INTRODUCTION

This collection contains most of the personal and professional papers of the late Eugene S. Boerner, known to many as "the Dean of American rose hybridists." During his years as Research Director and Treasurer of the Jackson and Perkins Company at Newark, New York, Boerner had more roses patented under his name than any other man in history. He developed over 155 new roses, including one named for him after his death. Internationally well-known for his work with roses, the "father of the floribunda" also developed his famous "Bird" series of chrysanthemums and worked as well with delphiniums and other perennials during his active years.

Included in the collection are Mr. Boerner's early high school and college papers, his correspondence, both personal and professional, (c. 1900-1966); papers relating to his model farm, "Gene's Landing," on Seneca Lake, as well as numerous slides, photographs, and motion picture films, both personal and pertaining to his professional work.

Mr. Boerner's domestic and foreign parentage and seedling records and hybridizing books, which contain all of his rose crosses for each year, are included as are his patent books which picture and describe every rose or perennial he developed.
