THE RIVOIRE COLLECTION

Given a tendency in a developing society for the action to migrate from the center to the fringes of society, archivists in a mature society such as ours would do well to give due attention to what is happening on the fringes. The value of such information has been demonstrated during our efforts to document challenges to the governance of Cornell University from 1965 to 1975. University governance during that period shifted in the direction of the most pronounced fringe behavior with the establishment of the University Senate, but the vast documentation which emanated from the Senate reveals little about the character and intensity of the fringe behavior which impinged upon it. Our collection of hand-outs and posters from campus and near campus provides a context for the study of Senate action and inaction.

Today, and for the past twenty years, thanks to Alice and John Rivoire we have been collecting material from the fringes in midtown Manhattan. The Rivoires began collecting to add to our extensive collection of political Americana. As the Holtzman flyer in the sample illustration indicates, political material is still a component of their collecting. The bulk, however, now consists of handouts that invite religious experience or solicit customers for facilities offering sexual gratification. In the interests of precise documentation the Rivoires are recording the date and place of distribution on material obtained in the streets.
