was annotated as though it were being given to someone else. There is no comparable portrait of James Duncan Upham in the collection, although he is identifiable in W578 and W581.

A comparison of handwriting from a document prepared by James Duncan Upham in 1874 and the inscriptions on the backs of several of the portraits in the collection where the recipient annotated the identity of the individual in the photograph demonstrates a similarity that leads the collector/author to believe that James Duncan Upham owned these photographs.

“Dwellers” and “Denizens”

When the details for a new land-grant university were being hammered out by Ezra Cornell, Andrew Dickson White, and others, White pressed the idea that students should be housed in the Ithaca community rather than on-campus dormitories. He had experienced firsthand living in an on-campus dormitory during his youthful attendance at Geneva College, where he reported “much carousing and wild dissipation.” The 4 Mar 1866 meeting of Building Committee of the Board of Trustees commented that:

...the committee admit their necessity reluctantly. Experience has shown that better discipline can be maintained without them; that students separated from each other and brought in small groups under the restraints of lodging with quiet families, are generally more easily managed than when brought together in large numbers under a single roof, but the circumstances of this case have left the committee no choice. The university property is so remote from the village of Ithaca, and at such a distance above it, that some provision must be made for the lodging of students upon the university grounds.

In a small nod to the “necessary evil” of housing some students on the campus proper, student rooms were let in the first University buildings: Cascadilla, South (Morrill), and North (White) Halls, but most students were expected to reside with local families, in rooming houses, and in fraternities, which sprang up quickly in the fertile environment of a brand new college.

In this bifurcated environment where most students (often of means) lived off campus and a few students (often from needier families) lived in campus academic buildings, there developed two distinct and self-identified student cultures that were known at the time as “Dwellers on the Hill” or “Hillians” and “Denizens of the Valley.” These students engaged in intermural sports contests under their respective banners, and the Dwellers held annual banquets and sponsored social events of fun and merriment that were not unlike those of the University’s fraternity counterparts.

In the late 1880s, on-campus living quarters were eliminated, and the Dwellers ceased to exist as a cultural distinction. [While on-campus residential facilities for women were constructed in 1875 (Sage College) and

1912 (Prudence Risley Hall), it was not until 1916 that the first men’s dormitories were built (Baker Court and Founders Hall).]

—Last Friday night about 10:30 the ghostly form of the subdued Napoleon “might have been seen flitting through the halls of the University buildings rousing the stately Senior from his Woodford, the studious Junior from his essay, the frisky Soph. from his poker and the romantic Fresh. from his love-letter. A mysterious whisper was all that was necessary to inspire them all with a strange activity. The result of all these mysterious whisperings and flittings was that at 11 o’clock the various “Dwellers” were drawn up in line before the N. U. B. Each was armed with a cornet, tin horn or other instrument of torture. Slowly they filed along the banks of the creek, through the deep shade of Cedar Hollow and over the bridge into the Village of Free Hollow. They passed through the quiet town and at a signal from “Van” halted before a small cottage. The horns, pans, &c, were kept in subjection until Messrs. Lucas and Sneieler had performed a cornet duet, then they broke forth into a terrestrial (sic) pandemonium. This had the desired effect, and Mr. Jones, the proprietor of the cider-mill appeared upon the scene and conducted the company to the mill. The “Dwellers” here disposed themselves in picturesque groups on the various barrels and boxes, while their benevolent host passed around the brimming decanters. After all had partaken, Sophomore “Jeems” was assisted to a cask and after “wetting his whistle” for the 13th time, thanked the bountiful proprietor for his good cheer. The company then sung their benefactor’s health in the improved rhyme —“Here’s to Mr. Jones ! For he’s a jolly bag of bones! drink it down.” Then with three cheers for Free Hollow, they formed into line again and with all the “sleep-disturbers” blowing, beat a hasty retreat to Cedar Hollow. Here a halt was made and a resolution adopted that, as Mr. Jones had done the “square thing” by the boys, there be none of those mysterious disappearance (sic) of barrels of cider which have occasionally visited former proprietor of the mill. The march was then continued to the Buildings. Here they parted with the song: —“Here’s to good old cider For it makes the intellect wider.” (taking the Chinese view of the seat of the intellect). And thus ended the annual visit of the “Dwellers” to Free Hollow.”

Life in the University Buildings. The “Dwellers on the Hill” and the “Denizens of the Valley” constitute two types of the Cornell student which are characterized by distinguishing features more marked, perhaps, than those existing between any other two classes of Cornellians.

“We would thank you for space to give a pen picture of the typical “Dweller” and the institutions peculiar to the Hill. Let us hope that some “Denizen” will give us the bright side of life in the Valley, and then let the pen pass to the hand of some fair historian who will give us the joys and sorrows of existence at Sage College. The contrast of the three pictures would prove a most interesting study to the student in psychology. There are many differences, existing between the two styles of life arising from the difference in geographical position. The “Hillian” breathes pure air and drinks wholesome water. He has spread before him while looking up the Valley or down the Lake a beautiful prospect diversified by land and water and all that can please the eye. He lives within the very sound of the thundering Triphammer calling him ever to the banks of the stream, there to “list to Nature’s teachings,” to study her power in the raging cataract or to hearken to the “still voice” in the sighing of the wind or the murmur of the rill. But there are other advantages which this difference of location affords the “Dweller on the Hill.” He is near the Campus, the Gymnasium, Library, etc. How, you say, can that fact be of advantage to him? A word, and it will be evident. Being near the recitation and lecture rooms he can utilize the the time between the different classes. If he has a spare hour in the forenoon he steps up to his room and donning dressing gown and slippers sits in his cozy study while the poor “Denizen” is shivering on the Campus or vainly trying to study in the library which is crowded with a hundred other unfortunates. In the afternoon the “Hillian” can step into the library or laboratories which at this time are comparatively deserted and quiet. At evening when exercise and recreation demand his attention the “Dweller” repairs to the Gymnasium or the fool-ball ground or takes a pleasant stroll along the Gorge. The students on the Hill are just as different from those living in the Valley as are their respective locations. The former as a class, are those who come to the University to study, and care more for that than they do for the excitement and distraction of the town. They are as a class Independents, not that the “Hillians” are opposed to the secret societies, but because not belonging to any fraternity, they find, in the intimate relations existing between the inmates of the University Buildings, friends and companions, which the society man in town finds among the members of the fraternity. There are on the Hill, a few society men who have come there because they recognize its advantages as a place for study. They are, however, of liberal enough views to hob-nob and make friends with the other “Dweller”. An obnoxiously exclusive society man would not be tolerated in the dormitories. Living thus apart from the rest of the student-world it is but natural that certain peculiar institutions have sprung up among the “Hillians”. There are any number of minor peculiarities which we might study, but there are two which stand pre-eminent, of the like of which the town student cannot boast. The annual "Hill Banquet" is a supper held in the spring term. The custom was inaugurated last year, but through some oversight no account of the exercises was recorded in your columns. That meeting embodied in a practical form the spirit of all future banquets. Supper was served in room "P" to a company of fifty "Dwellers" and many Hill Graduates. After the supper followed the literary exercises consisting of an Essay, History, Prophecy, Poem and Oration written on subjects relating to the Hill and its characters. The exercises were interspersed by music by the Hill Orchestra and Glee Club. After the relative merits of the average "Denizen" "Dweller" and "Salvia" had been discussed in appropriate toasts the first annual banquet ended in the singing of the favorite college airs. The custom was made a permanent one by the election of officers and the appointment of an executive committee for this year. It is very hard to define the second institution peculiar to the students in the University Buildings. The custom in all its forms is comprehended under the name—"Circus." If the town student smiles at the euphonious title and would allude to the "Grand Combination Hippodrome, Menagerie and Colosseum" of to-day, we would refer him to Rome for the humble but noble origin of the world. But let us not deceive. The "circus" as it obtains on the Hill has none of the characteristics of the ancient circus nor its modem travesty. To analyze, however, the necessary qualities for a successful "circus" are hilarity, general participation and some good practical joke, or better yet, a complication of jokes. There must be no ill feeling and no malice. All, even to the victim himself, must enjoy the joke and join in the laugh. The "joker" then invites the "boys" in, and propitiates them and advances the good feeling by setting forth the mellow apple, the soothing "straight-cut" and the sparkling cider. After this follows the singing of the popular college airs and then some one in the company produces a Cremona or a Stradivarius, and the evening ends in song and dance. All this jollity, all this good humor and good cheer, all the laughter, the singing and the dancing are comprehended under the one title "circus." Living at a distance from the other students and being in such close contact in the University Buildings it is but natural that there has sprung up among the "Dwellers" a strong feeling of fellowship and this is after all the characteristic which distinguishes the "Hillians" from the town students. The latter are separated by living in different parts of the town and also by the distinction of society and clique. There are no cliques on the Hill. If an uncongenial spirit finds his way by chance into the dormitories he is advised as to his proper course of conduct and if he does not conform to the rules of the "Dwellers" they do not "haze" him but employ the more effectual means of making his life miserable by ignoring him and making him feel that he is an intruder among these boon companions.

This unity of feeling finds expression in various ways. If there is any fun anticipated, the leader touches the key of his telegraphic instrument and the message couched in the single word "Serenade" or "Free Hollow" prefaced by ----- ("message for all offices,") is sufficient to call out the "Dwellers" in full force armed with the necessary horns, cider-pails, etc. If their fun is general, their commiseration for a brother "Hillian's" misfortune is also common. For example, one of the Hillians lost his pocket-book containing eighteen dollars, in the late rush. Within a few days he was taken sick. A nurse was immediately procured for him and the next day he was presented by a subscription paper with the full amount of his loss. They have Secrets also which are kept with as great care as any of the trusts of any secret order. It matters not whether it be in the line of midnight artillery practice or mysterious inscriptions on "that tower," a Hill secret is sacred. All will be fined rather than that a single one may suffer. These, then, are the peculiarities of life on the Hill and this the spirit which animates the "Dwellers." A feeling of universal brotherhood, a community in joy or sorrow, a spirit of fraternal bonhomie which does not require any oath or the artificial bonds of any secret society to keep it true.

College Notes —The University student Telegraph line is again in operation, and the usual complimentary messages go back and forth among the dwellers. An engineering Junior, however, claims that his instrument is so far from the battery that the current is all used up before it reaches him.

—Last Wednesday evening on the invitation of Mr. Suren the "Dwellers on the Hill" met in his rooms to give his room mate, Mr. Ives, a birthday surprise party. The company assembled about nine o'clock. Most of the old heroes of the "Boaston" Social gathering as well as several new stars were present. Mr. Suren, after producing pipes, tobacco, apples and all the other necessary concomitants of a happy time, departed to get his chum. He discovered him in the Photographic Laboratory where he was just about stereotype his own photograph. When they returned the room was comfortably filled with smoke, but as soon as the form of Mr. Ives was discerned in the doorway he was surrounded by a score of friends all bent on congratulating him on his recent arrival at man's estate while the cries of "a man in the house!" rent the air. When quiet was again restored, Mr. Suren interested the company with some exciting tales and experiences drawn from his life in the East. Music was next introduced and the assembly joined in the Turkish Hoopup or Leaping Fawn, a dance peculiar to the Orient. Then followed the singing of College songs, in the midst of which the true hero of the "Boaston" tragedy appeared at the door. Immediately the lights were turned low, the music struck a minor strain and Mr. Suren, having been duly "coached up" for the occasion, executed the sham poker scene with truly oriental vigor. But the others interposed with mock solicitation and order was soon restored. After more music, dancing and songs, the whole company joined in the hubble-bubble, out of respect for the hosts, sitting with crossed legs in a circle about the immense oriental spittoon. After this mark of general friendship the meeting broke up with "three cheers for Ives and Suren!" Where next?

- At the close of Last term an enthusiastic meeting of all the Dwellers on Hill was held in Room 50 N. U. B. It was decided to hold the next annual banquet on Friday evening of examination week. The following officers were elected: President, Clark, '77; Vice-President, Keith, '77; Orator, Pickett, '78; Essayist, Meeker, '78; Historian, Wilson, '77; Prophet, Severance, '79; Poet, Wilmarth, '76; Advisory Address, Van Vleet, '77, and Toast Master, Tompkins, '70. The necessary committees were appointed, and a resolution adopted that complimentary invitations be extended to all Resident Graduates from the Hill. The interest manifested at this preliminary meeting presages as enjoyable an affair this year, as that of last year.

- Last Monday night, the Hillians made their annual pilgrimage to the Free Hollow cider mill. The party consisted of thirty-five stalwart youths, each carrying a musical (?) instrument under his arm. After executing some of their choicest selections in the presence of a hastily assembled auditory of that suburban town, our minstrel band was ushered into the presence of the confused vender, who seeing no other way out of the difficulty, hastily produced the coveted extract. Having all drank their fill of the sparkling liquid a collection was taken up amounting to ninety-five cents and turned over to the proprietor of the mill who seemed somewhat surprised at having so much money thus suddenly thrust upon him.

- The game of foot-ball between the Hill and Valley twen-ties upon the Fair Grounds last Friday was pronounced by all to be one of the best played and most equal contests ever witnessed here. The game was called at 3 p. m., with Mann, '78, umpire for the Hill, Bacon, '79, for the Valley, Volkmann, '77, acting as referee...

- At a meeting of the "Hillians" held Tuesday evening it was decided to hold the annual banquet on Friday, May 24, 1878. The following officers were then elected: Pres., C. B. Mandeville; Vice Pres., F. A. Maxwell; Sec, M. J. Spaulding; Orator, F. E. Smith; Essayist, W. A. Chandler; Poet, F. H. Severance; Historian, C. Tompkins; Prophet, J. A. Haight; Toast Master, H. W. Snyder; Musical Director, C. O. Lucas; Manager, H. D. Bliss. Com. of Arrangements, V. N. Hostetler, F. J. Scott, F. A. Maxwell. Com. to arrange for meeting in 1879, F. H. Severance, A. Washburn and N. E. Ferguson.

- PURE WATER —It is to be regretted that while the spirit of reform is upon the managers of the rooms in the University buildings, they do not improve, or rather make endurable, the filthy fluid which the janitor provides for the dwellers on the hill. It is called water; it consists of a turbid liquid filled with rust, sticks, dirt and bugs, and is not fit for use till after straining. In this connection we may remark that none of the water on the hill which is drawn directly from the reservoir is fit to drink. It seems to be thought that because the water is on the hill it must be pure; but the fact is that it comes without filtering from Fall Creek which drains several square miles of land east and north of the reservoir.

- THE NAVY GYMNASIUM.— A want that has long been felt by those students who live in town will be felt no longer, for we have a down-town gymnasium. Our gymnasium on the hill in its barnlike building has always been somewhat of an eye-sore, and its situation on the campus has been such that only Hillians have received much benefit from it. A very few "denizens" find it convenient to climb the hill after dinner for the sake of making use of the apparatus in the Hill gym., and hence efforts have been made which have led to the opening of the down-town, or Navy Gymnasium. The old hall once used by the Olympic Variety troupe, situated over the marble shop opposite the Journal building, has been rented, and fitted up with all the necessary apparatus, rowing machines, etc., a large list of new members has been obtained, and the gymnasium fever has seized nearly every down-town student. The admission fee is only one dollar, with annual dues of twenty-five cents, and the benefits derived more than pay for the small amount expended. Those who have not already joined had better do so at once, as it is desired to get a full list as soon as possible. Names may be left at Finch & Apgar's book-

FOOTBALL.— HILL VS. VALLEY. Yesterday afternoon the Hill and Valley foot ball players vied with one another for supremacy about two hours on the grounds south of Sibley, and after a game of five goals the Hill men won the victory, getting three goals to their opponent's two. The defeat of the Valley was partially due to a poor representation, several of their first-rate players being absent. Two of the Hillians, Messrs. Curtice and Chittenden, were, on this account, allowed to play with the Denizens...

It is time that arrangements were made for the Hill Banquet, which has now become one of the important events of the year. Few things will be remembered with greater pleasure by the Hillians who have left college than these annual gatherings. (sic) In order that the banquet of this year should be as successful as those of previous years, preparations will have to be elaborated immediately. Officers must be elected, music obtained and speeches prepared before the important day arrives. Rules must be made excluding the Denizens of the Valley from profaning by their presence this sacred feast. There has always been some difficulty in determining where the dividing line between Hillians and Denizens should be drawn. This should be settled this year once for all; and the sheep separated from the goats as soon as possible. The time of holding the banquet has been a subject of debate in former years. Some have favored having it before the engineers commence the lake survey, while others have insisted on deferring it till Commencement week. If the latter time is chosen, some are prevented from attending who would otherwise have graced the evening with their presence. Many of the underclassmen leave college as soon as examinations close; and the Seniors are very busily occupied during the last week. In view of all the facts it would seem to be better to hold the banquet before the engineers go up the lake; and, if this be done, plans must be perfected immediately. [After the above was in type, the Hillians held a meeting and made the arrangements for the banquet. An account of this meeting will be found in our local column.]

The Hillian Banquet. There is a tradition, which seems to have gained some little credence among the general public and students as well, that Cornell University was founded some sixteen years ago by the "bounty of the United States and Ezra Cornell." No Hillian believes such childish prattle. No candid man can after once stopping to think. There are two insurmountable objections to this fanciful legend. Geology shows beyond the shadow of a doubt that the foundation of the University—the Hill—was laid away back in primeval chaos when none of us, except Uncle Josh, had an existence. And here is the second objection, for Uncle Josh must be more than sixteen, and everybody knows that he never could have lived anywhere except in the basement of the South Building. However this may be the Hillians have ancestry and traditions which are not shared by any other group of Cornellians. And the Saturnalia—the red day—of the hill, is the annual banquet. There was never such a thing as the failure of a hill banquet. Kingdoms crumble into dust, empires fall away, banks break, and Sophomore excursions grow stale and unprofitable, but the feast of the Hillians goes on forever. Loyal Hillians of old, who are now striking sturdy blows in the world's workshop, come back year after year and join with the children in renewing the memories and the glories of the Hill. A peculiar interest attached to the reunion just held. One of the oldest Hillians, who, in the language of the high priest, "has given the same identical speech at every banquet for the last seven years," was to present the hill with a new and improved deity. This and the other attractions drew together a large number, and when all were seated around the tables in the Hill parlors (Steb's old room), fifty-two were found to be present. The programs, arranged by Ayres, '84, were exceedingly novel and amusing." The Hillians Ninth Annual Goose Chase, he had termed it, and from the graceful poems of that renowned authoress—Mother Goose—were given many rare and touching quotations. At half past nine the curtain was rung up, and scene first opened by the gander-in-chief, Boyer, '83, who spoke thoughtfully and seriously upon the works and influence of the Hillians as students and alumni. The history was happily rendered by the "first quack," Webb, '84. The origin of the hill banquet was given, together with many important events of later history. The Orator, Thurber, '86, had meditated flight for several days. A strong guard had been placed over him, whose vigilance, however he managed to elude, and thus deprived the banqueters of this part of the program. Nineteen yards of Freshman poetry were then unrolled by Sanford, '87, who handled the muses in fine style and received great applause. To Newton, '86 had been confided the book of Hillian fate, and his interpretation thereof was taken as final and irrevocable. Glorious things are in store for such a people and such a prophet. Scene second now began. This was the supper, which occupied the undivided attention of every Hillian until each and every strawberry and sandwich had disappeared, and the seven baskets full gathered up. A song by Uncle Josh followed the close of the repast, and then Hill, '86, delivered an appropriate memorial address over one of the hill's late departed, after which a beautiful memorial tablet was unveiled. Mr. Hill's address was received with the wildest applause, being especially witty and eloquent. Dr. Boyer now yielded his position to Ayres, '84, who trotted out an unusually fine lot of goslings. De Forest, '84, gave an illustrated discourse upon "Hill Music;" Cadwallader, '86, dilated at length upon "Knee Breeches"; Roberts, '87, talked about "Headers"; Smith, '85, recounted the adventures of the engineers on their late trip to Keuka lake; Breed, '86, theorized upon "Hill Deserters"; Elliott, '85, spoke about "The Fem. — Sem. versus the Co-ed"; Harris, '85, gave the true history and genealogy of the mummy; and Marshall, '87, defined and illustrated the subject of "Physical Wrecks." All the toasts were well received, most of them with unbounded applause. The supreme hour had now arrived. A solemn (?) hush fell upon the assembled feasters as the door opened and the high old priest, "the biggest quack of all," Matthews, '83, A.B., P.G., M.C., D. D., followed by the altar boy, Summers, '86, (who performed his part to perfection), entered and paused in front of the veiled deity, before which the sacrificial fires were burning, not after the manner of Chinese, as a Philistine periodical had it, but in true Hillian fashion. The invocation to the new god was in Matt 's best style, the mock seriousness of which was perfectly inimitable. Very many brilliant hits were made, and the house fairly rung with applause. Van Vleet, '77, "manufacturer and soul executioner" of the new divinity, replied with happy effect and then drew aside the curtain. He had pronounced the new god a "slugger," and so it proved. Roberts, '87, was at once elected custodian, and then after giving the Cornell yell, the "best Hillian banquet ever held" stood adjourned.

The Hillian Banquet. The occurrence of the annual Hillian Banquet Friday evening was one long to be remembered by those who go by that name. This was the 10th time such a banquet has been held by the students living on the hill, and was in no way inferior to any of the previous ones. The sole care of the evening was to have a time, and surely every one seemed to enjoy himself. About ten o'clock the party, consisting of nearly sixty sat down to the "festive board" but before devouring the repast listened to the following. An address by Mr. Thurber, the president; a poem by Mr. C. H. Chapin, the prophesy; Mr. E. L. Elliot; and the history, Mr. G. M. Marshall. After the eating was gone through with the toasts were next in order, and were responded to as follows: "The Hill God," Mr. P. B. Roberts; "The Hill Goddess," Mr. H. E. Summers; Emeritus Professors, Uncle Josh; "The Cow with a crumpled horn," Professor Roberts; "The Ladies" Mr. Dunham; "Hill Beverages," Mr. Lee; "Lake Keuka," Mr. C. B. Wing; "Mortar Forts," Mr. Fitts; "Hill Weather, its past, present, and future," Mr. Kerr; "The Absence Committee," Mr. C. H. Thurber. The toasts were witty and caused much laughter and enjoyment. Mr. Dunham, the Pontifex Maximus, then took charge to perform the Invocation ceremonies, which were completed amid dreadful silence. The Cornell yell then reminded the natives of that vicinity, that the 10th and perhaps most successful Hillian banquet was a thing of the past.

HILLIANS Ezra Cornell wished to provide for higher education for students of limited resources. Hence the dormitory rooms in White and Morrill Halls were let at a low rental. It followed that those students who lived there either were selfsupporting or were in receipt of irregular, meager remittances from home. Students without financial anxieties lived downtown, either in rooms over stores, or in private houses. I knew of some men of extreme wealth who paid four dollars a week for rooms and six dollars for table board; one extravagant man went even so far as to keep a horse; but that was a mere plutocratic gesture! As a result of this division on financial lines, there was a tendency for the valley dwellers to think somewhat slightly of the social status of the dwellers on the hill, who in some way became known as "Hillians." For three years I lived in rooms over a store on State Street, and paid $1.50 a week for very comfortable quarters and $3.50 a week for board. Then my greatly beloved roommate—my senior by one year—graduated and my choice for a partner was chimemaster, and so I went to live in North Building, now White Hall, and became a "Hillian." Part of the time I boarded at Sage; for in those days men students were admitted to the Sage dining-room in the effort to fill the tables. But I tired of the extravagance of fourfifty board, and ate at "Boss" Keith's Club in a tiny shack in the orchard that yielded place to Lincoln Hall. Keith ran the club and thus earned his board. At the weekend costs were summed and divided by the number of boarders; the result hovered between $1.50 and $3. Some men who could not afford so great expense came to the midday meal two or three times a week. One man in my class thus indulged in infrequent meals. One day he turned to me in the midst of an oyster stew and said: "I certainly love the gentle bivalve." He was a good student and a man of fine character; he could have gone out and earned a good living, giving up his university course; but he would not. It requires strength of character to follow a plan of life when one is hungry all the time! A few years later this man called on me at the shop where I was working as a machinist; his wife was with him; they were well dressed and evidently well-todo. He had gone West and worked at surveying mines, and had made good. His hunger was justified. Few experiences of my life have left me more joyful than this call. On June 9, 1876, the custom was established of holding an annual banquet on the Hill in June. In the first printed program the participants were called "Dwellers on the Hill." In addition to usual officers of the organization there were, for the banquet, an orator, a poet, an essayist, a historian, and a prophet. Alas, that no record remains of their efforts! These banquets were for a long time and inexpensive. One program states that "Reservoir water only will be supplied." I take this "with a grain of salt," knowing that the "Free Hollow [now Forest Home] cider mill was only a mile away, with its pre-prohibition stores from the preceding autumn. The cider mill has crumbled to dust, and it mained for moderns to realize how sinful it is to drink apple juice with just a tang to give it character. The eighth banquet was called, on the printed program, "Hillians' Eighth Annual Jaw Bone Tournament." There was an elaborate program of speakers which included Professors Gage, Huffcut, Cornstock, Burr, and Wing. On the front of one of the programs— printed in Greek—was a quotation from the Odyssey. Professor Burr's translation, written on Professor Gage's copy is: "I dwell in far seen Ithaca, and therein is a Hill. Assuredly it is rough and not a good place for horses; and yet it is not so sorry a spot; for in it is food divine, and there the generous wine is found, and the rain is on it evermore and the fresh dew." Uncle Josh, the janitor, was always an honored guest; sometimes he was asked to speak, sometimes to sing; and always he responded, and was received with hearty appreciation. Then finally, about 1887, because of increased need for class rooms, the hill dormitories were withdrawn and the Hillians were no more. To day the aristocracy of wealth dwells on the Hill, and those who would have been Hillians long ago have retreated to the valley. A.W. S '78

The History of Spring Day

As has been the custom among circuses since the time when Barnum was a boy, the Spring Day circus started with a parade. Twenty-two years ago, or, to be exact, in the year 1901, the Athletic Association had reached a point where it either had to take in washing or secure the services of Pop (Wellar) (adv.) in order to remain solvent. Disaster was averted, however, when the Savage Club, the Masque, and the Musical Clubs got together and decided to give a big combined show for the benefit of the Association. In order to foster the sale of tickets for the performance, a prominent undergraduate, Childs by name, organized an informal parade as an advertising feature. The parade, consisting of the said undergraduate, one dog, and a brass band, hit the campus just as the twelve o'clock classes were beginning to take effect. The perfectly natural phenomenon of spontaneous combustion occurred, (sic) and the entire University joined the parade in one capacity or another. As a result, the Athletic Association avoided the threatening clouds of receivership. The sale of tickets was a complete success.

A year passed. The Association again found itself with holes in its pockets and nothing to fall out of them. Another show was planned at the Lyceum and the necessity arose to secure a successful sale of tickets. John Senior, then Graduate Manager of athletics, and Ralph Kent decided that a demonstration of some account in the morning would turn the trick, and, as a consequence, balloons, (sic) rattles, and other Fourth of July accessories were added to the parade. Other attractions, including a tug-of-war and side-shows on the campus, eliminated the need of having classes for an hour and the affair was acclaimed a success. In fact, more money was taken in through the celebration than at the Lyceum in the evening. The officials of the Athletic Association wore top hats at the indoor track meets the next year.

In 1903, a circus rivaling Hagenback and Wallace was held on the quadrangle. For a period of one (1) hour classes were suspended by a unanimous (sic) vote of the students, and Spring Day became as much of an established institution at Cornell as the Committee on Doubtful Cases.

1904 rolled around just one year later, and someone said, "Let the students be damned all day long", so the day was made a complete full holiday. Athletic events were held in the afternoon, with the usual show in the evening. The University recognized the event and gave it official sanction, with only a few professors resigning as a result of this foolish action. As time wore on, the evening performance was dropped, leaving only the circus in the morning and a baseball game in the afternoon. From then on, this order of events has remained unchanged with the exception of the addition of crew races at dusk when the wind stops blowing, if it does.

Although no longer an infant in arms, the Athletic Association still finds it necessary to ask father for a nickel now and then, so we find Spring Day still with us. With an adroit use of the imagination, however, the financial aspect of the day may be easily forgotten. 100% efficient Americans forget the great world of Pep, Punch, and Enterprise for the space of twenty-four hours, and enter into the carnival in a spirit of joyful, festive, generous, and genuine celebration. Alumni and undergraduate, Phi Beta and bustee, join mental hands and flit aesthetically from Schoellkopf to Cayuga with the joy of Spring in their hearts and words of greeting on their lips.

Vermont Academy – Collection Provenance

Items W667 through W691 were purchased as a lot, and appear to have been owned by an individual or family with the following connections: (a) Vermont Academy between 1880 and 1884 and then between 1891 and 1893, (b) Vermont and New Hampshire during that period, and (c) Cornell University in the mid-1890s. Of the identified or potentially identifiable individuals in the photographs who attended Vermont Academy, none appeared to have attended Cornell University. And of the two identified Cornell students who are pictured, neither attended Vermont Academy. This raises the questions of why the Vermont Academy photos fall into two groups separated by about 10 years and what links these students to Cornell in the 1890s? One possibility is Herbert Wade Hibbard.

Hibbard graduated from Vermont Academy in 1882, Brown University in 1886, and Cornell in 1891, emerging with a degree in mechanical engineering. He married Mary Permelia Scofield (W679) on 30 Sept 1891. Mary had graduated from Vermont Academy on 23 Jun 1891, nine years after her husband. For three years they lived—and he worked—in Pennsylvania. Mary died in Easton, PA in 1895, and in 1898 Hibbard returned to Cornell to become a professor, specializing in the mechanical engineering of railways. Hibbard married a second time, on 20 Aug 1896, to Mary Coleman Davis, of Walpole, NH. Mary Davis attended Cornell from 1898-99. Her photo may be among the unidentified individuals in this collection.

Inter-Collegiate Literary Contest – Annual Ovation

—We understand that a meeting of all the students will be called early in the coming week, to take some action in regard to sending representatives to the Inter-collegiate Literary contest, to be held in New York city on the 7th of January next. It is to be regretted that this matter has been neglected so long; for, while we were among the first to send delegates to the convention, we are almost last in selecting our orators. It behooves us to decide immediately as to whether this University shall be represented, or not; and since it is a student affair, we hope that the call for the meeting will be responded to by a large gathering of all the classes.

From: The Cornell Era, Vol. 7, No. 3, 18 Sept 1874, p. 12.

—The following gentlemen have been appointed by Mr. Humphrey as the committee “to make full and final arrangements for the preliminary contest having in view the selection of an orator (or orators) to represent Cornell at the Inter-Collegiate Contest: V. L. Davey, ’75, chairman, D. J. Tompkins, ’75, W. J. Berry, ’76, S. H. Coon, ’76, J. S. Milford, ’77. The action of the committee to be ratified or rejected at a joint meeting of the four classes.”

—According to announcement, a general meeting of the students was held in Room T, on Tuesday, at 12:15 p. m., to take action in regard to sending a representative to the Inter-Collegiate Literary Contest to be held in New York city, Jan. 7th, 1875. A large number of the Senior class attended, but, owing to the occurrence of recitations at the same hour, but few of the members of the lower classes were present. At the appointed time Mr. Humphrey, president of ’75, took the chair and briefly stated the object of the meeting. Mr. Tompkins, ’75, was appointed secretary. The constitution of the Inter-Collegiate Literary Association, as adopted at the convention held at Hartford, was then read by the secretary and ratified by the meeting without a dissenting voice. A motion was made that James Fraser Cluck of the class of ’74, should be our representative. Moved to amend by dropping out the words “James Fraser Cluck,” and inserting in their stead the words “the successful Woodford prize competitor of the previous year.” The amendment was proposed in order to settle definitely whether it should be established as a precedent to send the successful competitor for the Woodford prize. After some discussion the amendment, and also the original motion were voted down. It was then moved that a preliminary contest be held for the purpose of choosing a representative; which was adopted after having been amended by instructing the president to appoint a committee of five to make the necessary arrangements for such a contest. Mr. Humphrey announced that he would post the names of this committee upon the bulletin board. The time allotted having expired, the meeting adjourned. From the interest manifested in the method of choosing a representative it is to be hoped that there will be a general competition among the good writers and speakers of the University for this honorable position. While we believe that it would have been best to have selected Mr. Cluck as our representative this year, we heartily endorse the plan adopted as the permanent method.

—So entirely has the athletic spirit taken possession of the body of students, that it is almost impossible to excite a particle of enthusiasm on any other subject. While we welcome as heartily as any one a devotion on the part of the students to their sports, it does not seem as if any, or all of them combined, ought to be allowed to over-ride the other interests properly demanding the attention of the students. The primary object of students, in attending college, being to prepare themselves as fully as possible for the real work of life, it appears to us that, if not the most, at least a little attention should be given to those means that will best fit them for that work. Reluctant as we may be to admit it, one of the most important methods in thus preparing themselves, outside of their regular University studies, is almost entirely overlooked. We refer to the literary societies. It is needless to expatiate upon the benefits to be derived from attending and taking part in their exercises; for all have heard, time and again, their great value extolled by those whose age and experience would render their opinions of greater weight than anything we could say. In reading the lives of the great orators and speakers of our country, we are constantly reminded that the foundation of the easy and fluent style of speaking they possessed in later years, was laid in the academy or college debating society. William M. Evarts, in a public address, a short time since, acknowledged the great good he had

derived in the old college debating societies, and expressed his great regret at their decline. When, if not during his University course, can one obtain that facility of thought and speech so necessary to a ready debater? In the University he is constantly learning rules that can be applied in the literary society, while they are yet fresh in the mind; and nowhere, as in the society, will he receive that free criticism of his style and form in speech and matter, that is so great an aid in polishing and rubbing off the rough corners in a beginner. If the students of our University are to take part in the Inter-Collegiate Literary Contest where is there a better field than these societies afford in which to school themselves? There are at our University four distinct literary societies: the Adelphi, the Curtis, the Irving and the Philalatheian; yet less than one-third of the students ever attend the meetings, and a much smaller number are active members. This should not be so. Every student ought to be a regular attendant upon the meetings of some one of these societies for he can constantly be learning something that will be of use to him in after life. If one, by such an attendance, could gain a correct knowledge of parliamentary rules, he would, be amply repaid for all of the time so spent. Every one, at some period in his life, is called upon to act when a perfect acquaintance with these rules will be of great benefit to him. Here they may be obtained with hardly any exertion on his part. It cannot be for lack of time that students do not attend these societies, for the majority of students waste more than double the time, in useless amusements, that their work as members of a literary society would require. We would urge all students, and especially those who have just entered the University, who are not now members of some literary society, not to wait for a second invitation to join. The above societies are willing to take into their ranks, those who are really in earnest and determined to take an active part in the work. We would also urge those who do not wish to take a part in the active duties, by all means to encourage those who do, by being present at their meetings. Let us see if we cannot, during the coming year, awaken as much interest in our literary societies as in boating; and if only one of these two is to exist at Cornell in strength, let it be the literary societies rather than boating; for it will be infinitely more honor to Cornell when her first man carries off; the prize at the Inter-collegiate Literary Contest, than when her crew carries off the prize at the Inter-collegiate Regatta.

The Ovation. When the news that Cornell had covered herself with glory reached Ithaca the next morning after the Inter-Collegiate Contest, of course glad hearts found expression in joyful faces and warm congratulations. At twenty minutes before ten o'clock the great bell pealed forth the glad news, and later the booming of cannon showed that the first report had been confirmed. According to the precedent formed last year, the formal ovation was left to the citizens of the town. Money was liberally subscribed by the citizens to purchase presents for the victors and to meet other expenses. The time chosen was the evening of the Founder's day, the 11th of January. Long before the exercise began, Library Hall was filled to its utmost capacity. Some could not find room in the hall and turned away disappointed. Enlivening music was furnished by Dr. Howe's orchestra. Rev. Dr. Stebbins was chosen President, and nine of the prominent citizens of Ithaca Vice-Presidents of the meeting. Of what was said during these most interesting exercises which continued for more than three hours we can give but an epitome. Dr. Stebbins, who showed admirable taste in conducting the meeting, gave direction to the occasion by his own genial manner and over flowing good humor. On taking the chair he said: Last summer when the glorious news readied Ithaca, I had the misfortune not to be present, but nevertheless I heard the tremors of your shouting in the air, and saw the gleams of your fire works although seven hundred miles away. How appropriate the day upon which we now extend our congratulations to the heroes in Cornell's last and greatest, victory! If it is permitted the departed to know what transpires here in our midst, how the Founder of our University must be gratified, how his countenance must shine with joy at this scene. It was settled last summer that Cornell's sons had sound bodies, and now this victory testifies that they have sound minds in sound bodies. The greatness of the victory, he said, could be judged when it is remembered that there were eleven colleges in the contest, and that such renowned scholars and men as Bryant, Curtis, Reid, Chambers, Dimmock, and Newcomb were among the examiners and judges. The victors now took their place upon the stage, greeted by the warm applause of the audience. Mr. Tompkins then delivered his prize oration which was listened to with the closest attention. The oration will doubtless appear in one of the college publications, and will speak for itself. Although Mr. Tompkins has a good voice and is master of gesture, we still think he lacks the magnetic power to kindle others, which is the greatest possession of the successful orator. Mr. Heath's essay was read by Professor Corson in his usually entertaining manner. The essay shows a large and accurate knowledge of novelists and their works, and an unusual analytic power in treating of them. The production contained not one attempt at a striking or extraordinary sentence, but was marked throughout by perfect simplicity. In a letter to the chairman Mr. Heath spoke in this very modest manner: As the office of thanking the Association belongs to the orator of the Inter-Collegiate, I shall only call attention to the fact that while all belongs alike to the University, those who enter a competitive examination in Greek and mathematics have a far more difficult duty than an essayist who merely submits his essay to a committee of judges. An essay on mathematics ought to be required of Mr. Parmer, said the President, but like the Scotch lady who admired her minister's discourses so much, and who, on being asked about them "wad nae hae the presumption to understand them;" so he, for a similar reason, would excuse Mr. Palmer. The point was admirable made. As for the maiden Thomas, continued the speaker, we should be glad to hear from her, but she is not. The prizes were presented by Rev. Dr. White who made some well-timed remarks. He spoke, among other things, of the perfect harmony existing between "the town and the gown," so exceptional in college history; behold how good and how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Stanton's Shakespeare was presented to Mr. Heath, the complete works of Daniel Webster to Mr. Tompkins, Goethe's complete works to Mr. Palmer, and Curtius' Greece to Mrs. Irvine, once Miss Thomas. Mr. Tompkins replied in behalf of his associates in a few appropriate although not over modest words, saying that they entered the contest imbued with the idea that while they were getting, it was best to get all they could, that their laurels should grace none but their Alma Mater and that when, late in life, some of us shall ascend yonder slope with dim vision and unsteady step, these laurels will still be green. Mrs. Irvine not being present, Prof. Russel received the present, for this lady in a very affecting speech. Prof. Russel said: I thank you from the bottom of my heart, having devoted a long service to the cause of womanhood, to her right to educate and elevate herself, for now being allowed to represent a woman. One year ago when the ovation took place, it was remarked that in the report of some future examination we might find the words Miss someone, from Cornell, took the prize in, &c. That prophecy has been fulfilled. A woman, continued he, has brought honor upon our college, and upon every one in it. He then spoke of what Miss Thomas had done to prove that women, as well as men, have ability. Before coming to Cornell she used the leisure hours she had from the work of the composing desk, in improving her mind. After graduating here last June, when requested to represent our University at the examinations in Greek, she put off her marriage for six months, and devoted herself to severe studies to advance both woman's interests and those of her chosen college. Prof. R. thought no girls' school could have given the culture that it is possible to acquire at a co-educational institution like Cornell. He further continued, If a man wants a companion whose society he can enjoy, whose counsel he can ask, he wants an educated woman. And finally, what is more than all, as is expressed by Mrs. Browning, love comes best to those of equal degree. Of course, these sentiments did not escape the hisses of some opponents of co-education in the gallery. President White, whom Dr. Stebbins termed a Leyden-

Jar ready to discharge, was next called. His address was marked by his usual intense earnestness. He would take up a new line of thought. There was an undercurrent to all this. It was a triumph of principles. First, the University is nonsectarian. One clause in its charter declares that the governing body of the University shall never be composed exclusively of any body of religionists, or of any body of non-religionists. With the vast majority of the 376 institutions which go by the name of colleges this is not the case. Harvard, The University of Michigan, and the University of Virginia, were mentioned as noble exceptions. However good a religion may be, it should never be made the basis of the qualifications of a professor. To succeed in education, no college charter must shut out such men as Curtis, Agassiz, Taylor, and Lowell, men whose influence and help we have had here. The next principle which has its weight here, is that of concentration of resources for higher education, giving in this case very superior advantages to our contestants, especially in the men whose influence they have been under, and above all, in having the use of a library at least not excelled by more than two college libraries in the United States. He then spoke of the choice of studies. In the President's class in college, of the one hundred and seven who pursued Greek and Latin, not more than ten did so from choice. This could never lead to high scholarship. All could not win prizes in New York, but all who will, may win prizes somewhere in life. Professors Shackford, Flagg, and Oliver would have been called on but for the lateness of the hour. Professor Potter was vigorously called for. As the meeting was declared adjourned, he said, "Students of Cornell! In the annals of history this nation has two great battle fields; Saratoga and Yorktown. In the annals of Cornell we have two great victories; Saratoga and Yorktown. Never allow your colors to be dishonored."

From: The Cornell Era, Vol. 8, No. 13, 14 Jan 1876, pp. 100-102.

The Jubilee. The Jubilee and Ovation tendered by the students and citizens of Ithaca to the successful I. C. L. victors, last Saturday evening at Library Hall, was one of the most delightful occasions of the college year. The happy completion of the order of exercises was largely due to the untiring exertions of the Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. Lehmaier, Wilson, Conant and Moffat. The beautiful evening and the pleasant memories of previous receptions conspired to fill the hall to repletion. On the stage was Hon. W. L. Bostwick, chairman, and an interesting delegation from the Faculty arranged around the stage with imposing effect. Tumultuous applause from the gallery gods and Academic "spuds" greeted the arrival of the favorite Professors and noted college characters, and varied the entertainment in a delightful manner. Dr. Howe's orchestra opened the exercises with a lively Offenbachian air which was followed by a short introductory address by the chairman. He referred briefly to a few of Cornell's recent victories; to the regularity in which those Ovariations occur; and closed by suggesting the propriety of setting apart two days in our calendar, one in January and the other in July, for general jollification, and that, notwithstanding our misfortune in having no Representative in oratory, he could still rejoice, since it was Hamilton, his alma mater, that bore away the prize. (Distinct sobs in the gallery.) The audience was then treated to some more music by the orchestra, the gallery imps meanwhile keeping time with their feet to the intense alarm of the people beneath. Mr. Brewer, '76, then read his prize essay on "The Federalist Party in America." The essay was a concise historical account of the rise and fall of the Federalist Party, simple in construction, and plain almost to severity. The audience was then entertained by the Glee Club, with a song, but unfortunately it was pitched so high that the effect was not decidedly electrical. Mr. Randolph, '79, then read his essay on "Hawthorne's Place in Literature." His treatment of the subject was ornate, introducing many appropriate comparisons and metaphors, and read in a clear, pleasing voice. Mr. S. H. Coon's essay on the same subject was not presented for want of time. At the conclusion of Mr. Randolph's essay the Glee Club sang the Cornell Hymn, after which Mr. Halliday, '70, in a few happy remarks presented the prizes generously contributed by the students and citizens of the town. Mr. Brewer briefly responded on behalf of himself and associates, and returned hearty thanks for their enthusiastic reception. To the Latin competitor, Mr. E. Schwerdtfeger, '77, was given Monson's History of Rome; to Mr. E. Frayer '76, the successful competitor in Greek, Bryant's Translation of Homer's Illiad; to Mr. C. T. Brewer '76 George Ticknor Curtis' on the Constitution and Hamilton's Federalist; to Mr. N. A. Randolph '79. Longfellow's Translation of Dante's Divinia Comedia; to Mr. S. H. Coon '76. Macauley's Life and Letters, and to Mr. C. A. VanVelzer, the competitor in Mathematics, three volumes of the American Journal of Mathematics. The prizes were neatly bound in half calf, and will form a valuable addition to the libraries of the recipients. Persistent (sic) calls were made throughout the evening for Profs. Potter and Oliver, but neither of those gentleman close to respond. Prof. Russel however, made a few interesting remarks, quoting a few choice extracts from the Register and venturing upon another explanation of that seal. He recounted briefly the opposition to the University from its inception; the beauties of co-education; the interest the Professors had in the students, and closed by remarking that our success at New York was the result of the faithful labors of Profs. Shackford, Peck, Flagg and Oliver, (a voice; Arnold!) and a hearty approval of the methods of instruction in their several departments. His speech was frequently interrupted by vociferous applause rather indiscriminately administered, at the conclusion of which, the audience slowly dispersed to the lively measures of a German waltz and the distressing strains of "There is a boarding-house Far, far away, Where they have Ham and eggs Three times a day. Oh! how the boarders yell When they hear the dinner-bell; Oh! how those eggs do smell, Far, far away!"
