Associated Gas and Electric Company. Associated Gas and Electric Company Records, 1902-1954. 150.5 cubic ft.

The Associated Gas and Electric Company (AGEC) was a utility holding company which went bankrupt in the 1930s. It was reorganized under the supervision of the courts and was broken down into smaller companies by government order. The company originated as the Ithaca Gas Light Company of Ithaca, N.Y. in 1852. Soon after 1900, its owners began securing control of surrounding properties and the company was incorporated in 1906. There were fourteen subsidiary companies, all but two of which were located in New York; the largest and most important were the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Homer and Cortland Gas Light Company. Through mergers among its operating companies, the numbers were reduced to four - the Homer and Cortland Gas Light Company, the Ithaca Gas Light Company, the Ithaca Gas Light Company, and the Norwich Gas and Electric Company. These companies were consolidated in 1916 under the name of the New York State Gas and Electric Corporation.

Summary: Records of AGEC include articles of incorporation; contract agreements between AGEC and its subsidiaries and banks regarding corporate stock, bonds, and debentures, mergers, real estate and facilities transactions. and electricity distribution; annual financial reports to securities holders; Federal Trade Commission accounting reports; 211 volumes of stock and bond ownership certificates; AGEC audits, 1906-1939; indentures; Board of Directors and Executive Committee minute books of operating companies, service companies, holding companies, and trusts; 88 volumes of scrapbooks, including letters, circulars, sales brochures, clippings, and reports; U.S. District Court records of litigation concerning the reorganization of AGEC, including testimony, proceedings, judges opinions and rulings, and reports of court-appointed trustees, 1930s; Mistories of AGEC and its associated properties, and biographical information on Howard C. Hopson, lists of companies and mergers, 1919–1933; Securities and Exchange Commission legal forms and hearings, 1941-1944; copies of and AGEC company magazine, 1927-1938; and related records. Also included are journals, ledgers, cashbooks, payroll vouchers, stock certificate books, and other items concerning Howard C. Hopson's business interests, including trusts, service companies, and investment and management firms; also, records concerning the Rural Electrification Administration.

ASSOCIATED GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY PAPERS, 1902 - 1954

286 linear feet including boxes and volumes

The Associated Gas And Electric Company was a huge utility holding company, once rated at a value of over a billion dollars. The company became bankrupt during the 1930 decade, was reorganized under supervision of the courts, and was broken down into smaller companies by government order.

The collection arrived at the State Historical Society Of Wisconsin in 99 transfer cases, accompanied by a short history of the company and the list of material in the transfer cases. The arrangement of the papers on arrival has not been changed, but on the left margin of each page of the shelf list a number has been added, which will show the location of the papers described.

This inventory consists of two parts:

ASSOCIATED GAS AND ELECTRIC

A Study in Expansion and Manipulation in the Electric Utilities Industry and of its Effect on the Pattern and Quality of Service in New York State

Leslie E, Decker To to to Matte

Copied Dec. 22, 1955 with permission of Leslie E. Decker; obtained through the instrumentality of Forrest McDonald

The history of the Associated Gas and Electric Company and of the maze of corporations which were interlaced with it is a part of the general history of the phenomenal expansion, based largely on technoloeical improvement and characteristic methods of finance, of a major twentieth century industry. It is also the history of evolving governmental regulation and control on both the state and federal level. It is the tale of a twentieth century empire builder, Howard C. Hopson, as well. And, most important for the purposes of this discussion, it is the story of financial manipulation and control as a determinant of the pettern of service in any given area.

From 1882, when Edison's Pearl Street plant began operation, the growth of the Electric Light and Power industry has been enormous. In 1902, for which data is first available, 2.51 billion kilowatt hours of 1 of electricity were generated. Twenty years later this figure had reached 40.29 billion and by 1932 74.69 billion kwh were being generated. In 1941 total kwh sales by all utilities reached 159.36 billion and by 1951 this same figure amounted to 314.07 billion kwh. The rapid expansion which these figures indicate naturally required a large investment.

This was especially true after 1918 when the greatest expansion took place. Almost $10 billion was invested in new construction between 1921 and 1938 so that, by 1937, the net value of capital assets in the industry was about $13.3 billion. Investment continued at a relatively steady pace and in 1941 assets were reported as $15.7 billion. Depreciation surpassed new construction in the war years and immediately thereafter and brought about a slight decline, but, with the unprecedented expansion of the industry in recant years, assets had reached $22.44 billion by 1951.

As would be expresented technological advance has been just as 6spectacular as the increase in output and property. In generation itself the most important development in terms of output has been in the increasing efficiency of boilers and furnaces for the production of power by steam. In 1915 the largest plant size was about 35,000 kilowatts. In 1936 the possible size had increased to 165,000 kilowatts. Most imporbant for this development was the achievement of increased thermal efficiency through the use of the turbo-generator. In 1900 it took 26,000 btu to produce a kilowatt hour, while thirty 7years later it took only 10,500 btu to perform the same task. The continuing advance in this direction is probably the greatest explanation for the fact that, by 1941, although the number of generating plants were about equal, actual capacity was 27.670,640 kmh in steam plants as against 11,299,867 kwh in hydro plants, This situation does not preclude great strides in hydro-generation but is perhaps another indication that it may be easier to move the power plant to the areas of demand-congestion than to attempt to move power over longer and longer distances. Hydro-power did grow by lasps and bounds starting with the Niagara Falls project of 1895 which was capable of producing only 3.300 kilowatts and continuing to grow until it took a great leap, with the completion of the Boulder Dam project in 1936, to a 76.700 kilowatt rating for one unit, The largest Hydro-plant in the United States in 1941 was still that at Boulder with its much expanded capacity of 7(0,000 kilowatts, but at the same time, the largest steam plant, the Hudson Avenue Plant in Brooklyn, had a capacity 10 of 770.000 kilowatts.

The solution of technical problems in generation is only a part of the explanation for the pattern, which continues to be more and more pronounced, of large central stations--be they hydro or steam---which serve increasingly wide areas. Further problems had to be solved in transmission--as opposed to distribution---before these developments were possible. In 1900 no transmission in the modern sense took place, Each plant was a center which served the area in its immediate viginity as a distributor of power but which did not and could not transmit power over any great distances. This meant that the plant was small and was confined to villages of some size or to cities. It also meant that some of the country's greatest potential hydro sites could not be utilized due to their remoteness. Without transmission on a large scale the phenomenon discussed here would have been impossible. The barrier was steedily overcome chiefly by the designing of generating units capable of ever increasing voltages. Thus, in 1905 the highest obtainable was 72,000 volts; in 1915 this had reached 150,000 volts; and, by 11 1936, 287,000 volts had been attained. With voltage at the last cited level and with the development of transformers capable of handling it, electric power could be transported up to 300 miles.

Because of the large capital investment and the nature of the industry, as discussed above, electric power businesses are most efficient as monopolies. Thus, early in its history, this industry was subject to regulation. At first this regulation took the form of local statutes or other local controls, but this jurisdiction was too restricted and by 1900 a demand for uniform and scientific regulation was being expressed. New York and Visconsin in 1907 led the procession of states in forming state administrative boards of the modern type to deal with this problem. By 1948 thirty-eight other states and the District of Columbia had

In the first place, the rapid growth of the industry in output and financial importance, and, in the second place, the development of transmission possibilities and the resultant possibilities of large areas of control by one company, made administrative jurisdiction on More important for the future of the inthe state level too small. dustry, was the development of a new corporate form -- the holding company. With this instrument at hand business leaders, of both constructive and destructive types, were able, through the use of little capital and much ingenuity, to build up great utility empires with little regard to state lines and to national economic efficiency. A roster of these companies formed in the first decade of this century includes such names as the Electric Bond and Share Company (1905), American Gas and Electric Company (1906), American Fower and Light Company (1909), Standard Gas and Electric Company (191.), Detroit Edison Company (1903), Public Service Corporation of New Jersey (1903), and Associated Gas and Electric Company (1906). These companies and others like them created great empires of utilities in the next two decades and piled company on company to achieve their ends. This was made particularly samy by the lack of a national jurisdiction in regulation and espacially in regulation of security issues and sales. With the crash of 1929 many utility holding company stocks collapsed and this was taken as evidence of exploitation and all the evils connected with it. "Unintentionally the industry offered itself as a scapegoat for the sins, real and imagined, of the business world and its offer was accepted by a public in no mood for a just and careful allocation of praise and blame, * After the reorganization of the Federal Power Commission in 1930 the first step taken to remedy this situation was the Securities and Exchange Act of 1933 But the most important step taken by the and its successor of 1934. Congress was in 1935 when it passed the Public Utilities Holding Company 18 This piece of legislation, popularly referred to Act of that year. as The Wheeler-Rayburn Bill, gave relatively extensive regulatory powers to the Securities and Exchange Commission. Most important, was section 11, popularly called the "death sentence," which enjoined the Securities and Exchange Commission.

This ultimately led to the end of the yast, spravling empires of the public-utilities holding-companies--mmong them Associated Gas and Electric.

The combination of events which led to the building of these great eystems and to their elimination is the story of the formation of the present pattern of electric utility control and service in the United States. The story of the Associated Gas and Electric System is the history--on a vastly reduced scale--of the development of the modern pattern in electric energy service and control.

II

The Associated System traced its origin to the Ithaca Gas Light Company of Ithaca, New York, incorporated in that State October 28, 1852, with a capital of $75,000, by a group of residents of that com-20 gunity. This company remained isolated for over fifty years. However, soon after the turn of the century its owners became interested in 21 surrounding properties and secured control of them. The stage was thus set for the debut of Associated Gas and Electric Company.

The promoter of the new company was William T. Morriss, of Ithaca and associated with him were Ebenezer M. Treman and Thomas W. Summers, both also of Ithaca. The company was incorporated on Marub 19, 1906, and its control, through the transfer of stocks, of its subsidiary companies solidified in May, 1907. These companies numbered fourteen, all but two of which were located in New York. The largest and most important were the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Homer and Cortland 22 Gas Light Company. Until about 1922 Associated did little more than maintain its position and carry out a few mergers among its operating companies. Through this merger policy the number of New York companies was reduced to four--the Homer and Cortland Gas Light Company, the Ithaca Electric Light and Power Company, the Ithaca Gas Light Company, and the Norwich 23 Gas and Electric Company. These companies were in turn consolidated, in 1916, under the name of the New York State Gas and Electric Corporation, which was then the largest operating company in the system and which remained one of the largest of the holding company's subsidiaries.

While Associated Gas and Electric was thus slowly consolidating its subsidiaries, the careers of the two men who were later to guide its course were beginning. J. I. Mange, the Utility man, was an electrical engineer employed by Mr. White, the president of J. G. White & Company. He became vice-president of the J. G. White Management Corporation which, with its parent and other interests, held a controlling interest in Associated Ges and Electris. In 1912 Mange became a vice-president of the latter company where he remained until he and Hopson made their deal in 1922. Meanwhile, Howard C. Hopson the financial wizard and real moving spirit behind the enterprise, began his career as an employee of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington. The eon of a nursery salesman in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, be had worked his way through the State University but, before receiving the degree had gone to Washington to work. He attended night classes at George Waanington University and received successively his B.A., M.A., C.P.A. end admission to the bar. In 1908 he transferred to the New York State Public Service Commission where he soon became head of the Capitalization Division and a key man in New York public "In later years /he/ boasted that the only laws utility regulation. he couldn't get around were the ones he himself wrote."

soon crossed. In 1915 Hopeon left the Commission and established an office at 61 Broadway, New York City, under the name of H. C. Hopson & Company, as a utility consultant. J. G. White and Compeny was his first customer. At various times during the next seven years he also handled the business of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Con-27 solidated Gas Company of New York, and Electric Bond and Share Company.

Early in 1922 Hopson and Mange started on their career of publicatilities manipulation with the purchase of controlling interest in the Associated Gas and Electric Company. This feat was accomplished with $298.318.19 of borrowed money although the company had total assets at the time of $4,600,000. It would seem worth-while to describe in some detail how this was done as it illustrated very well some of the simpler methods used in the empire building which they were undertaking. Hopson and Mange organized two companies as the instruments of their plan. These were Associated Utilities Corporation, the father of the later Associated Gas and Electric Corporation, and Public Utility Investment Corporation. In March the first company bought from the J. G. White Corporation, of which Mange was a vice-president, 5,979 shares of $100 par common stock in Associated Gas and Electric for $48 a share. Associated Utilities apparently borrowed $71,748, as part payment, from the other Hopson-Mange company, Public Utilities Investment Corporation. The latter company had in turn borrowed this sum from banks. Later they acquired the 21 remaining shares of stock through a third corporation, Associated Securities Corporation, which they, organised in November of 1922. They paid $1,000 into this corporation for which they received 10 shares of the company's stock. Then they gave the company an option on the shares of Associated Gas and Electric held by Associated Utilities and received in return the remaining 990 shares of stock in Associated Securities. Later Associated Securities exercised its option thus gaining control of Associated Gas and Electric. However, Hopson and Mange later placed control of Associated Securities in Associated Gas & Electric properties, a Massachusetts trust, formed 28 June 1, 1924.

Hopeon and Mange became directors of Associated Gas and Electric on March 14, 1922. Mange also became president and Hopeon became vice-29 president and treasurer. From these seats of power, with Hopeon more and more the prime mover, the pair began the direction of the assaing expansion of the organization. From 1907 and total assets of $1,200,000 the company had expanded in the first sixteen years of its existence to 30 total assets of $6,942,570. by 1921. By 1926 this figure had reached $264,362,697. and three years later total assets amounted to $900,491,542 DEPARTMENT OF MANUSCRIPTS & UNIVERSITY ARCHIVES, CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES, ITHACA, NEW YORK 14853-5301

28 The best account of this series of transactions is found in S.E.C. Investment Trusts, Part I, Appendix G, page 792-793, but an excellent popular account is presented in "Through the Wringer," Fortune XXXII, p. 202. 29 A. G. & E., Annual Report 1924, 1 and S.E.C. Investment Trusts, Part I Appendix G, p. 791. 30 F.P.C. Utility Corporations Report, part 45, pp. 1456, 1464. 31 Ibid., 1465. The grash of 1929 and the subsequent depression put an end to this rapid expansion but, even so, by December 31, 1937, the company reported its consolidated total assets at $1,037,832,677. This wast growth in assets came about as Hopeon sold various types of securities, to a public which, until 1929, was more than willing to buy, and used the funds so obtained to buy control of more and more utility properties.

> Bit by bit he expanded it, anapping up one company here, another company there. Today /1935/ the Phillipines and Nova Scotia are on the fringes of his empire, while Tennessee and South Carolina are in its suburbs. Its heart is New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.³³

Hopson's ampire ultimately touched twenty-six states, one territory, and the maritime provinces of Ganada and in the process of expansion he increased the amount of preferred stock from $1,226,050. to $24,778,296. and the amount of the funded debt from $6,702,600. to 34$377,033,410. between the years 1922 and 1929.

Another way to appreciate the degree of expansion which the company went through is in terms of numbers of customers served and the number of companies which hung the plaque "Associated System" in their offices and sales rooms. Between 1922 and 1929 the total number of customers served rose from 44,217 to 1,368,861, an increase of almost 31 times 35 in 7 years. In 1929 the System had as its base 166 operating companies of one sort or another. About 75% of the revenue of these companies came from electric sales. Above these were 21 holding and subholding companies, 3 Massachusetts voluntary associations and at 36 least 7 service companies. Actually these figures are a bit misleading since New York State Electric and Gas, listed as only one company in this report had actually purchased, consolidated, or merged 37 22 small New York companies from 1926 to 1929. It should also be noted that many of the companies which were brought into the system were already relatively large products of a series of mergers. This was particularly true with the addition of the Barstow, Rochester, and American 38 Thus it would seem probable that a more accurate esgroups in 1929. timate of the number of companies acquired would be in the neighborhood of 400 or perhaps more. A consideration of the effects of such enormous shifts and realignments in the industry in the United States is far beyond the confines of such a paper as this but later an attempt will be made to discuss this point relative to New York State.

With the crash of 1929 and the depression which followed, the stocks of Associated Gas and Electric along with those of most other utility holding companies plummeted from their original par of $100 to $1 or $2 and the utility companies, with the rest of American. business, entered a new stage of development. The millions of dollars which Hopson had gotten from his "customer ownership" campaigns had now disappeared as these people, who had paid $50 and up per share, found it impossible to realise much more than $1 per on their investment. Indictments of these policies, which had once been so popular, began to appear. The atmosphere of operation was definitely changed. This was well illustrated by the appearance of an article by N. R. Danielian in the Atlantic Monthly, published in 1933, which stated, in part, "The Associated Gas and Electric Company sways in the air, high up above the ground. It is like the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, a 40 pyramidal structure, built in weird design, worthy of a Nebuchadnezzar," The company brought suit for libel in Superior Court, Suffolk County, Massachusetts, and was ultimately successful. Nevertheless, as illustrated by the beginnings of the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of utility corporations and by the Securities Acts of 1933 and '34 culminating in the Public Utilities Company Act of 1935, policies had to change.

By 1931 Hopson was descerate and forced to resort to some "panic financing." He had $50,000,000 in maturities falling due and no funds with which to repay them since the company's yearly earnings were going from plus $16.000,000 in 1927 to reach minus $3,300,000 in 1933. He was forced to be row $43,000,000 from banks and in attempting to meet their demands lost control of one of his big properties in New York State-The Rochester Group. He managed to meet the crists and stave off the day of reckoning on this issue only to be faced with a much larger problem. Associated Gas and Electric Company had some $260,000,000 fixed interest debentures outstanding which were not to be transferred but which had a loophole in their restrictions on subsidiary financing. Hepsen found the leephole and used it but just how he did it is not entirely clear. He announced, in early 1932, that Associated Gas and Electric Company did not own the income producing companies in the system but rather that Associated Gas and Electric Corporation owned them. He then performed some fast maneuvers to get the securities properly authenticated to make this assertion hold. It held--exactly how Company. The holders of over $200,000,000 of the securities were cajoled or frightened into accepting one of the options, which ultimately meant that their securities were put on an income rather than an interest basis. However the holders of the remaining debentures, amounting to almost $00.0.0.0.0, refused to make the change, formed a protective asenciati n. and started litigation against the company. This litigation continued an until 1936 when the case was dismissed and a compromise reached whereby representatives of the Protective Association were placed on the board of directors of Associated Gas and Electric Company. However, interest still had to be paid on the putstanding fixed interest debentures and it was this steady drain on the company which finally forced it into bankruptoy in early 1940 after the Securities and Exchange Commission has, in 1939, won its attempt to stop the payment of interest 50 from capital.

Meanwille Mr. Hopson and Associated Jas and Electric had other pressing problems. The Congress of the United States, reacting to the great eye-opener of 1949 and after, nea passed, in 1933, and in 1934, acts which seriously restricted security manipulation. He sent out editorials and paid advertisements to all the newspapers that 52 And, as the Conference Committee was considering the would take them. bill, a barrage of telegrams descended on both houses all demanding that the "death sentence" be left out of the Act. Congressman Dennis J. Driscoll, twentieth Pennsylvania District, found the name of a friend, John Bayer, an undertaker of Warren, Pennsylvania, signed to one of the messages and called to ask why he was so opposed to the clause. Bayer promptly replied that he was not. This, of course, brought into the open what had already been suspected and Hopson later indicated not only that he had used names from city directories and grave stones but that he had spent a million dollars in the process and would spend many more millions if he thought it would prevent the passage of the Act. The publicity given these activities and Hopson's attitude on them put him and his companies in a bad light in the public eye and drew forth the venom of members of Congress. Senator Fred Herbert Brown of New Hampshire in explaining why he supported the bill said,

I invite attention to one H. C. Hopson... the dominant , figure and guiding spirit of the Associated Gas and Electric System. As a dominant figure he is a marvel and I think he admits it. As a guiding spirit he leaves nothing undone to accomplish his purpose....In my opinion under the present set-up, no body can effectively regulate such an organization. It is too big, too powerful, its officials are too fast and its lawyers too smart....I have seen them juggle their books, juggle their cash, juggle foreclosure sales where they were both buyer and seller, juggle their taxes, juggle their lawyers, their accountants and their engineers.²⁴

The Act was passed and its "death sentence" clause made it imperative that the holding companies simplify and integrate their systems, with no more than two levels of holding companies, by January 1, 1938, unless the Securities and Exchange Commission allowed a delay in individual 55 cases.

Associated Gas and Electric accelerated its policy of elimination and merger with the passing of the Utilities Act. As has already been indicated the policy of merger had been followed to some extent by the company prior to the passage of the Act. In each successive year from 1924 it had eliminated eighteen, seventeen, thirty-three, thirty-four, nineteen, thirteen, nineteen, twenty-two, twenty-seven, twenty-seven, and fifteen for a total of two hundred and thirty-nine companies. In 1935 this program was increased to forty-four and in 1936 twenty-two companies were eliminated bringing the total to three hundred and five 56 companies. Eight more companies were eliminated in 1937, the most important being the merger, with the permission of the New York Public Service Commission, of New York Central Electric Corporation, and Empire Gas Electric Company into New York State Electric and Gas. New York 57 State also merged the Elmira Heat and Power Corporation in that year. The system registered with the Security and Exchange Commission on March 29 and filed its plan of integration on December 1, 1938. At that time the system contained 172 companies. The plan was to eliminate 112 more companies and to place the remainder in two systems, one in New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and New Jersey and the other in the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky and Tennessee. The argument was presented that the company in the Philippines was outside the scope of the law and therefore not subject to elimination.

In November, 1938, Hopson retired, having taken from the system some $12,200,000 in manipulating bond issues and another $6,500,000 in padding the bills of his personally controlled service companies which had provided accounting, tax, management, and other services to the 59 creating companies at greatly inflated rates. The system had been maintained by his ingenulty and Hopson combined in himself the qualifications and resources of all three.

But it seems probable that not even he could have saved his creation at this late date. The past was catching up as the protective association of "Recap" victims and the Securities and Exchange Commission came closer and closer to pushing the whole structure into the courts. The defeat of the last attempt to rearrange capitalization in 1938 and the Securities and Exchange Commission order stopping upward payment of capital ties and Exchange Commission order stopping upward payment of capital ties by the lower companies left a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as the only way out. A request for a $26,000,000 loan was refused however and this left no alternative. Associated Gas and Electric filed a petition in bankruptcy January 10, 1940.

As preparations were made to reorganize the system a move was initiated to punish Mr. Hopson for his crimes. In May 1940 he was indicted on mineteen counts of conspiracy to milk $20,000,000 from the utilities and of using the mails to defraud. The "milking" was alleged to have been done in a $63,000,000 convertible debenture issue of 1928, the sale of management services at unreasonable rates, and the charging

The trial began in November, 1940, and the verdict was handed down in early January of the following year. He was found guilty on seventeen counts of mail fraud, which made the possible sentence eighty-five years in Federal prison and a fine of $77,000, was sentenced to five years in jail, with the sentences on seventeen counts to run concurrently, and entered the penitentiary at Lewisburg, 65Pennsylvania.

It is evident that H. C. Hepson received much unfavorable publicity and was painted as a black robber of widows and orphans. On the other hand, "By the utility promotion standards of the times, there was nothing particularly illegal and few things that were novel in Hepson's 66 corporate and financial pyramiding during the twenties." If "it was Hepson's policy to conceal from the public, in so far as possible, the 67 precise location in the system of its investments," and if he left "a 68 long trail of financial chicanery and duplicity," he did what many 60 others like him were doing all over the country. justify his activities or his aims on moral or ethical grounds but "the main difference between Hopson and other alick operators of his era was the superior ingenuity with which he scrambled the operation," and perhaps in his ability to bolster the tottering monster, which he had built, for so long after its collapse seemed only a matter of days. However, this does not necessarily make him any less a detriment to society. "Business...would have been duller though somewhat stapler, 71 if he had stuck with the P.S.C."

The first problem in the settlement of the Associated Case, of course, was to appoint receivers and immediately the shambles of Hopson's empire became a political football. At first it was proposed that John W. Hanes and H. I. Harriman, both with brokerage and banking backgrounds, be appointed but first John T. Flynn of the New Republic 72' and then Senator George Norris objected. For some reason, whether it was this publicity or not is not clear, a change was made and the final appointees were Walter Pollacr, a man of some experience as trustee of other companies, Dennis J. Driscoll, of the Pennsylvania Public Utility 73 Commission, and William Thorp, a former Amherst College economist. Pollack, the trustee of the Company, found the treasury empty and pro-

After the initial outburst of publicity and recrimination the bankruptcy case settled down to the complicated task of finding out just who owned what and of bringing interested stockholders into agreement. Pollack died in 1940 and was replaced by one Stanley Clarke 75 but otherwise the personnel in the case remained the same.

Two extremely difficult problems faced the group. The first of these was to settle the question as to whether the holdouts or the people who accepted the option in the "Recap" scheme, held first rights on the assets of the company. In the final settlement a compromise 76was reached which gave each group a claim. More important, was the problem of meeting the divestment requirements of the Securities and Exchange Commission. On May 3, 1943, a plan was filed with that body which proposed the elimination, through merger or sale, of some hundred and thirty companies to make the new company hold another holding company and four operating companies with the other holding company controlling the New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey Group. As the case dragged on the trustees continued to follow a policy, started early, of selling off many of the properties of the old system which 78 did not fit the plan as presented to the Commission. Finally, in December, 1945, the courts released the reorganized company from the proceedings and the Hopson era was over.

The company which emerged from the sorting of the wreckage. General Public Utilities, bore little resemblance to the old Associated System. Nearly $400,000,000 of water had been removed, mostly from the top; only two holding companies remained; and only forty-six companies 79 were included. Still the Tecurities and Exchange Commission pressed for divestment. By 1947 the system was reduced to 26 companies operating in three states and the Philippines. Three years later the company had been reduced still further. It had been forced to divest all its holdings in New York--the manner will be described later--and held properties only in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and the Philippines. By 1950 Hopson's utility empire and its successor had run their course

The story of the effect of the manipulation of the Associated Gas and Electric System in New York State is larvely the history of the New York State Electric and Gas Corporation. They both traced their origins to the Ithaca Gas Light Company but the New York State Company probably has a better claim to that distinction since, when Associated Gas and Electric was formed in 1907, the Ithaca Company re-81 mained intact as a member of the system. The development of the Ithaca Company then is the story to be told.

Though the men who created Associated Gas and Electric were the same men who had an interest in the Ithaca company the latter company's character did not change much, beyond a gradual gaining of new business within its franchise area, thereby. In 1915, still maintaining its basic character, it was among the largest companies in the New S2 York holdings of Associated. Three years later the first important change was made as Associated's holdings in New York, including the Homer and Cortland Gas Light Company, the Ithaca Gas Light Company, and the Norwich Gas and Electric Company, were merged, with Ithaca Gas Light the surviving company, and renamed the New York State Gas and 83 Electric Corporation.

With the coup of 1922 Hopson and Mange gained control of Associated and from that point the picture in New York changed rapidly. Hopson and his partner spread their attention throughout the country but they did not neglect the home state. They bought small local companies all over the state with principle interest in the central area. The method which was most often used seems to have been the purchasing of a controlling interest in a small company and then the filing of an application to the Public Service Commission, for a merger with one of the nucleus companies.

The chief nucleus company was the former Ithaca Gas Light Company, which had become, in 1918, the New York State Gas and Electric Corporation. As the process went on the company's name was changed twice becoming in March, 1928, the New York State Electric Corporation and, 84 in August, 1929, the New York State Electric and Gas Corporation. This nucleus merged, between 1926 and 1930, Moravia Electric Light, Heat and Fower Company, Windham Valley Electric Company, Georgetown Electric Lighting Company, Tusten Light and Power Company, Wallkill Valley Electric Light and Fower Company, Morris Light and Power Corporation, Delaware and Otsego Light and Power Company, and Kastern New York Electric and Gas Company. In the same period New York State Electric and Gas purchased fourteen additional companies of which the most important were the Binghamton Light, Heat and Power Company, Lockport Light, Heat and Power Company and Western New York Gas and 85 Electric Corporation. Thus in the four years to 1930 over twenty companies were swallowed up.

Other nuclei used by the Associated System were the New York Central Electric Corporation which merged five and purchased three small companies from 1925 to 1927; the Empire Gas and Electric Company which merged three and bought two companies in 1927 and 1929; Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation which merged one company in 1926, one in 1927, and six in January, 1929, and the Lake Ontario Fower Corporation which merged three and purchased two companies in 1927, 1928 and 1931. Thus, including New York State Electric and Gas in the accounting, the Associated System acquired, for and through its five central companies, forty-nine Electric properties in the State of New 86 York in the years 1925 to 1951.

The collapse of dopson's empire did not materially effect the New York Company for some time. Everything went on much as mefore and when Gen ral Public Utilities emerged from pankruptcy in 1945

-30-

New York State Gas and Electric was one of its principal operating properties. However the Securities and Exchange Commission/ continued to press for divestment. In 1944 New York State Electric and Gas Company's interest in the Patchogue Company had been sold and in 1947 and 1949 General Fublic Utilities, in complying with diveate ment orders, sold the Rochester Gas and Electric Company and the Ganada Power Corporation to the public and disposed of its interest in Staten Island Edison to Consolidated Edison of New York. Most imnortant was the sale of the entire 880,000 shares hald in New York State Gas and Electric to about 15,000 investors. And the directors of that company proudly announced "We now embark on a new chapter in the history of the company as one of the major independently owned 97 electric and gas utility companies in the country."

Obviously the service pattern in New York, especially in the western and central areas, is as it is today as a nearly direct result of the operations of Associated Gas and Electric and its successor company as modified by the activities and orders of governmental regulative bodies and general economic conditions. Moreover, if it is possible to assume that the pouring of financial support into a company or the drawing of excessive revenues out of it has a direct effect on quality of service, financial position, and rates enarged by that company, an examination of the effects of control and manipulation by the holding company provides an effective test of the value of its connection to its operating subsidiary.

Testifying before a committee of the House of Representatives in April, 1935, F. S. Burroughs, a vice-president of Associated Cas and Electric, maintained that

The holding company has financed for or advanced to the New York State Electric and Gas Corporation more than $28,000,000 The New York State Electric and Gas Corporation is the result of the merger and consolidation of 156 meparate and distinct independent companies. Many of these companies were amall, inefficient, and financially incapable of adequately providing secessary facilities for the territories they undertook to serve. The elimination of a multiplicity of small independent corporations, each with its own local managment and organization, and frequently each with its own small, inefficient source of power supply and replacement with one large strong corporation with centralized and sfficient management and the economies resulting from interconnection, has been accompanied by a very meterial reduction in the unit cost of operation and this has been passed on to the consuming public in the form of a steadily recurring reduction in rates.

This uses indeed seem beneficial and the New York State Public Service Gommission had earlier agreed that, "management, construction, service, interbuying and selling, suditing, material purchasing, and like services honestly and efficiently performed by one central organization

"When those who own and control the holding company or the operating utilities also own and control various auxiliary and affiliated corporations and companies, it becomes possible to undermine the operating utilities, to dissipate their profits and surplus and so to impair their financial standing as to destroy their ability to raise funds for their local needs. el00

Evidence is ample that Hoyson used ais service companies for personal gain and that he billed the operating companies almost twice over 101 More specifically, the New York State for the services performed. Public Service Commission, on investigating, found that over $7,000,000 had been paid out for system services in 1931-32, the value of which, on the basis of uncontradicted evidence, was much less; that employees of operating companies were encouraged to use much of their working time in solling System securities; and that the whole system had raised the cost of production thereby making the establishment of 102 In fact part of the indictreasonable rates extremely difficult. ment against liopson in 1940 was that he prevented his customers from 103 getting proper rate reductions.

compares favorably with the rates of other New York utilities; In 1935 its typical rate was $5.65 and, through gradual reductions, it had been lowered, by 1952, to $4.01. New York Edison, later part of Consolidated Edison of New York, charged $3,55 in the former and $4.44 in the latter year. The published rate of Long Island Lighting was So.25 in 1935 and $4.64 in 1952. The only major utility in New York which has consistently far undersold New York State Electric and Gas has been the predecessor companies of Nisgara Mohawk and that company itself. In 1935 the typical 100 kwh rate of these companies was $4.31 104 and in 1952 it had been reduced to $3.44. The New York State avorage for the 100 km rate in 1935 was $5.37 and in 1952 it was $4.23. while the national average was h.67 for the former and $3.76 for the lattar year. The average for the whole Middla-Atlantic area in the same years was $5.17 and $4.15 respectively. This average was exceeded in 1935 only by the West-South-Central area, with a rate of $5.24, and 105 in 1952 by the New England area, with a rate of $4.29.

When it is remembered that the Middle-Atlantic and New England areas have, until very recently, been the most densely populated in the United States, and have continually been favored with important hydro-electric resources and with the most modern and efficient steam plants, it seems reasonable to assume that the emplanation for these high rates must be sugget in other areas than those of conditions of demand or the production problems of the area. It is true that there is an great poverament power development in the northeast, but it is sign true that the amount of power for residential use produced at government rates in federal projects, even so late as 1952, is not sufficient to explain the differential between the National and the New York average rate. In the light of the Utility Corporations investigation, which tends to show a concentration of financial manipulation and ampire building activities in the Middle Atlantic-New England area though it be no means shows a lack of such activities in other areas as well, - Thus in view of the poor gapital atructure end poorly integrated france use areas which the manipulation produced, nowners more clearly than in the Absociated Gas and Electric area, it seems legitimate to give part of the credit for high average rates, in the arone where manipulation was particularly widespread, to the enduring effects of the gractices of the destructive types of empire builders, among whom H. C. Hopson must occupy the first rank.

The rate information for 193: is summarized from F.R.C., Electric Rate Survey - New York (Rate Series No. 2, State Report No. 45, rates of January 1, 1935), j-13; that for 1952 is summarized from F.P.C., Typical Residential Electric Bills Cities of 2500 Popula- tion and More (Washington: Federal Power Commission, 1948 -), 1952, pp. 40-14.

It would seem that contrelization of management, control, and service areas in a regulated public utilities system are beneficial, at least up to a point of diminishing returns, wherever that may be, and thus that the elimination of the small, poorly equipped utility is to be sought. Therefore, this result of the operations of Associated Gas and Electric may be laudable. However the evident waste, misman gement, and greed, for power if not for money, in the story told nere would appear cause enough to question the methods used by the prompters of the system despite the relative preiseworthiness of the resulting consolidated organization, achieved largely by public policy. in the long run.

tween firms within the system for exchange of stocks and mergers of assets. In addition, there are contracts concerning the sales of real estate. Other contracts are agreements for the construction or sale of generating facilities, transmission or distribution of electrical energy, and of franchises.

Some of these contracts are actually composed of several agreements between banks, operating companies and holding companies or service companies. Many of these legal instruments are dependent on the execution of other legal papers, which, together, make up a single complex transaction. Some of these contracts are accompanied by supporting papers, such as correspondence, franchise authority, affidavits, certificates and resolutions of boards of directors.

Contracts included on the list, but not forwarded to the State Historical Society Of Wisconsin, are enumerated separately on page 79 of the shelf list.
